LIVESTOCK ASSOCIATION

Congress Asked by it for Needed Legislation

Los Angles Jan. 28—The American National Livestock Association met in final session today It was apparent before the assembling that the minority, representing the Colorado cattle and horse growers aassociation, would make a strong fight in opposition to the report of the committee on resolution inpreference to the policy of the federal administration of public domain. Resolutions, were adopted by an unanimous vote of the committee to provide for memorializing congress in face of the law to prohibit any railroad company advancing interstate rates, fares,charges except on approval of the interstate commerce commission, to enact a law to provide for a minimum speed limit for the transportation of livestock and other perishable freight not less than twenty miles per hour. Hearty endorsement was given a bill pending in congress, known as the Culberson-Smith car and transportation bill. Railroads were requested to adopt reasonable rules and regulations with respect to granting return transportation for attendants of livestock shipments. Modification of the tariff relations with other countries is asked in view of increasing the export of American meats and livestock. President Roosevelt is thanked for his efforts in behalf of the livestock industry.

Recognizing that James Wilson, secretary of agriculture has served the country faithfully and with great efficiency and that the policies which he has persued are of lasting benefit to the farmers and stockraisers of the entire country the secretary is thanked, as also is Gifford Pinchot, chief forester, for his work toward the preservation of the forests.

Former Senator Ammons, of Littleton, Colo. offered a substitue for those portions of the resolutions referring to federal control of public domain, favoring the passage of laws for the adequate protection of timber of all public lands, the establishment of a national policy which will encourage the growth of timber on private lands, cession of public lands to states in which they lie, putting timber on the free list, and other restriction of the forest service to the growth and protection of timber.

Denver was selected as the next place of meeting of the National Live Stock Association. The following officers were unanimously re-elected: President, H. A. Jastro of Bakersfied, Calif. First vice President, Murdo Mackenzie, Trinidad, Colo. J. M. Carry, Cheyenne, Second Vice President, succeeding M. K. Parsons, Salt Lake. HOUSE PASSES TAX MEASURE

Emergency Bill Now on Discussion in Senate

Salem, Jan. 28—By a unanimous vote, the emergency measure to solve the state tax problem passed the house this morning and reached the third reading in the senate under a suspension of the rules. The senate may go into committee of the whole this afternoon to discuss the bill. The only complaint against the bill is that too much haste is being made. A bill was introduced for the establishment of a branch insane asylum in eastern Oregon. Representative Orton withdrew the two measures intended to reenact laws, taxing the gross earnings of corproations, which laws were enacted by people. His explanation is that the introduction of the measures might interfere with the deliberations of the supreme court in passing on the constitutionality of the initiative and referendum.

MEASURE TO GAG NEWSPAPERS

Bill Again Before the Washington Legislature

Olympia, Jan. 28—The "newspaper gag" bill, which created a bitter fight in the legislature two years ago and caused statewide criticism, will come up again this session only in a modified form. Senator Graves of Spokane is now framing up the measure.

The bill aims to prohibit the publication of all salacious and indecent divorce and seduction cases and detailed accounts of murders, lynchings and executions. It eliminates political crimes where one of the parties is in public life. It also prevents the publishers of newspapers accepting advertisements or publishing detailed accounts of cases in the police and superior courts.

Senator Graves' modification of the bill two years ago will be to give the editorial section of the paper a freer rein than was provided in the old measure, which was defeated by a good majority. Certain advertisements will be given special attention.

The northwestern district, consisting of Washington, Oregon, Nevada and practically all of California, has been in the joint charge of engineers Henny and E. G. Hopson, with headquarters at Portland. This district has been divided and after February 1, C. H. Swigart, now in charge of the Tieton project in Washington, will have supervision of the state of Washington, Hopson retaining the supervision of Oregon, Nevada and California.

Clasp her glove and hunt her fan,
Show that he's her handy man.

Other women see the trap,
Want to give the chit a slap,
But the helpless woman weeps,
And before her all men sweeps.

Then it's up to me to fly,

MARGARET ILLINGTON, WHO LEAVES THE STAGE AT THE HEIGHT OF HER CAREER.

The determination of Margaret Illington, the well known emotional actress, to retire permanently from the stage caused general regret. Few young actresses have met with more pronounced success than Miss Illington, who has been behind the footlights only about seven years. She reached the height of popular favor in Henri Bernstein's "The Thief," but the role was a trying one and after playing it about a year Miss Illington collapsed and decided to quit the stage.

BALLINGER FOR THE CABINET

Taft Will Insist On His Acceptance

Washington, D. C., Jan. 28—It is now firmly believed by close friends of President-elect Taft that Judge R. A. Ballinger will be prevailed upon to accept the secretaryship of the interior in the new cabinet. Taft is very anxious that Ballinger shall succeed Secretary Garfield for he desires to have a practical western man at head of this department, and feels that Ballinger, particularly in view of his experience as commissioner of the general land office, is especially equipped for this office. Ballinger, as is as well known, is not seeking cabinet honors, and is not after this appointment but according to Taft's friends, the president-elect is very insistent that Ballinger shall waive his personal objections and accept.

BRINGS ACTION FOR SALVAGE

Suit Filed by The Charles Nelson Company

Seattle, Jan. 28—The Charles Nelson Company, owner of the steam schooner Charles Nelson, has filed a libel suit in the federal court against the four-masted schooner Willis A. Holden.

The Holden, a vessel of 1,118 tons, with a freight charter aboard worth $12,000 and a cargo of lumber valued a $15,000, sailed from Seattle on December 12, 1907, bound for Sahnghai. She was overtaken by a gale, in which she lost her rudder and part of her cargo. She was picked up by the Nelson drifting off the shore of Waddah island and towed to Port Townsend.

The Charles Nelson Company asks the court to award a suitable sum for salving the schooner.

MORBID CURIOUS TO SEE GUILLOTINE

Executions May Soon be Made Secret

Carpentras, France, Jan. 28—The second execution in France under the revival of the law of capital punishment took place here today, and althou the scenes accompanying it were less regretable than those attending the quadruple execution at Bethune, January 1, they were very unplesant and will undoubtedly hasten parlimentary action toward mking future executions private. The guillotine was erected on a public square alongside the prison. The locality was cordoned with soldiers who effectually blocked all the streets, but an impatient crowd which had assembled during the night demanded that it be given a chance to witness the execution.

Some people climbed up on ladders, from which they kept the others informed of the details of the proceedings, while the windows of the houses overlooking the square were jummed with people. The condemned man, Remy Denvers, who had cruelly shot an aged farmer and his wife was first made aware of his fate by the yells of the crowd that surrounded the prison. He came out of the prison yard with livid face and staring eyes, and it was necessary to make use of force to get him to the guillotine and his head in position for the fall of the blade.

FARMERS BUILD WAREHOUSES

May Erect New Ones at Astoria and Seattle

Dayton Wash., Jan. 28 Local shippers estimate that 90 per cent of last year's grain crop was sold to independent dealers, whereas in former years the so-called big dealers handled practically all the grain produced in the county. Prominent farmers say the change is due to the efforts of the farmers' union to sell their grain independently of the big dealers who operate terminal warehouses at Portland and Sound points. An effort will be made next month at Spokane to interest the farmers of the Northwest in building terminal warehouses at Astoria and Seattle, to be operated by the producers. Half of last year's crop still remains in the warehouse here and at Turner and Huntsville. In the neighborhood of 75,000 bushels of barley will be shipped to Portland and Seattle this week. Dealers say the million bushels stored here will be moved to the coast in the spring.

POSTAL SAVINGS MEASURE

Bill Presented to United States Senate

Washington, Jan. 28- The postal savings bank and the omnibus claims bills are before the senate for amendment, but no subtantial progress was made on either measure. An amendment was made to the postal bill limiting to $500 the amount of the deposits of any one person, and fixing the rate of interest to be paid at 2 per cent., with the understanding that the amendment would be subject to further change by the senate.

Senator Carter, in charge of the measure, announced that he would keep it before the senate on every opportunity until it was disposed of. Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, in an extended speech opposed the bill. Senator Carter claimed that Mr. Heyburn's opposition was not directed to practical difficulties.

Senator Cummins laid before the senate his amendent providing that postal saving funds may be deposited in any national, state or territorial bank, under certain restrictions, and fixing the rate of interest to be paid at 4½ per cent.

FATHER JOHN OF CRONSTADT

How a Famous Russian Priest was Revered

Although a broad minded man and a scoffer at superstition, the late Father John of Cronstadt, Russia, by his zeal and devotion to the church made such a deep impression on the people of Russia that he was universally known there as the holy seer and miracle worker of the empire.

A mediaeval spirit pervaded the Russian church, and largely the life of the people, at the beginning of his ministry in 1855, but by his unique methods, his life and his personality he intrenched himself firmly in the hearts of the Russians. His fame spread, healing powers were ascribed to him, the raising from the dead of a girl in a cancer hospital at St. Petersburg was attributed to him, and his house soon became the Mecca for pilgrimages by the faithful.

It was not merely among the lowly, however, that Father John was revered and adored. The late Emperor Alexander III. admired the sterling qualities of the priest and constantly honored and befriended him. It was for him that he sent when he lay dying, and it was from his hands that the last sacraments of the church were administered. Father John also appeared as a conspicuous figure at the solemnities attending the coronation of the present czar

The faith which the present empress placed in Father John was shown when she made the pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Seraphim to pray for the desired heir to the Russian throne.

The surname of the dead priest was Sergieff, but it was known to only a few of his followers, he being Father John to virtually all.

The ignorance and the religious fanaticism of the Russian peasantry are illustrated in a striking manner by the almost blasphemous veneration of which Father John, much against his will, was made the object. Some time ago a peasant in the government of Kostroma wrote a hymn in honor of Father John, placing him almost on an equality with the persons of the Trinity. The Kronstadt priest wrote a severe letter to the peasant, rebuking him for his blasphemy, but this had no effect, so he was compelled to go in person to Kostroma in order to put a stop to the growth of a sect which was being founded to worship him. This is only one case out of many. There are cases in which peasants openly maintain their conviction that Father John was the Christ, the reincarnation of the divine spirit. One aged pilgrim who holds fast this belief when he was arrested and threatened with punishment declared with enthusiasm that he would gladly die for his savior. Portraits of Father John are frequently used as icons and are venerated in the same way.

Culinary Conceits.

Cheap cuts of meat can be served palatably in stews and croquettes.

To bake pancakes without greasing the griddle add a tablespoonful of butter or half a cup of cream to the batter.

When making a pea soup, if the peas are boiled a little while separately with a pinch of common washing soda they will be found to cook much more quickly. They do not need soaking.

Pare some large apples and core them, fill the centers with chopped figs, cover with sugar, put into a deep baking dish, add a little water and bake, basting well from time to time. Serve hot or cold with cream.

State Lines.

Washington is the only one of the Pacific states in which coking coal has been found.

The state of North Carolina is the most notable in the country for the variety of precious stones produced.

N O labor case which has engaged the attention of the courts in a long time has excited so much comment and controversy as that of the Buck Stove and Range company of St Louis against Samuel Gompers and other officials of the American Federation of Labor.

The trouble between the company and some of its men, which has resulted in the sentences for contempt of court passed on Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, took place on Aug. 29, 1906. The company ran an open shop and had an agreement with the Iron Molders' Union of North America by which all disputes were to be referred to a committee for settlement. Nevertheless a strike occurred, and as the attempt to tie up the plant failed the International Union of Metal Polishers declared a boycott against the company and its products and inserted its name in the "unfair" list of the union official organ. This action was indorsed by the Central Trades and Labor union and the Metal Trades council of St. Louis.

JUDGE DANIEL THEW WRIGHT.

In November, 1906, the American Federation of Labor held its annual convention at Indianapolis and ordered the inclusion of the Buck Stove and Range company in the "We don't patronize" list of the American Federationist, the official organ of the federation. It is also asserted by the National Association of Manufacturers that misleading statements were sent out by the American federation.

The Buck company's prosecution of the officials of the federation began in 1907 in consequence of their publication in the American Federationist of the name of the company in the "We don't patronize" list. The original action was a test case, wherein it was sought to enjoin the officials from such publication

MISS CLAIRE WRIGHT.

On Dec 17, 1907, Judge Gould of the federal court of the District of Columbia issued a temporary injunction sought by the Buck company against the American Federation of Labor. He forbade the latter to prosecute a boycott against the company or to place its name on its "unfair" or "We don't patronize" list. In his judgment he found for the statements of fact as presented by the Buck company. The injunction was afterward made permanent. It was for violation of this injunction that Judge Daniel Thew Wright of the same court imposed sentences of imprisonment on Mr. Gompers, Mr Mitchell and Mr Morrison, they being president, vice president and secretary respectively of the federation. The terms were a year for Mr. Gompers, nine months for Mr Mitchell and six months for Mr. Morrison. They appealed from the order and were released on bail bonds. It as quite natural an order committing them to imprisonment should produce a sensation, even though the appeal which they took from the order prevented their incarceration at present in jail.

It is believed that it will be at least six months before final determination of the case is reached. Mr. Taft will then be president, and it may become his duty to consider whether or not the order of the court, in case of its confirmation, should be modified.

Judge Wright has had a very interesting career. He was appointed to his position in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by President Roosevelt He had been affiliated with labor problems during the latter part of his legal practice in Cincinnati, and most of his fights have been for the protection of labor interests

While a judge in Ohio he rendered several decisions favorable to labor one of the most important of which was when he issued an injunction against one of the largest manufacturing companies restraining it from using union labels when no union labor was employed by it.

Judge Wright was born in Cincinnati O., in 1864 His father and grandfather were lawyers before him, his father, Daniel Thew Wright, serving on the supreme bench of Ohio from 1873 to 1875 and his grandfather, Daniel Wright, being one of the first lawyers at the Ohio bar.

Judge Wright's grandfather taught Longfellow while he was a student working his way through college, and his father later became a pupil of Longfellow at Harvard.

Judge Wright successively held the offices of town solicitor and mayor of Riverside, his home town; second and first prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county and judge of the court of common pleas, being in that post from 1892 to 1897. He was married in 1887 and has three daughters. One of them, Miss Claire Wright, is a debutante of the Washington season.

While he was a judge of the common pleas court George B. Cox of Cincinnati sent a committee of three politicians to make a request of Judge Wright. What the request was has not been made public, but the judge sent back word that Mr. Cox could go to the bowwows for all he cared. As a result Judge Wright won himself friends among the independents, but lost the support of the Republican organization and a chance to succeed himself upon the expiration of his term.

Until his appointment to his present post Judge Wright had no other office after his retirement from the common pleas bench Old residents of Cincinnati recall that in the flood period of 1883-4 Daniel Thew Wright worked night and day in a skiff towing the residents of Riverside and their household goods out of the danger zone. Again, during the Cincinnati riots, he volunteered with his brother Rogers "for the defense of the city," particularly resenting the attack on the courthouse by the mob, and served for several days as a member of an artillery battery stationed to guard that building.

John Mitchell, vice president of the federation, is a member of the executive committee of the industrial department of the National Civic federation and of the industrial peace commission established under the act of congress passed when President Roosevelt devoted his Nobel prize money to the establishment of peace and equity in industry.

Daniel J. Keefe, a labor leader who stands close to President Roosevelt and President Elect Taft, thinks Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison will never serve out their sen-

CARNIVAL IN PERRY'S HONOR

British to Celebrate Their Defeat on Lake Erie

In the interest of peace and tranquillity between two great world powers Great Britain and America—plans are being perfected to invite the English government to take part in the commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the defeat of the British in one of the notable conflicts of the war of 1812, the victory of Perry on Lake Erie.

Arrangements are being made by the state of Ohio to promote a grand peace carnival and joint industrial exhibition to be held on the island of Put-in Bay in 1913. A commission has been appointed by the governor to formulate a program, and this winter the state legislature will be asked to make an appropriation which will put the matter in concrete form.

It is now proposed to have Canada, through England, share equally in the plans, with a view to creating a further tie of friendship between the two countries.

Divers' Suits

A diver's suit is weighted with 165 pounds of lead.

Greyhound Puppies.

Greyhound puppies have the reputation of being the most mischievous of the mischievous brotherhood of puppies. They inherit this to some extent, for a large percentage of greyhounds when grown up are inveterate thieves and chicken killers, not from any particular vice, but because "it is their nature to," and they have not the moral sense which other dogs possess.

Sweden's Minerals.

Much of Sweden's wealth lies in her wonderful deposits of iron, which enable her to produce every form of iron and finished steel. In one section alone she has more than 500,000,000 tons of ore above ground.

Artificial Butter.

In Denmark artificial butter is made by stirring a little salt and sugar into cocoanut fat, then kneading it with milk containing lactic acid bacteria yolk of egg and a coloring substance.

White In Siam.

White is the color used for mourning in Siam.

While it is advisable that the assessed valuations of property be made sufficiently high so that the rate of taxation can be kept at a low figure, the condition caused in several of the counties of the state by the recent decision of the supreme court regarding the apportionment of the state tax, shows that Assessor Cornelius acted wisely in not increasing the assessed valuations too much until the exact effect of the state law has been ascertained.

The question of improved public highways is attracting more and more attention each year as the people now realize that money expended in building roads on good grades is a paying investment. Clatsop county is probably one of the most difficult ones in the state in which to construct modern highways on account of the numerous streams, which requires bridges, and on account of the heavily timbered sections. Nevertheless this county is making as good progress in the line of road improvements as is any other county in Oregon and if the present movement is continued as it undoubtedly will be, there will within the coming two or three years by a highway passable at all seasons of the year leading to each section of the county.

Representative Willett, in his assualt on the president, whom he likened to a gargoyle, must have had some hidden meaning. Judging from the attention which the use of the comparison has excited, there is some doubt as to what he was really driving at when he called the president a gargoyle. A gargoyle, plainly speaking, is a decorated spout, and its function was to carry the rain water from the roofs of mediaeval cathedrals clear of the walls. It is hardly conceivable that Willet mean to imply that the president was a spouter; perhaps he has been so afflicted by Mr. Roosevelt's big stick that the later figures in his mind as one of the fanciful creatures with which the old-time stone cutters loved to adorn the gargoyles, and which resembled nothing on earth or beneath the earth.

The business of land stealing seems to be going on briskly, if the reports from Washington are to be trusted. According to a dispatch $120,000,000 worth of public property has been fraudulently acquired within the past two years. If that is really the case, it would seem that much of the past sums annually expended for secret service salaries is wasted. What is the use of having an army of spies if they cannot be depended upon to head off such depredations?

Henry Clews, whose observations on financial and industrial affairs are accepted as authoritative, says: "For 1909 I am an optimist," and bases his assertion upon the gradual recuperation in the world's money market, the adequate returns to farmers from last year's crops, the prospects that there will be no radical legislative action to disturb commercial relations, and the indications that speculative activities will not be developed to such an extent as to inject fictitious and unhealthful prices into the stock markets. In other words, the situation dictates a healthful, normal condition of affairs, with legitimate business relieved from the fictitious and speculative elements which produced last year's halting and depression. Under such conditions, with the significant influences at work which tend to promote development in the Pacific northwest, there is every reason to believe that new records will be established in many branches of activity, with an advancement in the material interests of this section that will mark an epoch in its growth in population and wealth, says the Oregon Tradesman.

France had practical automobiles before this country caught up with the rear of the procession. High power cars and motor cycles were spinning over the highroads of the continent while Americans were trying to run their machines with the wheels in the air more than half the time. It is only lately that the product of American shops has approached anywhere near the excellence of French machines. In navigating the air the French are again in the lead as a nation. America has developed a few geniuses in this line, but France has an army of plodding experimenters and capitalists who believe to the verge of fanaticism in the practicability of the human bird.

Interest in novelty is ever keen in France. But it is the temper of the Frenchman to want to develop whatever interests him. The fad of the individual becomes the craze of the many, and the next step is reducing the madness to method. French capital is now backing aerial navigation companies and financing the experiments of inventors. The air must be conquered, and that can only be done by organized attack. So the French mind argues, and France will doubtless lead in the airship industry, just as she did in the exploitation of the horseless carriage idea.

Some day there will have to be an investigation to find out whether that snake bite remedy laid in by wholesale for the African expedition bears the W. C. T. U. label or one that calls for the real thing in "pisen."

Last year the aliens brought $70,000,000 to this country and carried away $700,000,000. At that rate of exchange the game over here won't be worth an immigrant's risking $100 to get into very long.

The unveiling of an army of bad spellers in our universities ought not to stir up the knockers of higher education, considering the aptitude of those young malefactors on the ball field.

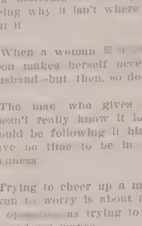
HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

After a man has been married six months he doesn't know but he has been married all his life



People who are bound to talk all the time ought to fend for themselves by hitching their jaws to the motor end of somebody's payroll

A man can't find a thing where he thinks he left it last summer or some other time definiteness of date not being material, but the pertinent point being why it isn't where he thinks he put it

When a woman is a good cook she soon makes herself necessary to her husband—but then, so does the grocer.

The man who gives good advice doesn't really know it is good or he would be following it himself and so have no time to be in the advising business

Trying to cheer up a man naturally given to worry is about as gratifying an operation as trying to sweep back the sad sea waves.

When a man would rather work than marry a rich girl she certainly must be a hard proposition.

The Strenuous Life.

Something doing, I should say,
Every minute of the day.
If you want to come in strong
Like the hero of the song
And to loudly ring the gong,
That's the way.

Up and at 'em like a shot
And be Johnny on the spot.
Like a hero push your game
On to victory and fame.
And thereby you'll win the same
Like as not.

Every moment you must tax
With some hard and telling whacks
As a drummer in the band.
Pound away, your work expand
With a hammer in your hand
Or an ax.

Sitting round will never bring
To you any blessed thing.
In an easy rocking chair
Splendid castles in the air
You may build with maidens fair
On a string.

Action, action, that's the trick,
Something doing that will stick.
It's the way to win success,
Fame and fortune, nothing less,
By the lightning through express,
Double quick.

'THE LIEUTENANT AND THE COWBOY."

If the people of Astoria appreciate genuinely good performance, a really igh-grade dramatic production, they vill not fail to attend in large numbers next Sunday night, when Messrs. Pelton & Smutzer present a plendid company in a new and sucessful military drama of the west, entiled "Tho Lieutenant and the Cowboy" or which a complete scenic equipment s carried for each of the three acts. The play is unquestionably one of the most intensely interesting of recent years, giving as it does not only a true and realistic story of life in a western ort, but a beautiful romance and quite bit of wholesome humor as well. It s a play long to be remembered with a great dael of pleasure.

MEASURE FOR GOOD ROADS

To be Submitted to Wasington State Legislature

Olympia, Jan. 28—W. W. Wilshire has prepared a bill for introduction at the present session of the legislature providing for a system of building country roads on the local improvements system followed in the cities for municipal improvements. His bill will be placed in the hands of the legislative committee of the State Good Roads Association. This committee is to meet at Olympia in a few days with the committees of the legislature and the state highway commissioner to consider road legislation.

Mr. Wilshire's plan is for the construction of local highways under the immediate direction and supervision, not of the county commissioners, nor of the state highway commissioner, but of a committee of supervisors in the improvement district.

The bill provides that the county commissioners on receipt of a petition signed by two-thirds of the property owners whose property fronts on the proposed highway, for the construction of the road shall notify the state highway commissioner. The highway commissioner shall investigate and determine whether the road should be built under the state aid plan or the local improvement plan. If the local improvement plan is selected. It is made mandatory with the commissioners to proceed with it accordingly. The first preliminray is the calling of a meeting in the district of the property owners, and the selection by them from their number of a committee of three supervisors. These with the county engineer, will survey and locate the highway and prepare the assessment roll. Assessment up to 50 per cent. of the value of the property is permitted. Hearings on the assessment are to be held before the county commissioners. Then the approval of the roll, work proceeds. The supervisors select, not from their own number, an inspector of work and material.

The bill provides that the immediate payment plan or the ten year installment plan, carrying with itthe insurance on bonds may be adopted. The financial machinery of the county is used in the issuance of bonds, if necessary, and in any instance in the collection of the assessments and the payment of the expense but the letting of contracts and the supervision of the work is placed entirely within the hands of the committtee of supervisors.

In pat, Mr. Wilshire, in drafting the bill, has followed the Indiana statute on the same subject, but has made the bill harmonize with the existing state aid an other state road laws. He also has borrowed liberally from the local improvement system in vogue in Seattle.

DEBATE WAS WON BY ASTORIA TEAM

But Tillamook Team Deserves Much Praise

The Astoria High school team defeated the Tillamook team on Wednesday evening but the defeated team was far from being disgraced. The Astoria theatre was well filled by the pupils of the schools, their parents and others who showed their appreciation of the debaters by generous applause and the visitors were greeted as well as the members of the home team. Charles H. Abercrombie acted as chairman of the evening and the question discussed was: Resolved—That Municipalities should own and operate all public utilities. Rev. W. S. Gilbert, John H. Whyte and Gustaf A. Hemple acting as judges. The Astoria team consisted of Miss Mary Kelly, Alex Sigurdson and Lawrence Dineen while on the Tillamook team were Miss Eliza Dawson, Miss Helen Biby and Miss Nellie Hannenkratt. Both teams showed that they had given the subject considerable study, the Astoria team having the affimative of the subject and the visitors the negative. While the judges unanimously favored the home team, and justly, yet the Tillamook team advanced many arguments in support of their side but the members showed considerable nervousness on account of appearing in a theatre in a strange city and before a strange audience. At the conclusion of the debate the visitors were given a banquet in the I. O. O. F. hall and the best of good feeling existed.

MAY OPERATE THE REED MILL

Plant Near Rainier to be Started Up

Rainier, Or., Jan. 28—John Patterson of the Patterson Lumber Company, has sold out his interest in that concern and is now negotiating with the owners of the Reed mill, situated just above the city. Mr. Patterson says Mr. Reed, one of the owners, has accepted his proposition, and that it only remains for Dr. Mossman, of Portland, and T. S. Lippy, of Seattle, to do the same, when the mill will at once be put in shape for operation. This mill has been closed for some time. Messrs. Ward and Beck have purchased 20,000,000 feet of timber from the W. W. Johnson Lumber Company, of Portland. This timber is located two miles above Raisier and is now being logged by the above parties.

ICE LEAVING UPPER COLUMBIA

River Will Soon be Clear of Obstruction

The Dalles, Or., Jan. 28 Indications are that the Columbia will be cleared of ice and open to navigation by tomorrow at noon. Ice commenced going out rapidly here yesterday and a strong Chinook wind is hasten ing the breaking up today. The ice in the river opposite The Dalles all disappeared yesterday with the exception of that floating down. At Crates Point, to miles down, the ice is rapidly breaking today and in all probability will be all gone tomorrow. Big blocks of ice are floating down from above. The Regulator and open river docks and wharf boats are being repaired and got ready for use again.

I have the agency for the Truscott Motors, both two and four cycle with either make and break or jump spark. These engines are well known all over America as Truscott is one of the largest builders in the country. Their motors have always taken first prize at all expositions. I wish to especially recommend the 2 cylinder, four cycle 6 H. P. for fishermen, weight is 310 pounds and turns up 750 revolutions per minute.

I am agent for the Wolverine engine also and have a good stock of these well known, reliable engines on hand.

FINISH WORK ON NORTH BANK

Trains Will be Running Not Later Than March 1

Work on the construction of the North Bank road to Spokane has been completed, with the exception of the steel viaduct across Box canyon, and officials of the North Bank think the road will operate over its own tracks to Spokane by March 1. The freight and passengers department have begun to prepare their tariffs for the entire line, so that they will be ready to operate as soon as the construction department gives the word.

When President Hill of the Great Northern was last here he said that the Pasco-Spokane line would probably be running by February 1. The cold weather of the present month has compelled the construction department to stop work on the steel viaduct, however, and it may be a month before it is completed. This viaduct is 1246 feet long and 238 feet high and is one of the heaviest pieces of work of its kind in the northwest. As soon as it is completed the entire line from Pasco to Marshall will be coupled up.

Although the track laying is completed there still remain some roundouses and repair buildings for terminals, including those at La Monte, to be finished.

Box Canyon, where the last viaduct is being built, is between Kahlotus and at Snake River Junction. The line will join the main line of the Northern Pacific at Marshall, six miles west of Spokane as the terminal differences between the railroads and the city of Spokane have not been adjusted sufficiently to allow the North Bank to secure a right of way into the city for its own tracks.

From every present outlook the North Bank will begin operating trains through to Spokane on its own line some tme in March.

CHANGE AT THE BAKERONIAN

At the Bakeronian, commencing tomorrow evening, there will be an entire change of performance. Miss May will sing another of Anna Held's greatest song hits and with the assistance of Mr. McEvoy will sung some comic opera successes. Beard the contortionist will do something that will make the audience talk. Prof. Fanzard assisted by Mlle Salina will introduce new cabinet and spirit tricks which everyone should see. Hendricks will talk to you in his inimitable manner. Miss Holland will render a new illustrated song and the moving pictures will be bright and amusing. Patronize the Bakeronian.

SERPENTS FALL FROM CLOUDS

Strange Freak of Nature at Golden Gate Park

San Francisco, Jan. 28—Thousands of tiny snakes poured from the clouds into Golden Gate Park during the storm on Monday, according to Park Superintendent McLaren. The superintendent and other attaches of the park declare that for several hours the walks of the big pleasure ground were covered with a wriggling mass of snakes, which fell from a dark cloud. After the downpour the snakes disappeared in the slush and mud. Secretary Frederick Healy in describing the ophidian precipitation said:

"We thought at first that they were worms or fish, but on inspection saw that they were really snakes, measuring from three to seven inches in length and averaging a quarter of an inch in thickness. We made no attempt to obtain any specimens."

The street committee has completed the examination of nearly all the streets which the street superintendent reported were in a dangerous condition and the committee will submit its recommendations to the council at the meeting on next Monday evening.

His business office will be on the third floor of the Corbett building where he will represent the business of his company and enlarge its score.

August Nelson, who has been engaged as a carpenter at Knappton for some time, died there of consumption on Wednesday after a short illness. His funeral will be held from Pohl's parlors on Friday and the interment will be in Greenwood cemetery. He was a native of Sweden, 40 years of age and leaves a widow and two children.

Swepson Morton was over from Knappton today on business and the complicity of his different duties at his home town are hard to fathom. Besides his duties at the mill he is judge, school clerk, notary public, agent for a half dozen insurance compaines, father confessor of the district and every time he comes to Astoria runs errands for the entire community.

Notification was received last night by headquarters of the thirteenth lighthouse district that Umatilla Reef lightship, No. 67, had gone adrift yesterday. It is supposed that the lightship made Port Angels, Wash., as she has power. The lighthouse inspector announces that she will be replaced as soon as possible, probably within a few days. In the meantime there will be no light to mark Umatilla Reef.

The steamer Grays Harbor, Captain Atfinson, which left San Francisco at 4 o'clock Saturday, arrived off Grays Harbor at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. Off Point Reyes the vessel encountered one of the worst storms in the Captain's many years' experience in coastwise sailing. Off Cape Mendocino, he sigthed two huge whirlpools, or water spouts, over 500 feet in eight, and it took all the tact and skill of the old navigator to save the vessel from being sucked to destruction.

The logging conditions on the Columbia river are firm. The inclemency of the weather for the past three weeks has permitted but few logs to go in the water. Red fir logs are averaging from $7 to $8.50, according to grade, while yellow fir logs are strong at $10. The supply is none too abundant. Cedar logs are bringing from $7 to $10 some loggers holding for $11. Logging conditions on Willapa Harbor were never better. The mills will be running as soon as the weather will permit. The supply of logs on hand is very small for this time of year. While prices are not high, the market is good for all classes of logs. Yellow fir is worth $7 to $10; cedar $9 to $11; spruce $7 to $12 and hemlock $7. No 1 and merchantable yellow logs are selling on Grays Harbor at $10, with a good demand. No. 2 logs are selling at $5.50. Spruce logs, camp run, $10, when sorted, No. 2 sells for $8 and No. ; 1 for $12. Cedar has no fixed price; is selling all the way from $8.50 to $11.

With just enough steam in her boilers to bring her off Fort Point, the steam schooner Tallac. Captain Hansen reached San Francisco Monday morning after a hard passage from Astoria, with 1755 tons of wheat and 250,000 feet of lumber. On the way down the coast the Tallac encountered the prevailing heavy weather and a cross sea of large proportions carried away a portion of her deckload. The oil fuel failed to circulate properly from the forward tanks and when the tanks aft had been exhausted the vessel was in a bad way. By careful calculation steam sufficient to get her through the Golden Gate was kept up and when she reached Fort Point she anchored, waiting for a tug to tow her up the bay.

As soon as the weather conditions will permit, it is expected the county surveyor and the viewers will complete the laying out of the route for the proposed road from Necanicum to the Tillamook county line. Much of the work was done before the holidays but since that time the weather has been too severe to accomplish anything. It is understood that an excellent grade has been found and one that will obviate the construction of at last one of the large bridges, which would have been necessary on the route as selected in the preliminary survey made about a year ago. Owing to the failure of the district, thru which this road runs, to make a special levy, it is not likely that any work on constructing the road will be done during the present year, but the preliminaries will probably be arranged so that contracts for clearing and grading can be awarded next spring.

Abney Pierson, the soldier who escaped from the post jail at Fort Stevens on Monday night has not been apprehended but a clue has been secured that may lead to his arrest. During Tuesday morning he appeared in the vicinity of the mill of the Hammond Lumber Company and entered a residence, during the absence of the residents and exchanged his drab clothing for the suit for a man who worked in the mill and left his suit that he ran away in in the room. In addition he took with him a watch that was in the vest pocket of the stolen clothing.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steam schooner F. S. Loop, with a partial cargo of lumber for San Francisco, has arrived down to Kanppton to finish.

The four masted schooner Fred J. Wood, with a cargo of lumber for San Pedro, was towed to sea today.

It was too rough for the steamer Sue H. Elmore to leave out for Tillamook this morning as she intends to take in tow the motor schooner Gerald C. to carry some passengers as there were many more applications for passage that she had accomodations to carry.

The steamer Breakwater, which was due down the river this morning, is disabled and is being towed back to Portland for repairs. As she was coming down last night the fog settled heavy and Captain Turner, the bar pilot in charge decided to anchor near Brookfield for safety. The conditions were so dense that it was impossible to know the exact location but soundings showed that there was sufficient water. A few hours later the vessel swung with the tide and her rudder struck the edge of the bank and sprung it so that it became useless and it will have to be repaired before she can leave out for Coos bay. The river tug Harvest Queen, which brought the ship Oregon down this morning is now towing her up to Portland, when the extent of her damage can be determined.

The steam schooner South Bay, with a cargo of lumber for San Pedro went to sea today.

The German steamship Alesia, with a general cargo for the Orient, has arrived down the river and will probably go to sea late this afternoon.

It is announced that the steamer Charles R. Spencer will start on the Portland-Astoria run again on May 1.

The steamer Miler will be withdrawn from the Cathlamet run at the last of the present month, temporarily, to receive some needed repairs. She will be off the run for about 10 day but will come back better equipped to handle the business than ever before.

The steam schooner Majestic, with a cargo of lumber for California, went to sea today.

The German ship Oregon, with a cargo of grain for Eruope, has arrived down the river and will go to sea at the first opportunity.

The four masted schooner Virginia, which is taking on 75,000 feet of lumber at Knappton for Califorin will be ready to go to sea on Saturday.

The British steamship Tymeric arrived in last evening for Comax, B. C. where she took on fuel coal. She is under charter to load lumber for Australia.

The German ship Oregon, with a cargo of grain for Europe, was towed too sea today.

The steamer Sue H. Elmore started out for Tillamook this morning but was compelled to turn back on account of the rough bar, much to the sorrow of her large list of passengers but if she had gone farther they probably would have been sorrier.

The six coasting vessels, that are laid up in the boneyard in Young's bay are expected to go into commission again in a short time as the rate on lumber is advancing and another 25 cent raise will be accepted by the owners.

The steamer Breakwater reached Portland late on Thursday night in tow of the Harvest Queen and it is expected that she will be placed on the dry dock at St. John's today to have her rudder repaired.

The steamer Lurline will continue leaving Astoria every evening for Portland and way landings taking freight and passengers at 7:00 p. m. No Sunday trips. Berth at Flavel dock. J. J. DAY, Agent. x

The bill will be read the second time on Monday and if a fight develops, it will come at the third reading on Tuesday. Senator Walker claims only five senators voted against the bill.

ROOSEVELT WILL LEAVE QUICK

The president's purpose was made known in accepting an invitation of the New York county committee to be allowed to act as his personal escort on the way from the capitol to the depot. This invitation was presented by Representatives Parsons, Bennett and Olcott, of New York.

ALIENS RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

Substitute for Original Bill is Introduced

Sacramento, Jan. 29 Assemblyman A. M. Drew of Fresno today introduced a substitute for the amendment of the bill the president objected to on the ground it discriminated against Japanese in denying aliens the right to own land. The substitute does not contain the features deemed unwise by the national authorities and is in accordance with suggestions made by Governor Gillett and denies all aliens the right to own lands.

Drew made an effort to withdraw the bill but failed. Drew had moved that it be referred to a select committee of one, but was opposed by Johnson who moved to amend the motion by referring it to the judiciary committe. Drew asked that the clerk send the bill back to him, but the speaker would not permit its return. The judiciary committee will report on the new bill Tuesday.

GRAYS HARBOR HAS GRIEVANCE

Lumbermen Want to Bid for Government Contracts.

Aberdeen, Jan. 29—Grays harbor lumber manufacturers will protest against the government's action in ignoring this section in inviting bids and awarding contracts for lumber. The impression seems to be that Grays harbor cannot accommodate government transports and other lumber carriers and the protest, which will also include a number of resolutions, will cover all the objectiors that may [illegible] made to including this harbor in its agreements hereafter. The protest will be forwarded to the Washington delegation in congress.

The schooner C. A. Thayer, which arrived from Honolulu, met with a series of gales in crossing the ocean which depriving her of a portion of her canvas. The crew spent most of the time mending the sails, and when the vessel arrived off Grays harbor she had to remain outside, beating up and down the coast for several days. Finally a tug overtook the Thayer and brought her into port.

The steam schooner Grays Harbor met with stormy weather on her recent trip from California. She lost a blade of her propeller.

VAUDEVILLE MAKES "HIT"

Angela May has completely captured the town with her beautiful contralto voice, to say nothing to her handsome gowns or her great personal charm of manner and artistic acting. Manager Simonton sprung a surprise when he brought this young musical star to feature the opening of the vaudeville departure at the Bakeronian. Angela May is from the famous "White Way", otherwise broadway, New York City, and was in the London and New York musical comedy success, in the "Silver Slipper" and "Princess of Kensington." and lately of the Imperial Opera Co. J. Louis MacEvoy who was director of the Imperial Opera Co and assists Miss May is also from Broadway is well known in musical comedy and operatic work and with Miss May has written many popular songs and better class ballads. In the change of program to night these two clever artists will introduce an operatic comedy sketch in which Miss May will sing another "hit" of Anna Helds. Every act on the bill will change completely and with such a clever and diversified coterie of vaudevillians, a program of great merit would result and draw capacity for the balance of the week. Miss May will change her gowns, waring one particularly fine creation from Paris, which will particularly interest the ladies.

A Practical Man.

She keeps a diary, I know,
  Which, as one sentimental would.
She often reads—she told me so—
To learn a better life although Already she is pretty good.

Therefore I send her every day,
  Although reproved by word and look,
Flowers. Her conscientious way
Will not omit their record—they
  Will all be noted in her book.

And, when she reeds, my name will face
  On every page her dreamy eyes.
My awesome bills increase apace,
Yet it's worth my while to buy the space—
  I believe it pays to advertise.
  —Layton Brewer in New York Sun.

She Counted Seven.

A pretty girl in a hammock slung in an apple orchard awoke suddenly and frowned at the young man who stood before her. "You stole a kiss while I was asleep!" she exclaimed.

"Well," stammered the young man, "you were sleeping so soundly—you looked so pretty, so tempting, I—yes, I admit I did take one little one."

The girl smiled scornfully. "One!" she said. "Humph! I counted seven before I woke up."

LUMBER PRICES ADVANCING

Rates Increased In The Canadian Market

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 29—Lumber prices in Vancouver have advanced $2 per thousand feet on common grades and within a very short time there will be an advance affecting all outside points. It is stated that the price of logs has advanced considerably since last summer and they are now next thing to being scarce. It is said that log prices will remain fairly high during the balance of the year and that is the principal reason for an increase in the price of lumber.

A number of delegates representing lumbering interest left Vancouver today for Nelson, B. C., where a meeting of the mountain lumbermen will take place. It is expected that the interior operators will propose a truce to war over the price of rough lumber, which has been going on for months. Should this expectation be realized, it is certain that prices will be immediately advanced.

IDLE VESSELS ARE EXPENSIVE

Costs Piling up With Nothing to Offset Them

Port Townsend, Jan. 29—With the resignation of Capt. John Williams from the command of the British bark Osborne, a readjustment of the business affairs of the bark discloses how expensive is the handling of vessels in the disengaged fleet of foreign bottoms now at anchor on Puget sound. With the departure of Capt. Williams for home practically all the crew will be discharged, leaving the complement to guard, the ship consising alone of Capt. Oliver and two apprentices.

When the Osborne arrived on the Sound in April, her crew all told consisted of thirty-two men. The greater number had joined the ship prior to her sailing from Europe, and as their three-year term of service expired, all must be returned to Liverpool at the expense of the Osborne's owners. The expense of their return and wages during the nine months that the bark has been disengaged here amount to several thousand dollars.

TO CLEAR TAFT AND CROMWELL

This the Undertaking of Engineer Ward

New York, Jan. 29—A new turn to the controversy between the president and certain eastern newspapers over the alleged libeling of the Roosevelt administration in connection with the purchase of the Panama canal, was given today when Randolph G. Ward, a consulting engineer, assumed full responsibility for the engineering operations in the canal zone.

Ward, in a statement [illegible] the press today, exonerated William Nelson Cromwell, the rich attorney who represented the French Panama Canal company during the purchase negotiations and Chares P. Taft, brother of the president-elect, from complicity in the Panama railroad project.

Ward declared that he alone was responsible for the enterprise. He challenged Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois to submit to him a fairer or more effectual way for developing the canal territory.

Rainey recently attacked the administration and Senator Lodge on the floor of the house in connection with the pending controversy.

An Obstinate Old Bachelor.

The Right Rev Cosmo Gordon Lang, archbishop designate of York, was one of the late Queen Victoria's favorite preachers. On one occasion when Dr Lang was visiting Osborne her majesty said to him "I hear excellent reports of your work at Portsea, and I find you actually keep a staff of twelve curates. You should take to yourself a wife. I believe you would be able to do with two curates less." "Ah no madam," he replied "That would scarcely do. If I have a curate who does not suit I can get rid of him, but I could not do the same with a wife." "True," replied the queen, "but take the advice of an old woman and marry." Dr. Lang however, has not up to the present followed the kindly counsel.—London Tit-Bits.

Lord's Prayer on a Pin Head.

Mr. William L. Stuart, a young man engaged in business in New York city, has performed the seemingly impossible feat of engraving the entire Lord's Prayer on the head of an ordinary pin, to which he has added his name and the year, making altogether 276 letters and figures. Mr Stuart did the work at odd times during his regular employment and with very ordinary tools, which seemingly are not adapted to such fine engraving. The pin was set in a block of wood, and a common engraver's tool was used. A simple microscope, costing only about 25 cents and known as a "linen tester," furnished the necessary magnifying.—St Nicholas.

SHE MADE A MISTAKE

The Way it Was Explained by the Clumsy Man

Owing to the fact that the car lurched suddenly as he was passing along the aisle Bronson was deprived of his balance, with the result that in attempting to save himself from falling he clutched one of the shoulders of a handsome woman who had succeeded in getting a seat. Moreover, he knocked her beautiful hat awry and with great difficulty avoided stepping on her toes. As he succeeded in recovering his equilibrium the lady turned toward him and said:

"You contemptible pup! I wish you to understand that I am not a lamppost or a piece of furniture to be clung to for support. You ought to ride in a cattle train. You have no right to crowd in where you can tear other people to pieces with your big, awkward hands. You pitiful clown! You ought to be thrown out into the street. You are not fit to be allowed to go where you are likely to interfere with the comfort of refined people. You unmannerly bumpkin! You deserve to be"

"Excuse me, madam," Bronson managed to say, "you have made a mistake."

"A mistake!" the lady demanded, her eyes flashing with wrath. "What do you mean?"

"I am not your husband."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Restrictions In New York Society.

The lines drawn by the different sets are more rigid in New York than ever before. There is a rush of new people to get into society, and old families who have stayed away for a decade or a generation are coming back and trying to assume their old places. Sometimes victories have to be accomplished with the aid of the nouveau riche, and the results are quite confusing and yet laughable. Localities do not count as much as they once did, and gradually New York is getting away from the Philadelphia idea of fencing in a small territory and condemning every one who lives outside of it.—Vogue

A Monster Loaf.

Bakers in Germany are fond of making odd experiments, the following being reported from Duisburg, in Westphalia. At a children's party recently held in that town there was exhibited and afterward cut up and distributed among the youngsters present a bread twist which for size at least has surely rarely been equaled. Weighing no less than 180 pounds, it had a breadth of 1.70 meters and a length of 3.20 meters and was thus found sufficient to supply a satisfactory afternoon collation to as many as 500 boys and girls.—Bakers' Weekly.

World's Busiest Railway Station.

Which is the busiest railway station in the world? One would naturally expect to find it in the world's metropolis, but it is located in a city that has only a tenth of the population of London. Every day 150,000 passengers pass through the Flinders street station in Melbourne. Our own Liverpool street station, according to an Australian statistician, comes next, with 128,000.—London Chronicle.

Royal and Presidential Wages.

The great white czar gets a salary of $25,000 a day; the sultan of Turkey, $18,000; the emperor of Austria, $12,000; the kaiser, $11,200, the king of Italy, about $7,200; the king of England, $6,270; Leopold of Belgium, $1,700, and President Roosevelt, $137. Napoleon's salary was about $15,000 a day. The president of France gets about $617 a day.—Chicago Journal.

Ruse of a Revolutionist.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

I was a student at the university. I called myself a student, though my mind was rather bent on obtaining freedom from despotism than my studies. St. Petersburg was full of revolution and consequently full of spies.

One day I left our depot for revolutionary supplies, having filled my pockets with them, and I started out to leave them at points from which they would be further distributed. A man was standing near the door opening on to the street, who eyed me sharply. I knew at once that he was a spy sent to watch those who came and went from the house. We were suspected. Without appearing to notice him I sauntered off, swinging my cane unconcernedly, but when I got to a corner turned on purpose to note whether he was following me. When I saw that he was I gave myself up for lost.

I walked on outwardly unconcerned, inwardly terror stricken, until I saw an open door, the entrance to a respectable dwelling. Without reckoning what further I should do or say I mounted the steps, passed in at the door and closed it after me. No one was in the hall. I went into a room evidently used for a reception room. This, too, was empty. Lace curtains covered the windows opening on to the street, and, peeping through, I saw the spy looking up at the house with a puzzled expression. He stopped one who was passing, pointed to the house and asked a question. I could not hear what it was, but presumed he asked who lived there. The person evidently told him what he wished to know, for he appeared satisfied, but I was disappointed that he did not go away.

Hearing a light footstep behind me, I turned and saw a young girl, dressed to go out, drawing on a pair of gloves. She looked at me surprised and for an explanation as to my presence. My wits did not work quickly, but this was all the better, considering the course I took. I was stammering at a reason for my presence when one occurred to me. I would pretend to have got into the wrong house. I feigned a puzzled look, cast my eyes about me, then asked. "Will you kindly tell me who lives here?"

"Colonel Andriovitch, superintendent of police."

Great heavens! I had stumbled into the worst possible position—in the residence of a chief of police, my pockets full of revolutionary documents and a spy waiting for me outside.

If I pretended to have got into the wrong house there was nothing for me to do but leave and walk into the arms of the spy. If I pretended to have called on the superintendent I must have a reason for doing so. I decided on the latter course before inventing the reason.

"Then I am not mistaken, after all," I said. "I have called to see the superintendent. The door stood open, so I walked in. Is Colonel Andriovitch at home?"

"No, but I expect him every moment. Will you be seated and wait for him?"

I looked at my watch, not to note the time, but for an excuse to put off a decision.

"I have but little time to spare," I said. "I will wait a few minutes. Colonel Andriovitch is your"—

"Father."

"Indeed! I am very glad. Perhaps you can help me."

"How?"

Now, the method of her assistance flashed into my brain with the rapidity of an electric current. I lowered my voice and spoke quickly and impressively:

"Come to the window."

She followed me, and I showed her the spy loitering outside. "Do you see that man? He is a revolutionist. He belongs to a gang who are distributing revolutionary documents. I have come here to inform upon them to your father. The circle suspect me and have sent this man to spy upon my movements. Should I go out on to the street I would be followed and murdered."

My story evidently impressed the girl, and she stood thinking.

"But you can stay here till father returns."

Stay there with my pocket full of revolutionary documents and a man without ready to denounce me! Not if I could help it. Again I set my inventive powers to work.

"Such a course," I said, "would enable the revolutionary circle to get rid of their documents and escape. If there is a back door through which I can pass to another street I could go out, join the circle, of which I am a pretended member, forestall this spy, and while they are deliberating whether to believe his story or mine your father can send and have them arrested."

"There are a back door," she said, "and a yard, beyond which is an alley."

I was near the window, with my eye keeping watch outside. Half a block away I saw a man in uniform coming down the street. It was the superintendent.

"Tell your father when he comes," I said, "to send to 49 —— street, surround the house, and he will bag the lot. Show me the door."

The girl led me to the rear of the house and opened the door. I passed out into the garden and the alley and thence to the street, where I mingled with the throng.

I afterward looked for the address I had given. Fortunately there was no such number.

EDMOND COMPTON.

The First Woman's Infantry

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"You women wish the same rights as men. Then do the same duties—do military service."

"We are tired of hearing you men throw this up at us whenever we demand the right of suffrage. We will do military service. You assume that we cannot endure military hardships. We can do our part—that is, the lighter part. Our arms and accouterments may be of a weight proportionate to our physique."

Such was the reply of Mrs Susan Armstrong to the president, who in his next message to congress transmitted the demand. An act was introduced creating a corps of women to serve in such places as Mrs Armstrong had indicated. They were to be enrolled as infantry, though the introducer of the bill disavowed any slur on the women from a double meaning of the word. If they were found effective as foot soldiers a corps of cavalry and one of artillery were to be added. An amendment was introduced leaving the selection of the uniform with the women enrolled.

The first regiment of (women's) infantry was enrolled and instructed by the secretary of war to select its uniform, after which its officers would be appointed and its equipment furnished by the government. Eight hundred women met in council. Mrs. Armstrong was elected president, and the meeting proceeded to business. Miss Owen moved that a committee be appointed to design a uniform. The motion was put and carried and the committee appointed by the chair. It was then announced that the work had already been done, a uniform had been selected and would be presented to the meeting.

Miss Wrinkle, chairman of the committee, read a description of the uniform. It was to be of blue cloth, tailor made; jacket faced with yellow, skirt to fall three inches below the knee, hat of felt on wire frame crown, inverted bell shaped, four inches high, brim one yard in diameter, ostrich feathers of suitable shades to match.

When the description had been read the president announced that the matter of its adoption was open to discussion.

Miss Skinner—I should like to ask what sized bustle is to be used.

Miss Wrinkle—There will be no bustle. The uniform is to be for service, not ornamental.

Miss Skinner (sharply)—H'm! With no bustle perhaps some of us may display figures by no means ornamental.

Mrs. Latherly—Will the chairman of the committee please inform us if there is to be a uniform hip breadth?

Miss Wrinkle—The hips are to be the natural size.

Mrs. Latherly—Mrs. President, if the hips are to be natural size I would suggest enlisting only women with average hips. How would the rear rank look with—

The President—The lady is out of order. Miss Blackmore!

Miss Blackmore—Are there to be two battalions—one of blonds, the other of brunettes? Certainly the brunettes cannot be expected to wear blue.

The President—The members of the corps will wear the uniform as adopted.

Miss Skinner—I should like to know, Mrs. President, if we are to be permitted to make our figures respectable, or are we to be denied all pads?

Miss Wrinkle—The secretary of war has estimated that our regiment cannot be mustered in to the military service without a serviceable uniform. With our accouterments there will be no room for padding.

Miss Ferguson—Does this deprive us of corsets?

Mrs Mathews—I wish to say right now if it does I desire my name stricken off the rolls. I demand a corset, and a straight front corset.

Mrs. Kellogg—Mrs. President, the lady is talking nonsense. How would the straight front corset with rear protuberance look, I should like to know? Does the lady wish something to carry a mess kit on?

Mrs. Mathews—The vacant space under the rear of the corset might be used for cartridges. I'm not so impractical as the lady would suppose. So there!

Miss Simper (tittering)—With the straight front corset our corps would look always in the position of "charge bayonet."

For some time the wrath of various members had been gaining ground, and from this point there was a double class divergence. The fat women were ranged against the lean ones and the brunettes against the blonds. The meeting finally broke up in confusion and has not since been called together. Meanwhile the secretary of war is waiting to equip and muster in the corps.

This split in the matter of uniform has greatly retarded the suffragette cause, which, it was hoped, the demonstration of woman's ability to do military service would greatly assist. Some prominent suffragettes are endeavoring to discover who it was that introduced the amendment to the bill constituting the corps which provides that the enrolled members should select a uniform. The gentleman will not acknowledge himself as its proposer, nor will the members tell on him.

Some of the more conservative suffragettes oppose the woman's military corps, asserting that it was a mistaken idea, military duty not necessarily being obligatory on a voter.

STEAMBOAT CLERMONT

Her First Passage from New York to Albany

In August, 1808—the exact day is a matter of dispute—the steamboat Clermont made the first passage by steam from New York to Albany. The distance, somewhat less than 150 miles, was covered in thirty-two hours, a record hailed as a triumph in speed, for previously the passage between the two cities averaged four days.

Robert Fulton had experimented with steam several years, but the Clermont was the first boat he constructed on a large scale. As he could not get the engine he wanted in this country he ordered one from England. The Clermont was so reconstructed in the following winter that it gave more commodious accommodations to travelers, and the year 1808, which was the first year of regular travel by steamboat, Fulton made it a point to start his boat precisely on scheduled time. Curiously enough, a portion of the public complained of this. It was not until well along in the summer that travelers got accustomed to it. Previously boats had been held for two hours at the request of passengers who weren't ready. Fulton's perseverance won public approval before the season closed.—Anaconda Standard.

Cleared His Doubts.

A well known English gentleman engaged a tall and powerful highlander to act as gamekeeper on his estate. Having been a considerable time at his post and not having caught any poachers, the gentleman suspected his gamekeeper of carelessness. So one dark night he disguised himself and went out with a gun to poach on his own ground. He had fired only one or two shots when he was suddenly pounced upon from behind and his gun wrenched away. Then kicks and blows were showered upon him until he fell down half insensible. The highlander then walked away quietly, and when the gentleman recovered sufficiently he crawled home and took to his bed for two weeks. He has now no doubts as to whether the man can perform his duty or not.

Gold is moving in the direction of Europe again, but the fact attracts little attention. It apparently makes a great deal of difference whether the mines of the world are turning out four hundred millions annually of the yellow metal, as at present, or about one-fourth of that amount, which was the extent of the annual output until recently.

There is a rumor current in China that the late emperor was done away with to make room for his successor. It is probably without foundaton. From time immemorial there has been an opinion in Oriental countries that a ruler cannot die a natural death, but in most cases secret assassination stories, turn out to be mere suspicions without an other basis than the fact that there is usually a faction which would rejoice over a removal by any means.

A resolution adopted by the Oregon legislature, provides that whenever a member introduces a bill "by request," as is often done, he must state who wanted the measure introduced. A rule of that kind is certainly a proper one and will probably be the means of keeping a number of objectionable bills from being submitted.

CONCENTRATE THE WORK.

In his message to the legislature, Gov. Fort,. of New Jersey, follows along lines similar to those followed by Gov. Stuart, of Pennsylvania, in recommendations for the construction of good roads. It will be remembered that Gov. Stuart advised concentration of state expenditures for road purposes on main highways, instead of distributing the funds over a number of different projects says the P. I. Gov. Fort does precisely the same thing.

As a concrete illustration, Gov. Fort recommends that state aid to a number of different roads be omitted at this time and that the entire amount of the state expenditures for road purposes be concentrated on the completion and improvement of one main highway from the Highlands to Atlantic City. A splendid drive way could thus be had for a distance of 127 miles, which, in the opinion of the governor, would be unsurpassed in any portion of the United States and would bring to the New Jersey coast a reputation such as nothing else could bring. He recommends that the state complete this road, place it in first-class condition and thereafter maintain it by direct appropriations and by license taxes upon automobiles. He recommends further, as a settled policy, the construction of state highways between the various county seats, with no further aid by the state to branch roads; those to be left to the local authorities.

He desires to see the state construct one road at a time and place it in perfect condition, this road to be a main highway from one part of the state to the other, from the eastern to the western boundary, for example.

New Jersey and Pennsylvania have had wide experience in the matter of state aid to road construction, and both have gone far in the matter of constructing good roads. They have both seen the necessity for concentration of work on one project at a time, and their experience is worth profiting by in this state

CUBANS ON THEIR METTLE

The Cuban people never stood in greater need of the good will and forbearance of the citizens of this republic than at the present crisis in their national fortunes. The first real experiment in Cuban independence begins now. Between those Cubans who have cultivated American influence since 1898 and those Cubans who have assumed this influence to be irresistible and antagonism useless there has been little freedom for the play of autonomy in political thought If things went wrong America would intervene; if all was well America would reap the most benefit. Such was the philosophy of some and the fear of perhaps the majority among those natives who interested themselves in public affairs. America was putting the whole Cuba libre program through. Criticism was either ungrateful or useless.

The late President Palma's long exile from Cuba made him essentially a foreigner, just as his residence in the United States made him an American in thought. Looked at dispassionately by a thinking Cuban, Palma's was an "assisted" regime, notwithstanding that the assistance was spiritual rather than militant, implied rather than expressed. Whether it shall be to sink or to make safe haven, Cuba will now "paddle her own canoe." Ten years of peace and average prosperity have put the nation in good shape for the experiment. Success in that experiment will vindicate the United States theory of what a protectorate should be.

The case which a New York gas corporation lost through a recent ruling of the United States supreme court was an instance of being "scared before you are hurt." The corporation sued to have a rate law held up because its enforcement might amount to confiscation. The answer of the highest court is that, while the state cannot compel a corporation to lose money, it can compel it to show that it is losing money through the application of a drastic law before a plea for relief can be entertained. There is a nice point here for the side of the people.

Under this ruling paper estimates and valuations do not go in court as a basis for injunctions to override the statutes. The public has a right to insist that the laws be enforced. The corporation involved may obey or shut up shop. This is a fair deal. The gas company, on the contrary, asked the state to accept its own valuation of franchises, plant and good will and to indorse this valuation as the one for the people to support by arbitrary rates. The decision removes many uncertainties from this class of contention. Corporations will be protected when they respect the statutes, but not when they ask that both the statutes and the laws of common sense shall be twisted for their sole benefit.

President Gomez of Venezuela is said to be ready to meet the United States for a square deal in the pending controversies between the two countries. There seems to be no question but the American rights were grossly abused by Castro and his kind, and the sooner the new government consents to arbitration of the matters in dispute the better it will be for Venezuela.

It is to be hoped that the Lincoln centenary anniversary will find either real peace or a truce between the colonel in the White House and the embattled warriors on Capitol hill.

Although Uncle Sam began the year $100,000,000 to the bad, there's many a mile yet between him and the kaiser and Tom Johnson class.

Advocates of a state police should be required to pick out a city police worthy to stand as a model for the new force.

We were not a whit more glad to [illegible] Johnson come sailing home from [illegible] than the [illegible] there were to see him go.

EMERGENCY TAX MEASURE

Will Affect State Tax This Year Only

The tax measure passed by the legislature is purely an emergency law, affecting the state tax alone and effective for this year only. The legislature will be compelled to enact permanent legislation during the present session, which will, when it goes into effect, void the emergency law.

The state board, acting as an equalizing board, will have the power to call witnesses, administer oatns and make investigations to determine the actual value of the property assessable in the different counties. They will use the assessors' figures of the present year four their basis and from that will investigate and determine what the real value of the taxable property in the different couties will be. They will then from that compute what each county should pay in proportion to the whole revenue needed by the state and upon this proportion will base the reapportionment of the state tax. In this way the different counties will be made to pay at least approximatly what they should pay. It may be that some will have to pay less than their present assessed liabilities to the state and it may also be that in some instances they will pay more. In all probability there will be a greater number to pay additional sums than those which will pay less.

The bill prepared is an emergency measure merely and intended to remain in force only to bridge over the present tangle and make it possible for the legislature to enact a permanent and adequate tax measure.

It is provided in section 1 of the bill that seven days after is signature by the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer, acting jointly, shall meet at the state capitol and ascertain the total amount of revenue necessary for state purposes, and shall apportion the aforesaid total revenue among the several counties. The governor shall be chairman, the secretary of state shall be secretary of such officers acting as the board. A majority of said officers shall constitute a quorum, and the act on decision of a majority shall be deemed the act or decision of the board. No vacancy shall impair the right or power of the remaining officers to exercise all powers herein confirmed.

The manner of ascertaining the proportion of taxs to be paid by each county is provided for as follows:

"Said state officers shall determine and ascertain the total taxable property in each county as last assessed by the county assessor thereof and shall adjust and equalize the same among the several counties. x x x And each county shall pay such proportion of such state tax as the equalized value of taxable propery within such county as so ascertained and equalized by said officers bears to the total amount of taxable property in all of the counties of the state as so determined and equalized."

For determining the manner of ascertaining and equalizing the amount of taxable property the following provision is made in section five:

"In order to ascertain and equalize the amount of taxable property in each county and in the state the said officers shall examine the summaries of assessments made in the several counties made by the county assessors and equalized by the county boards of equalization as certified by the county clerks to the secretary of state, and may obtain such other information as they may deem necessary to enable them to ascertain the true relative value of such taxable property in the several counties and shall determine from such values so equalized the ratio of such equalized value of taxable property in each county to the value of all the taxable property in the state as so equalized and for such purpose the said officers or any of them may summon witnesses, administer oaths and take and receive testimony and shall have the right to require any officer of any municipailty or county of the state to certify or testify to any relevant fact."

SAVES EXPENSES BY UNIQUE PLAN

Keeps Vessels on Cruise to avoid Complications

Port Townsend, Jan. 29—Lumber laden from Chemainus and ready for sea in this port, all that saved Capt. Dan Kilman, of the American schooner Lyman D. Foster, from expensive complication was prevailing good weater and the existence of a small harbor boat capable of getting the schooner outside harbor limits before the opening of the custom house this morning.

Dissatisfied with the cook and cabin boy, members of his complement of sailors for a voyage to Callao, at a late hour yesterday, Capt. Kilman had two men sent from Seattle on the steamer Dode. The arrival of the Sound boat here at midnight did not produce the men. It was impossible to sail without the remainder of the crew, and to have remained here would have required entry at the custom house and the payment of duty at the rate of $2 a thousand feet on the cargo of foreign manufactured lumber. With more than a million feet aboard, the situation was serious.

Awaiting an opportunity to send a launch to Port Gamble for his missing men, the Foster was taken in tow by the harbor tug Enterprise, and for several hours cruised about the calm waters of the Strait of Fuca off Point Wilson. To the suprise of all, the men whose appearance was so eagerly sought were found shortly after the schooner had been gotten under tow. They had been aboard the steamer during the time an energetic search for them had been made.

COAST SHIPPERS APPEAL FOR AID

Will Establish a Steamer Line If Patronized

Washington, Jan. 29—Relief for the merchants of the Pacific coast is being considered by the government, after many appeals have been made to the officials as the result of the insufficient service between coast points and Panama.

An extended conference has been held by Secretary of War Wright, General Edwards and Captain Boggs of the canal commission, R. R. Rogers, attorney for the Panama railroad; William R. Wheeler, assistant secretary of commerce and labor; Vice-President Drake of Panama and H. S. Bates and William N. Bunker of San Francisco.

The San Francisco men outlined the plan of the merchants association for the proposed steamship line. The merchants allege in their petition that since the beginning of government control of the Panama railroad line and the breaking of the contract between the railroad and Harriman's Pacific Mail Steamship line, the Harriman company has given the poorest sort of service. The petition sets forth that the infrequency of the sailings makes it impossible for Pacific coast merchants to bid for a share ofthe contracts for supplies for the canal zone.

The San Francisco merchants offer to establish a steamship line to ply regularly between coast ports and Panama if the government will guarantee them 75,000 tons of freight annually. The present annual shipment is 35,000 tons.

It is understood the canal commissioners and Secretary Wright look upon the proposition favorably. No statement was made, however, except that the proposition was being considered seriously.

A FINE PRODUCTON

"The Lieutenant and the Cowboy," the new western military drama in which Bolton and Smutzer's splendid company appear at the Astoria theatre next Sunday night, is unquestionably the best western drama of recent years. It is not, howefer, a blood curdling, hair raising molo drama, but a grandly true story of western life as it really is. A complete scenic equipment is carried and the company this season is the most evenly balanced the production has ever had.

Bismarck and Music.

Bismarck's utterances regarding music are compiled in a book by Keudell "Furst und Furstin Bismarck. Erinnerungen aus den Jahren 1846-1872." Keudell once saw the man of blood and iron shed tears during a performance of Beethoven's Sonata Appasionata. His favorite composers were Beethoven and Schubert. The only thing he did not like in their works was the variations. These, he said, "do not speak to the heart." Concerning the sonata just referred to he remarked: "This is like the singing and sobbing of a whole human life. If I heard this music often I should always be brave."

That the recent extreme cold weather has not killed fruit trees in The Dalles district is the statement of J. M. Patterson, secretary of The Dalles Business Men's Association. Mr. Patterson says the peach crop has probably been injured to some extent, but he does not believe trees have been hurt. He says 20 inches of snow fell when the fre[illegible]ing weather came, and he thinks this protected the roots from the cold. Cherries, he believes, have not been injured at all.

The meeting of the fisheries committees of the Oregon legislature held on Wednesday evening at Salem was attended by a number of persons representing the different fishing interests and various regulations were discussed. The upriver men and some of the packers favored a weekly closed season but the gillnetters and other packers opposed this at least until fishing above tidewater is a prohibited. The committee that is to meet with a similar committee for the Washington legislature is reported to have decided upon no measures which it will support.

The indications are now favorable for a new building being erected here during the coming spring to be used as an armory by the First Company, Coast Artillery Corps. Two property owners have announced that they will submit proposals to the company for erecting a building, which is to be leased for a specified period. With a new armory, there is every reason to belive that a second company of the artillery corps would be organized within a short time. That would form a battalion with a major in charge and with a band. Tomorrow evening, the annual inspection of the local company will be held by Major McGlachlin of the Fourth field artillery.

The meeting of the city council on next Monday evening promises to be an exceptionaly busy one, as at the recent session a large number of matters were referred to the several committees and they will be reported on Monday evening. Some time ago petitions were presented to have a new system of drains put in and as the committee has recently made a thoro examination of the district, it will probably submit its report with recomendations so that the construction work can be undertaken [illegible]

Twice libelled within 24 hours, the big Spanish tramp steamer Jupiter, loaded and ready to sail from Aberdeen for Austral[illegible], is detained in the lower harbor until the matters are settled. The Jupiter has on board 800,000 feet of lumber the largest cargo by 300,000 feet ever taken from Grays Harbor. Officials of the North Bank road have given up all hope of having the line completed into Spokane by February 1, the date originally set for the inauguration of through service. While all the road construction is completed for the entire distance of 145 miles from Pasco to Spokane, it has been found that the recent storms have caused considerable damage to the track at a number of points, in spite of the fact that most of the way the line is built with a view of obviating difficulties of this character. The damage is confined in the main to stretches of road where the ballasting has not been completed and the heavy rains have softened several miles of the roadbed.

The annual report of City Physician Reames for the year ending on December 31, was filed in the auditor's office today. It shows that during the year there were 257 births, 123 being boys and 134 girls. Of these, 76 were of Finnish and 31 of Norweigan parentage. There were 130 deaths, 22 of which were from consumption and 10 from accidental drowning. Thirteen of the deaths were of persons over 70 years of ago and of these, eight were over [illegible] years of age. The death rate is shown to be less than one per cent. During the year 40 houses were fumigated on account of contagious diseases. Among the recommendations made by the city physician is the passage of an ordinance regulating the manner in which plumbing is installed and the stopping of the practice of throwing rubbish on the beaches.

Washington mail advices state that the question of the liability of the fire insurance companies for the losses caused by the great fire in San Francisco, following the earthquake of April 16, 1906, was practically settled by the Supreme Court January 18, when it declined to grant a writ of certiorari for the review of a test case brought by the Williamsburgh City Fire Insurance Co. of Brooklyn. Most of the losses by the San Francisco fire have long since been settled, but several of the companies, including the Williamsburgh, whose contracts exempted them from liability for losses caused by earthquake, took the case to court. The federal court at San Francisco and the court of appeals, however, decided that they were not by those contracts releived from losses by fire even though the latter resulted from the earthquake.

NEW TAX ROLL IS COMPLETED

Collections will be Commenced Next Wednesday

County Clerk Clinton has completed the extensions on the 1908 tax roll and it was today turned over to Sheriff Pomeroy, who will open the roll for collection on next Wednesday. The total amount of the roll is sligthly over $22,000 more than the 1907 roll, which amounted to $255,112.69 and this increase is due to the $5000 extra required for state tax and the amounts levied by the road districts for improving public highways. The Astoria city tax is about $30 more than on the former roll, while the tax for the Astoria school district is over $600 less. The total of the present roll and the amounts that will be received by each of the cities, towns, road and school districts are as follows:

NO EARTQUAKE OR TIDAL WAVE

Happened in Southern Spain or At Barcelona

London, Jan. 30 --Special dispatches to Reuters News Agency from Madried say there is absolutely no truth to the report of the serious earthquake and tidal wave in southern Spain and at Barcelona. All communication with these sections are normal.

SLIGHT SHOCKS

Madrid, Jan. 30 All communication with Southern Spain and the city of Barcelona is interrupted, but the reports emanating from London, relative to distress from an earthquake and tidal wave are untrue. There was a slight shock at Tolona, province of Murcia, but no serious damage was done. Slight shocks were also felt at Olins. In both Tolona, and Olia the inhabitants fled panic stricken to the suburbs, fearing a disaster was upon them, such as devastated Sicily and Southern Italy. It is reported that for a moment, when the earthquake occurred, the sun was hidden by a dense gray cloud which disappeared immediately, while a shower of hailtsones as large as walnuts covered the ground to a depth of several centimeters.

The bridesmaids, Miss Maud Ainsworth and Miss Mabel Norris were gowned in attractive costumes of white net handsomely appliqued and built over foundations of rose pink chiffon and satin. They carried arm bouquets of bridesmaid buds and wore large hats of white, ladened with weeping-willow plumes. The bride wore a striking creation of empire satin hand-embroidred and cut on sheath lines. The corsage was elaborated with point de Venise and she carried lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern. Among the out-of-town guests were the bride's uncle John S. Baker, of Tacoma, Miss Bernice Baker, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Ainsworth, of Los Angeles. Names Noted In the News

President Elect Taft's Youngest Brother, Horace — Edmund Billings and His Mission to Italy.

Next President of Harvard, Abbott Lawrence Lowell — Other Figures in the Public Prints.

H. D. TAFT.

The public has heard a good deal about several members of the Taft family, but the youngest of the brothers now so much in the public eye has thus far managed to escape publicity better than the rest. It is Horace D. Taft. The eldest of President Elect Taft's brothers, Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, has been talked of considerably because of the contest for the Ohio senatorship, in which he met defeat at the hands of Theodore E. Burton. Henry W. Taft of New York has been prominent as a member of the bar and in connection with various occasions on which his brother William H. has been his guest. Horace has been teaching school in Connecticut and content to remain in the shade, not even enjoying the reflected light which might be shed upon him from the presidential chair at Washington were he to get in an attitude to receive it. They wanted to elect him a member of the Connecticut legislature last fall, but he would not take a nomination. He said "Brother Bill" was getting enough glory for the family, and he was satisfied to teach "Brother Bill's" kid, young Charlie Taft. The latter is in attendance at his school in Watertown, an institution which has a high educational standing. Indeed, Mr. Horace Taft ranks high among members of his profession, as was attested in his recent election as president of the Head Masters' association. He is a graduate of Yale, like all the rest of the family.

The Rev. Dr. William J. Dawson of England is one of the most eloquent evangelists this country has known since the time of Moody. Unlike some revivalists, he is a man of culture and scholarship, and his methods are not sensational, although he does not hesitate to depart from beaten paths upon occasion. This was illustrated during a mission he conducted recently at the famous St. George's Episcopal church, New York, the church of Dr. Stephen H. Tyng and Dr. William S. Rainsford, now presided over by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Birckhead, a young man who is determined that mere traditions or fear of criticism shall not stand in the way of his making his church as beneficial as possible to the thousands of poor and struggling people in the midst of whom it is placed. The mission at St. George's brought within the sound of prayer and praise and words of exhortation many who do not often darken church doors, but in order that still more should be reached a procession was organized which wended its way through the streets in the neighborhood of the church and made its appeal to the interest of the wayfarers or dwellers in the vicinity. At the head of the procession a large cross was carried, illuminated by electric lights. At either side were men carrying the batteries that furnished the current for the incandescent lamps. Then came a band, and behind it Dr. Birckhead and the other clergy of the parish in their robes and the missioner, Dr. Dawson. Following them were seventy choristers, who led the singing as the march proceeded, and behind them were many others, making up a parade 700 strong altogether. On the return to the church a great meeting was held, at which Dr. Dawson delivered a most stirring appeal.

REV. DR. WILLIAM J. DAWSON.

Dr. Dawson has a magnetic presence and a most effective delivery.

Dr. Dawson was born in Northamptonshire in 1854 and is a son of a Wesleyan minister. He was educated at Didsbury college, Manchester and was for a time in the Wesleyan ministry, but from 1892 to 1906 was minister of Highbury Quadrant Congregational church, London. He is a voluminous writer, and his works comprise not only books on religious subjects, but lyric and dramatic poetry, fiction and essays.

Abbott Lawrence Lowell, who has been chosen to succeed Charles W. Eliot as president of Harvard university, may be described as author, lawyer and professor of the science of government. He is a brother of Professor Percival Lowell, also of Harvard, whose astronomical discoveries have given him wide fame.

PROFESSOR ABBOTT LAWRENCE LOWELL.

When President Eliot tendered his resignation in November, to take effect in the spring, there was at first a strong sentiment in favor of selecting a comparatively young man as his successor. President Eliot himself was a young man—only thirty-five—when he became Harvard's head. But it is admitted that he was exceptionally well qualified for the post for a man of his years when he took it. The sentiment in favor of choosing a scholar and man of affairs of large experience and wide reputation grew stronger as the weeks passed by and resulted in the choice of Professor Lowell. He is fifty-two, but in full vigor, and it is believed he will have twenty years of activity before him. He has proved his ability in every field he has entered and is a rare combination of the man of the world and of the university leader. He is not only the most popular but the keenest lecturer in the university. And so far as concerns the amenities of the president's position, including the proper entertainment of guests and the relations between the head of the university and the undergraduates, he can be counted upon.

Professor Lowell was born in Boston on Dec. 13, 1856, and was graduated from Harvard in 1877. He then took a law course, receiving his degree from Harvard Law school in 1880 and being admitted to the bar the same year. In 1877 he married his cousin, Miss Anna Parker Lowell. For seventeen years the practice of law demanded the greater part of his attention, but he continued to pursue his favorite study of comparative government. Several books on government and on politics in continental Europe, published during this time, gave him high standing as an authority on the science of government, and in 1897 he was called to be lecturer in that department at Harvard.

Three years later on the establishment of the Eaton professorship of the science of government he was appointed to that chair.

In the last year he has published a work on "The Government of England," which has attracted wide attention and brought to him the honor of election as president of the American Political Science association in succession to Ambassador Bryce, whose "American Commonwealth" brought him the same distinction.

One of the Americans prominent in the relief work in the regions of Italy and Sicily devastated by earthquake is Edmund Billings of Boston. Mr Billings had charge of similar work in Boston after the Chelsea fire. He went to Messina as the official representative of the state of Massachusetts and took with him a fund of $500,000 with which to aid in relieving the distress. He sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and left the steamer at Cherbourg, taking train from there to southern Italy in order to reach the scene of the earthquake as quickly as possible.

CHURCH IN OFFICE BUILDING

Chicago Congregation Will Build Unique Edifice

The trustees of the First United Evangelical Protestant German church of Pittsburg have made public plans of the front elevation of what promises to be one of the most remarkable church buildings in the world. It is a fourteen story office building and church combined, the church being in the middle, with offices rising all around it. It appears that many years ago this plot of ground was given for church purposes, the restriction being that it "must always and ever be used for church purposes."

Several churches have come and gone on this most valuable plot at Sixth avenue and Smithfield street, in the heart of the downtown district, while skyscrapers have gone up all around it. The congregation cannot sell and rebuild in the suburbs, as it would like to and could do at great profit, so the happy thought was evolved that an office building and a church could be combined.

The front elevation shows a frontage on Smithfield street, with a cathedral style church front in the center. The church effect rises with the building for about seven stories, then permits the office part to continue skyward. There is to be a great chime of bells in the church, and the whole edifice will cost not less than $1,500,000.

BUILDING A TOWN

During his lecture in Astoria a few evenings ago, Russell H. Conwell made an eloquent plea for the upbuilding of a city that should be taken to heart by everyone, who had the pleasure of listening to it. He spoke at length of the bright future for Astoria on account of the vast natural resources tributary to her and drew the conclusion that the working out of that future depended in no small degree upon our own people. Each and every one in the city ought to be a "booster" for Astoria, he asserted, because "you can talk a town up or you can talk a town down." A good citizen, he said, will at least keep quiet, if he feels that he can say nothing good of his town and the man who "knocks" ought to be escorted to the city limits and told to seek another location. Some town, he asserted, do not grow and prosper as they should, because there are not sufficient funeral notices of the right kind in their newspapers.

The lecturer also urged the establishment of factories which would provide payrolls and enable us to use our timber resources and other products to their fullest extent, because the greatest wealth comes from placing the manufactured products in the markets of the world. He would not advise the giving of bonuses to secure factories, but argued that a factory which was suitable to local surroundings and adapted to the resources of the country, would need no special inducements to insure its success.

There is a whole lot of truth in what the noted lecturer said, and his remarks no doubt made a deep impressing upon the large audience present. A successful man himself as a lawyer, preacher, author and soldier, his words carry conviction, and his plea that this community, like all others, should make the most of its resources and advantages, look for the "acres of diamonds" at home, will leave an impresin that will be lasting in good results.

The Budget has tried to impress upon its readers the fact that cities do not grow spontaneously, but must be built by the enterprise and energy of their citizens. That in substance was the meat of Mr. Conwell's splendid address.

The Harriman system has recently had forces of surveyors at work making exhaustive surveys along the Salmonberry creek in an effort to find a route for a railroad down that creek. Permanent camps were established and the surveying was continued for several weeks. It is understood, tho of course not officiallyannounced, that no suitable grade could be found and as a result the line will be built to the Nehalem river direct from Buxton, striking that river a short distance from Vernonia and continuing down to Jewell, where it will connect with the road to be constructed from this city. Both of these roads, it is asserted will be under construction early in the spring.

House bill No. 93, by Campbell, by request, is to abolish the old unjust Oregon attachment law. Under that law any creditor can swear out a complaint and start an attachment suit and attach anything a man or corporation has got In other civilized states an attachment suit must allege fraud, or that the debtor will abscond. Here in Oregon any lawyer may start an attachment suit, clap on big fees and make costs, for a business man against whom he has a spite. This bill will be fought by lawyers who want to keep this Oregon boot on the limbs of the creditor class to make fees out of it It amends the law so as to require some allegations of fraud.

A NEW LABOR PROBLEM

There is work ahead for some such labor exchange as that outlined by Secretary Straus. The necessity of labor exchanges or bureaus throughout the country is obvious. That those maintained by private and philanthropic enterprise do not meet the need is also obvious. Effort in each case is local and more or less restricted as to scope, so that in the long run a labor agency is merely an office of registration for employer and employable. Very little beyond the registering and recommending in individual cases can be undertaken.

Equalization of labor supply to meet demands covering large areas of territory is a vital social and commercial problem just now. It is wasteful to have a labor famine in one section and a labor glut in another section Single men will hunt work where it can be found and often cross half the continent to strike a job. Men of families cannot take the same risk yet this class works with the best results to industry and to society. Married men are patient and energetic They do not take long holidays and enervate themselves by excesses A national labor exchange might do the country good service by discriminating whenever possible in favor of laborers who are steady and frugal and employment which will be permanent as well as remunerative. Labor emergencies can take care of themselves But lasting prosperity for wage laborers enriches whole communities and builds up strong commonwealths.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT ON DR. FRED PEACOCK

Cathlamet Physician Shot Twice And Dangerously Wounded by Mrs. Longtaine—Condition of Injured Man More Favorable Today

Dr. Fred Peacock, the Cathlamet physician, was shot twice and dangerously, thou perhaps not fatally wounded at that place about 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon by Mrs. Longtaine, mother of Madaline Longtaine, the young girl who died at the hospital here on December 18 as the result of an alleged unlawful operation with which Dr. Peacock was accused of being connected. Dr. Peacock was brought to the hospital here last evening where an operation was performed and the two bullets removed. One entered at the point of the left shoulder blade, ranged upward and outward, passing thru the lung and pleura and was taken out in front of the left arm pit. This wound is considered a dangerous one as the lung is pierced. The other bullet made only a flesh wound, entering just above the elbow on the left arm and coming to the surface at the top of the left shoulder. After the wounds were dressed, Dr. Peacock passed a very comfortable night and today his condition is favorable as his temperature is much lower than it was last evening and there is a fair chance for his recovery unless complications should set in.

MISS LORAINE KEENE

As Ruth Stanhope in "The Lieutenant and the Cowboy," Astoria Theatre, Jan. 31

The circumstances surrounding the murderous assualt are, according to reports brought from Cathlamet, about as follows: Shortly after the arrival of the steamer Lurline at Cathlamet yesterday afternoon, Dr. Peacock went to the postoffice after his mail. On emerging from the postoffice he stepped into an adjoining store and stood near the counter reading a letter, with his back towards the door. Suddenly Mrs. Longtaine, who had evidently followed the physician inside the store stepped up behind the unsuspecting man, and drawing a 38-calibre revolver, fired at close range, the bullet striking him at the point of the shoulder blade. As soon as he was hit, Dr. Peacock turned slightly, glanced at his assailant and then staggered toward the rear door of the building, throwing up his left arm apparently to guard his head and this act probably saved him from being killed on the spot. Mrs. Longtaine fired two and some say three more shots at the retreating figure, but the only one to take effect, was in range for the man's head but struck his shielding arm just above the elbow. After the shooting, Mrs. Longtaine made no effort to escape, but quietly and calmly seated herself in a chair and remained there until taken into custody.

Several persons who were close at hand, rushed to Dr. Peacock's assistance and Dr. Hackling was immediately summoned and dressed the wounds temporarily. A launch was dispatched to Clifton and a telephone message sent to Dr. Henderson to come to Cathlamet at once. In the meantime the injured man attended by Dr. Hackling, Mrs. Peacock and several neighbors, was placed on the launch Adelaine and started for Astoria. Dr. Henderson secured a launch on the receipt of the telephone message and started up the river, meeting the party with the injured man on the way. On arriving here Dr. Peacock was taken to the hospital where his injuries were attended to by Drs. Henderson, Hackling and Reames.

While the shooting was undoubtedly the outcome of the case in connection with the death of Madaline Longtaine, it came as a surprise to every one, as since the trial of Dr. Peacock was set for the coming month there has been no agitation over it. One feature in connection with the matter, is that during yesterday two strangers arrived in Cathlamet and went to the Longtaine home a short distance from that town. Shortly after they had left Mrs. Longtaine came to Cathlamet and committed the murderous assualt. Whether or not these strangers had anything to do with urging the assualt is a mystery.

"THE LIEUTENANT AND THE COWBOY."

Tomorrow night the much heralded play, from the pen of Anthony E. Wells will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre. It tells a story of thrilling interest that is bound to hold the attention of the audience from the rise of the curtain to its last fall. From the glimpse of military life in the first act and the thrilling scenes of our west in the other three the play is always realistic and convincing. Many of its situations are unique and its language is simple and direct. Messrs. Pelton and Smutzer have given it a series of stage settings that place it on a level with any of the productions of the year and they have surrounded their star with a cast that is remarkable even in this day of extraordinary casts. Secure your seats, now selling.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME CHINOOK

Warm Wind That Eats up Snow in Oregon

What is a chinook wind? This question is often asked by recent arrivals from the eastern states to whom the name has no meaning. Webster defines it thus:

"A warm westerly wind from the country of the Chinooks sometimes experienced on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains in Montana and the adjacent territory."

Relative to what a chinook wind is, District Forecaster E. A. Beals gives this defination:

"It is a wind passing over a mountain. When it descends on the opposite slope the air is compressed and heated dynamically."

William Morris Davis, professor of physical geography in Harvard college, gives a lengthy account of chinook winds in a book entitled "Elementary Meteorology," which was published in 1894. But in the entire work he fails to tell why they were called chinook winds. The following is one of the most important extracts:

"One of the most peculiar members of the class of cyclonic winds is found where the indraft is required to pass down from or over a mountain range in its course toward the cyclonic center. Winds of this kind often have a strong development in the northern valleys of the Alps, where their remarkable heat and dryness were first noted and investigated; the local name, foshu, there employed, is now extended to other regions as well.

"These conditions are admirably developed along the eastern base of our Rocky mountains in Montana, Wyoming and Colorado, as well as in the northwest territories of Canada. It frequently happens in the winter season that as a chinook center moves eastward from British Columbia to Manitoba while an anti-cyclonic follows across Utah, an extended cyclonic circulation, is developed over the mountain region. The winds that blow north ward along the plains as the cyclone advances are soon supplanted by westerly winds, and as these descend from the mountains and flow out upon the plains all the features of the Swiss foehn are developed. The warm and dry wind thus produced over a belt of country along the foot of the mountains is called a chinook."

A legendary tale has it that the term chinook as applied to those peculiar winds came into general use among the residents along the Willamette and Columbia rivers many years ago in this wise: Becoming weary of paddling up the river in canoes, the Chinook Indians fell into the habit of waiting for their boats with a strip of sail attached, to be propelled by the wind. The only sort of blow which would accomplish this was the kind now referred to as the chinook. When it would begin to stir at a rather lively rate the residents would remark: "Now watch out for the Chinooks." Hence the origin of the name.

LANE TIMBER IS PURCHASED

Tract Bought For Quarter Million Dollars

Eugene, Or., Jan. 30 The sale of a large tract of timber land along the Siuslaw River in the western end of Lane county, is being made here by Fred Fisk, a local timber broker and ex-sheriff. The names of the parties who are making the purchase are not known here, but a check for $150,000 was received a couple of days ago at a local bank from the Merchants National Bank of Portland, as part payment for the timber. The purchase price for the tract is $250,000. This is the first sale of any importance made in this section of the state for a long time and is an indication of the early resumption of activity in the timber market.

Armory appropriations to the extent of $40,000 look reasonable to the house committee on military affairs of the Oregon legislature which met recently and considered the senate bill and started to wade through the military code bill, which also comes from the senate. The committee gave favorable consideration to the appropriation measure, which grants $40,000 for the purpose of constructing armories in different parts of the state. The provisions of the bill are that in the event a county wishes to erect an armory it can have half of the necessary funds advanced by the state contingent upon its furnishing the second half. The report will be made to the house today and the bill will then go to the ways and means committee for second consideration prior to final report on the question of its passage.

CROWD BILLS AGAINST JAPS

Authors of Measures Working for Their Enactment

Sacramento, Calif., Feb. 1 A. M. Drew, author of the bill prohibiting aliens to hold land in this state, in speaking of the president's letter on the subject said:

"After a cursory reading of the letter, I am determined to stand for the bill as it has been amended. As to the president's views, I take no exception, but do not believe Secretary Root in his letter enclosed by the president, takes an unwarranted stand against all the legislation proposed against Japanese. My object in introducing the land bill, I may frankly state, as to keep Japanese from getting a foothold in California. I shall make every effort to have my measure preventing aliens from owning land, passed through the legislature.

Grove L. Johnson, author of the bill prohibiting Japanese being members of corporations and providing for their segregation, said: "The president's letter will have no more effect than water on a ducks back. I have not changed my mind in the least as to the wisdom of enacting Anti-Japanese laws."

DANGER TO HOME LIFE

Outside Employment of Married Women Deplured

"Advance in the age of marriage, experience in and distaste for domestic duties, uneconomic habits of spending and a more ready resort to divorce as a refuge of domestic ills are some of the pathological results of the industrial employment of married women."

Professor Ulysses G. Weatherly of the University of Indiana thus criticised the conditions that followed the entrance of women into industrial employment at the recent convention of the American Sociological society in Jersey City, N. J.

"The defective conditions of home life that result from the outside employment of the married woman," he went on, "react on the habits of the husbands and are disastrous to childhood. The infant death rate is invariably high where married women are employed and children are deprived of the normal home discipline."

The Briefest Will.

Probably the briefest testament was that of a man who had often declared that he would make his will on a half sheet of note paper. He did as he had said and wrote "All for mother" on a bit of paper. The will was signed "C. T." and witnessed by the testator's two sons. The document was admitted to probate in due course.

The Rockland Mystery.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Rockland had been a rough town, but it had settled down into a town without the adjective.

One day a man without a record came to town. Since he gave no name, as was customary in such cases, a name was given him. But this was not till it was noticed that he appeared to be looking for some one. Then they called him "the shadower." He had no confidants, no associates. He entered upon no business, but seemed to have what money he needed. He was continually walking about, always with a revolver at each hip, and it was noticed that he usually kept an eye toward his rear.

He was a well favored man about twenty-eight, and what few young women there were in Rockland adored him. Perhaps it was the mystery there was about him, though he never took any notice of them. One of the girls, Eunice Parks, bet she could make him smile, but she lost the bet. Nevertheless she succeeded in at least establishing an acquaintance. They were seen occasionally walking together and usually in earnest conversation. Eunice was a good deal of a hoyden, just the girl to make such a bet, but from the time she fell in with the shadower she began to get sober, and it wasn't long before she was going about apparently with just such a load on her shoulders as the stranger seemed to be carrying.

Her intimate friends questioned her about the mysterious man who never smiled and who seemed to have drawn her under the spell by which he was influenced. They got nothing out of her, and by and by her parents, perceiving that there was something wrong with her, made every effort to induce her to give them her confidence. They succeeded no better than her companions, who were her companions no longer, for, like the stranger, she was without associates, without confidants. When she was asked if he had confided in her she answered "No," but hesitatingly, as much as to say that she was in a measure at least in the dark. Was he influencing her without telling his story, or had he no story to tell?

Wherever there is a mystery there are a thousand explanations, and of the mystery of the shadower now extended to Eunice Parks no two explanations were alike. After Eunice was drawn into the vortex the parents of those who had been her friends feared that their daughters might be contaminated as people catch diseases from one another. But if this contributed to the separation between her and her former associates it was but a slight part, for Eunice dropped them before any of them dropped her.

As time went on the shadower grew more cautious in his motions, as if the altercation he seemed to be expecting might be more imminent. He was seen on one occasion while walking through the town to turn suddenly, clapping his hand to his right hip. It was noticed that when coming to a corner before advancing to cross a street he would hastily glance to the right and left as people in crowded cities do to avoid swift moving vehicles.

One afternoon the shadower was seen walking rapidly toward a wood on the outskirts of the town. A boy who saw him said he was talking to himself. Suddenly from the wood several shots rang out. There was no doubt about this, for they were heard by four different people who noticed them particularly, there having been no shooting in the town or vicinity for a long while. They differed, however, in the number of the shots.

Two of these persons were chatting together when the shots were fired. They were talking about the stranger, who had hurried past them a few minutes before. They went to the wood, and there lay the shadower with a bullet in his temple. One chamber of his revolver had been emptied, and after searching a ball was found in the trunk of a tree near by.

The body of the shadower, who now seemed to have been really the shadowed, was examined and the clothing searched carefully for evidence of his identity. On the body a number of scars were found, and the clothing was bare of any evidence whatever. Search was made for the man who had killed him, but he was not found. The ground was examined for his tracks, but it was not of a character to receive impressions, being coarse and covered with dead leaves. Some were surprised that the bullet found in the tree was of the same caliber as those of the stranger's weapons, both being 45 caliber. But in that country everybody carried a 45 caliber revolver.

People were divided between several opinions. There were those who maintained, as appearance indicated, that the stranger had been killed by an enemy. There were those who believed the man had committed some crime and feared retribution till he imagined he was followed and had eventually killed himself. A third class believed that punishment had been visited upon him by the ghost of some one he had wronged.

Of course every effort was made to induce Eunice Parks to tell what she knew—if, indeed, she knew anything. She did not admit that she knew anything and would tell nothing. She was much affected by the stranger's death and would not look on his body after death. It was buried where it fell and a stone put up bearing only two words, "The Unknown."

Eunice Parks pined away and died.

ANDREW C. EWING.

A New Detective Method.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"As to the Hunker case," said a detective who had been giving an admiring crowd samples of how the craft ferreted out crime, "it was a stroke of genius.

"A message was sent in to our office by Abraham Hunker, a farmer, that he had lost his life's savings, some $1,000 in gold. He had kept it in a stocking in his chimney, having taken out a brick at one side, leaving a space just big enough to hold the gold. One day while the house was left alone some one stole the money. He asked us to send a man to work up the case.

"Dan Chadwick was in charge of the office at the time and arranged the plan on which the work was to be done. A few days after we got the message a man from the agency appeared at the nearest station to Hunker's farm, hired a horse and drove out to see the farmer. He worked openly, talking about the case in presence of any one who happened to be about. After several days spent in this kind of detective work he went away.

"Some of the people thereabout who knew a thing or two remarked that the fellow was a queer detective, letting everybody know what he and his business was. He wouldn't be likely to learn much that way. The way to work a detective case was for the detective to keep in the dark himself and put a 'bullseye' on everybody else. They gave up any expectation of Hunker ever seeing any of his money again.

"In about ten days another man from our office went to the neighborhood, though this one didn't spend much time with Hunker. He went about among the farmers, told them all that he was a detective and engaged in hunting for the man who stole Hunker's money. This man didn't ask many questions. He didn't tell anything except what I have stated. Then he went away, leaving the farmers to talk about his visit and to speculate from what he had (not) said as to whether he was getting on to a clew. Within a few days after his visit the news of it was spread all over the county.

"It was about two weeks later that another man appeared in the same locality. This man was more like what people expect a detective to be. He went ostensibly as an agent for a steam plow, but he took so many people into his confidence that within a week after his departure everybody knew that another detective had arrived, detected and departed.

"The next man that went on the job put on an air of profound thought. He stayed among the people several days before he let it out that he was a detective. But by this time they had become wrought upon by so many detectives coming among them that he had only to 'let the cat out of the bag' to have the news go like a prairie fire all over the country. He made no mystery of the matter. Indeed, he told Hunker that the discovery had been made that the money had been stolen by a man living in the neighborhood and it would soon be recovered.

"'Why doesn't he get away with it?' asked Hunker.

"'If he should move he would acknowledge himself to be the thief. You wouldn't need a detective to tell you that any one leaving this region just now would be going to spend his stolen money somewhere else.'

"After that the farmers began to be distrustful of each other. They didn't talk any more about the case. They were uncomfortable about it. Every man felt that he was being shadowed. No farmer could go into his house or out of it without fancying that some one stood behind a tree watching him. They began to wish Hunker had let the money go without subjecting them to such surveillance.

"About a month after the loss one of the farmers sent word to the agency asking that a man be sent to him. When the detective arrived he found a pale, haggard man who looked as if he had been keelhauled. He took the detective back of his house and told him to dig in a certain spot. The detective dug and brought up a cigar box containing the stocking with Hunker's gold in it. When the money was counted every dollar was there."

The speaker paused, and some one asked, "Well, how did it all come about?"

"The first man sent up did not appear as a detective. He learned that no stranger had been to the house about the time the money disappeared. The gold had been kept in the same place for years, and a knowledge of its location had doubtless come to some one of the community, who had been tempted to steal it. Chadwick, the greatest detective genius I have ever known, conceived a plan for forcing the culprit to confess. He sent the first man, who appeared openly for the purpose of spreading abroad the news that the neighborhood was being watched, sending others to confirm this and to keep it in the people's minds. By thus agitating the matter he worked through anybody and everybody upon the guilty party. The man told me after his arrest that he couldn't go among his neighbors without hearing his theft discussed. 'There's another detective here,' was the usual greeting. 'Have you seen him?' Then when worn out with the constant shadow hovering over him he resolved to go somewhere else he learned what the detective had said about any one who should leave, thereby acknowledging his guilt. Then he confessed."

OVER FALLS IN A BALL

Canadian will Defy Niagra in Rubber Vehicle

Another man is planning to try the trip over the Horseshoe falls in a vehicle different from anything that has been tried before. It is an immense rubber ball which is now being constructed by a rubber company in the United States. The voyager is Robert Leach of Chippewa, Ont., and he plans to make the perilous trip next June.

There will be two balls one within the other. The outer ball will be thirteen feet in diameter and the inner one, in which Leach will hazard his life, eleven feet in diameter. The inner ball will be held in position by four spiral steel springs and sufficient oxygen will be pumped into it to give the man a bare chance for life if anything goes wrong.

Chicago Street Sweepers' Headlights.

The street sweepers that operate at night on the more important boulevards of Chicago have found their work hampered and rendered dangerous by the carriages and automobiles that throng these avenues. In order to relieve this danger each man is now provided with an electric lamp, which is attached to his helmet, fed from a storage battery in the sweeper's hip pocket. The entire outfit weighs less than a pound, and the lamps will burn ten hours without recharging. The sweeper does not have to give the apparatus any care, as it is properly connected up and fitted to him when he starts to work at night and needs no attention until he returns from work in the morning.—Scientific American.

Eggshell Gas Mantles Now.

Eggshells as gas mantles is an idea from Germany. The contents are drawn or blown out, the ends are neatly cut off, and the body of the shell is fixed in position like the regular article. The light thus obtained is very good, while the new form of mantle is durable.

Much better progress was made this year than last in getting the taxroll ready and as a result collections will be commenced on Wednesday of this week, just one month earlier than 1907. This will allow the property owners over a month in which to take advantage of the three per cent rebate which will be allowed until March 15. There is one thing which property owners should remember when paying their taxes and that is to make out a complete list of all the property on which they wish to pay and present it to the sheriff. That will avoid all danger of errors, such as paying on property which you have sold but which is still assessed to you on account of the deeds not being filed for record or the overlookingof property which you may own but that is assessed to some other person. It will also avoid much confusion and belay and will materially assist the deputies in the sheriff's office in performing their work. All property is now assessed by lots, blocks and parcels of land not under the names of the owners as formerly, so that unless you bring in your lists, errors may occur.

When a man owns a piece of property in a city and will not do anything to make it valuable but instead sits back and draws rent and always raises the same as the value of property is forced upward by the progressive and enterprising property holders, he is living by the sweat of the brow of other men and will not lift his hand to lighten their burden. The progressive citizen is a man, who tries to keep pace with some one who is so progressive that he adopts every means to improve and beautify his city. The non-progressive citizen is one, who puts on a long face and professes to have the interests of the city at heart by kicking at everything the progressive man tries to do when in reality the spirit which prompts his action is purely selfish.

The shooting affray which occured at Cathlamet on Friday is one deeply to be regretted not alone because it endangers the life of one person and places another in the shadow of the gallows or of prison ,but as well because it renews the bitter feeling that existed for months between factions in that town and county, a thing that has gone far to retard the progress of the community. It is hoped that the better judgment of the cooler heads will prevail and the whole matter will be left to adjustment in the courts.

FOR ARMORIES

Forty thousand dollars will be provided by the state for the construction of armories for the use of the Oregon national guard if a bill passed by the senate Friday becomes a law. As the bill requires that localities where armories are built shall stand half the expense of the buildings and grounds, the purpose of the bill is to make $80,000 available for armories.

On a basis of $10,000 for each armory, this would build eight of them within the next two years, the bill making half the appropriation available each year. It is probable that they will cost a little above that figure .The locations are placed under direction of the state military board by the provisions of the measure.

The bill went through the senate with only five to spare, after Smith of Umatilla, chairman of the military affairs committee, and Hart of Baker had spoken in its favor, and Barrett of Washington and Smith of Marion had argued against it.

The opponents of the measure declared that the people had disapproved of an appropriation for armories last June, when a bill providing $100,000 for them was defeated. Smith of Marion wanted to know why the legislature was so careful to follow the will of the people in electing United Sates senator, and at the same time disregarded the popular vote on armories and on increasing the supreme court.

Chairman Smith defended the bill, which had been framed by the military affairs committee to take the place of individual bills for armories in different sections of the state. Senator Mullit had already introduced a bill for a $20,000 building at Ashland, and four other bills for Oregon City, Woodburn, Baker City and Pendleton were about to appear. The state now pays from $500 to $600 per year rent for armories, and Smith argued that it would be good business policy for the state to stop this drain by setting aside $20,000 for two years.

STANDING ARMY OF MERCY

This is a busy age. When death invades a large circle of friends or relations the question of the hour is as to who can be spared from the shop, the plow or the desk to "bury the dead." If war breaks out there is an unofficial draft of the citizens of every community whose removal to take up arms will cause the least jar to industry. The will to respond readily and adequately to every call where human well being is at stake is universal. In the Red Cross societies the whole world has a standing organization for the relief of the stricken or unfortunate. Originally founded to succor the wounded of the battlefield, it has extended its province until it recognizes all human suffering as a wounding of the race.

It has been said that by lessening the horrors of the battlefield the Red Cross effort must indirectly encourage war. This remains to be proved, but it is undeniable that the crusade against suffering waged by the society has lessened public selfishness and indifference. The status of the corps has also removed all doubt as to the efficacy of relief extended through proxies. With branches in almost every clime, it sets in motion promptly and efficiently the latent and more or less fitful sympathy and generosity of the whole world.

Before printing those "several volumes of love letters" received by her from about 1875 to the end of the century Lillian Russell should reflect that epistles of this particular kind grow stale with age.

As prices have been soaring the last four years, there's nothing wrong about the inaugural of 1909 costing $12,000 more than that of 1905.

With Carnegie turning to profit sharing as the solution of the labor problem, it looks as though his library scheme didn't make good.

People who must have a castle on the Rhine to make them happy "can buy it for a song" now that the kaiser is short of pocket money.

"All wool and a yard wide" stuff is well enough in its place but it would simply make Taft's inaugural suit look like patchwork.

Smokers of New Year's gift cigars are now swearing off the tobacco habit in dead earnest, thanks to woman's thoughtfulness.

Plenty of laborers for the canal and plenty of canal for the laborers. Now throw dirt!

DIVISION OF THIS DISTRICT

Bar Association Favors Additional Circuit Judge

At the special meeting of the Astoria Bar Association on Saturday afternoon Gustaf A. Hemple was admitted to memership and resolutions were adopted opposing the passage of the proposd measure changing the attachment laws and favoring the proposed division of the Fifth judicial district. The resolutions adopted read as follows:

"Resolved, That the Bar Association of Clatsop county is opposed to the passage of Senate Bill 53, and of House Bill 93 and that the secretary be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the delegation of Clatsop county, with the request that they oppose the passage of both or either of said bills.

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Clatsop County Bar Association that Clatsop county dlegation be requested to support a measure, later to be introduced, dividing the Fifth Judicial District into two seperate districts, the one to be composed of the counties of Clackamas and Washington, and the other to be composed of Clatsop and Columbia."

"That the secretary send a copy of each of these resolutions to the Clatsop county delegation in the legislature."

JUST THINK THIS OVER, WILL YOU?

Nautical Ignorance.

The captain of an ocean liner was talking about the ignorance of the sea and of nautical terms that is sometime displayed by lady passengers.

"Last summer," he said, "there was a young lady on board whom I showed over the steerage. As we were making our tour the steerage people were eating their dinner, and I couldn't help remarking the tremendous appetite of a red haired man.

"I said, 'Just look at the amount of food that fellow consumes!'

"'I suppose, captain,' said the young lady, 'that he is what you sailors call a stowaway?'"

MIDWINTER CATCH OF KINGFISH IN FLORIDA.

Fishing off the coast of Florida is better this winter than it has been in several seasons. This picture shows a catch made by Captain Maddox in the yacht Carib at Miami. There are forty fish, the string weighing 1,500 pounds. Some of them were bitten in two by sharks that followed the yacht.

REPEALING OF FISHING LAWS

Recommended at Meeting of Joint Committee

The joint fisheries committees of the Oregon and Washington leigslatures met at Seattle on Saturday afternoon and by a majority adopted a report recommending the repeal of the Oregon law prohibiting fishing above tide water. A dispatch from Seattle regarding the meeting says:

The joint commission by unanimous vote, agreed to recommend the passage of a law by both legislatures providing for a spring closed season from March 1 at 12 o'clock noon to May, 1 at 12 o'clock noon. The fall closed season was left undisturbed, namely from August 25 to September 10.

Following is the text of the report adopted by the commissions which is to form the basis of laws to be enacted by the two legislatures:

First—A spring closed season from March 1 to May 1.

Second—A fall closed season from August 25 to September 10.

Third—A Sunday closed season from 6 p. m. Saturday of each week to 6 p. m., the Sunday following between the 1st day of May and the 25th day of August.

Fourth—We suggest the mutual recognition by each state of the licenses issued to floating gear by the other state.

Fifth—That the state of Oregon repeal chapter 89, of the session laws of Oregon, for the year 1907, relative to the operation of purse sienes and other like gear on the Colubia river.

Sixth We recommend the enactment of similar laws in both states carrying an appropriation of at least $2500 in each state and providing for the destruction of seals and sea lions and the granting of a bounty on the same to be $2.50 for seals and $5 for sea lions.

Seventh—We recommend the repeal of both fish bills passed under the provisions of the initiative and referendum in June 1907, by the people of the state of Oregon, said bills being designated on the ballot as 318,319 and 332, 333.

The action of the commission in urging the repeal of the fish bills passed under the initiative and referendum in Oregon is in direct opposition to the wishes and arguments of representatives of the fishermen's union in both states. The present law in Oregon prohibits the use of seins and fishwheels below head tide, which on the Columbia river is about Sandy River, a short distance above the mouth of the Williamette. Two members of the Oregon commission, Scholfield and Sinnot, voted against the repeal of the Oregon law.

Where a Miser Hid Her Coins.

A death in a poor part of Budapest has just brought to light an extraordinary story of a woman's double life. She had lived apparently in poverty and semistarvation, subsisting partly on charity, but a search of her rooms, which were in a terrible state of neglect, revealed that she was worth more than a million kronen, chiefly in house property. A number of stuffed cats in her room were full of coins. The woman was well known in the better part of the city, where she owned several blocks of flats, the rent of which she collected herself.—London Globe.

MANY JAILED FOR DEBTS

Great Britain Had Large Number of Prisoners

London Feb. 1—Imprisonment for debt goes on as merrily as ever in Great Britian. In the year 1907, 9235 debtors were sent to prison by the county courts. Birmingham has the distinction of claiming the largest total, with 709 debtors; but the large industrial towns all follow Birmingham pretty closely. Perhaps 1909 will see an end to this last shameful survival of chattel slavery in Europe. For 50 years now England has lagged behind the rest of Christendom in this respect.

Origin of the Club Sandwich.

Alan Johnstone is said to have originated the famous club sandwich, and the story runs that on going to the club one night between midnight and daybreak he found the cafe closed, the cooks gone, and, being nearly famished, he invaded the larder, toasted himself some thick slices of bread, sliced them through, buttered them while hot and laid thereon everything he found in the refrigerator—cold chicken, ham and lettuce, with a spoonful of mayonnaise. The result was such an epicurean discovery as is not often made, but the story was too good to keep. He confided the recipe to his cronies, and it straightway became one of the popular dishes of the club menu, and so the father of the club sandwich, so deservedly popular, is the present British minister to Copenhagen.—Washington Herald.

Circus Daring Due to Heredity.

Alfred T. Ringling says that nine tenths of the leading performers before the public can be included in thirty families. As sharply defined as any old English lineage, they can be traced backward in some instances more than two centuries, each generation accepting without question the heritage of spangles and tights. The circus daring and the circus muscles and the circus restlessness have descended from father to children and thence to children again. The thrill of the sawdust ring has got into the blood. From the parent trunk branches have crossed and crisscrossed until, as in the case of the Clarkonians and the Demotts and the Siegrists Florenzes, great circus lines have been built up and guarded with the zealous care of a royal genealogy. Bohemian Magazine.

Doctors Thick In New York.

The proportion of physicians to the general population is probably greater in New York city than anywhere else in the country. In the United States, for example, taking the estimated population of the census bureau for 1908 as a basis, there is one licensed physician to every 704 persons; in New York state there is one to 672 and in New York city one to only 658. It has been estimated that the physician in general practice must have a clientele of 750 persons, or 150 families, to support himself and his family in comfort, so if this estimate is accurate the New York doctor is short an average of a hundred patients, and many, of course, are further behind than that.—Medical Record.

Sardou's Way.

In the magnificent palace, near Paris, where lived the late Victorien Sardou, playwright, was a huge chest that contained numberless little boxes duly labeled. In these cardboard receptacles were notes jotted down at any time in any place, newspaper cuttings, epigrams and aphorisms of his own—a chest of ideas and plots. Sardou saw life and all events as plots and thought that the richest and wildest imagination could invent nothing so thrilling, so fascinating and truly dramatic as the incidents daily recorded in the newspapers.

TROUBLE IN CUBA BEGINS

Havana, Jan. 30—The relations between President Gomez and Vice-President Zayas became seriously strained today over the appointment of a man to fill the post of chief of the secret police.

This afternoon Jose Jeres, the chief of police, resigned, in response to a demand from the secretary of government, who explained that President Gomez had appoined as his succesor Ricardo Arnauto, ex-editor of Reconcentrado, for political reasons.

Jeres as an official had an excellent reputation. He had been chief of the secret police for the last ten years.

ABOUT ASTORIA

W. J. White, of the Pacific Paper Company, is down from Portland on a business trip.

The fines and forfitures collected by the police department during the month of January amounted to the sum of $128.50.

John Fox who has been at the hospital for a few days suffering from an attack of rheumatism, was able to return to his home Sunday.

D. C. Rainey, a prominent resident of Knappton died there on Saturday from the result of a stroke of paralysis. He was 82 years of age.

Mrs. Andrew Dalgity presented her husband with a son on Saturday at their family residence in Portland. Both the mother and little boy are reported to be doing well.

Among the hotel arrivals in Chicago on Saturday was Herman Wise of this city, who is registered at the Palmer House. Mr. Wise is east to purchase his spring stock of goods.

A typographical error was made in these columns Saturday in connection with the Jaloff bankruptcy case. The announced assets should have been given as $5450 and the liabilities as $5150.

The collection of taxes on the 1908 roll will be commenced at the sheriff's office on next Wednesday morning, but property owners are requested to hand in their lists now, so that statements can be prepared ahead.

During Sunday afternoon and evening two and a half inches of rain fell in Astoria as recorded by the instruments of the local office of the weather bureau. This is the greatest fall for the same period during the present winter but has been greater a number of times in previous years.

A petition was filed in the city auditor's office this morning, asking that Grand avenue between First and Fifth streets, be improved by grading to the full width, planking 16 feet wide and the construction of eight-foot sidewalks. The petition will be submitted to the council at its meeting this evening.

Victor Sanderson, formerly a street and pile driving contractor of this city but now of Seattle Wash, is in the city on a visit of a week or ten days. This is the first visit of Mr. Sanderson for nearly ten years and he is now president and treasurer of the C. Geske and Co, general contractor. The farm has nine pile drives and employes nearly one hundred men.

Weather Observer Lamar shows by his records that the following weather conditions existed in Astoria during the month of January. Maximum temperature 57 on the Seventeenth; minimum, 15 on the Twelfth; prevailing direction of the wind, east; precipitation, 11.12 inches; cloudy days, 20; partly cloudy, 6; clear, 5.

During the storm of Saturday night a peculiar phenomina existed that was rare. Between the lightning and thunder there were squalls of hail and at this there were showers of small cubes of ice, an eight of an inch across and if they had not come directly down from above would have broken many windows.

Martin Erickson, a longshoreman, who was at work loading the steam schooner Shoshone at Westport on Saturday afternoon, was struck by a timber which fell from a sling load of lumber and his left leg broken below the knee. The injured man was immediately placed in a gasoline fishing boat and brought to the hospital for medical attention.

Geo. Kaboth, who has returned from a trip to Salem, says that he had assurance from Governor Chamberlain that he would extend a pardon to Arthur Leberman, previous to the expiration of his term of imprisonment in April. As soon as the legislature adjourns Governor Chamberlain intends to go east on a trip and previous to his starting the pardon will be issued

Mayor Smith is rapidly recovering from his recent attack of pneumonia at the Good Samaritan hospital in Portland and within a couple of days will be removed to the home of Mrs. August Kinney in that city as his living in the hospital appears to make him nervous. Unless present indications fail he will be able to return to Astoria by the last of the present week.

Articles of incorporation of the Astoria-Warrenton Land Company were filed in the county clerk's office today. The incorporators are John N. Griffin, D. M. Stuart and E. Z. Ferguson and the capital stock is $25,000, divided into 250 shares of $100 each. The object of the company as announced is to buy and sell real estate.

H. E. Chrisenson, of Long Beach who is the contractor for the new Town Hall at Chinook, was in the city today making arrangements for the material for its construction. The building will cost about $5,000 and will be utilized by the city officials as well as for lodge and other purposes and is owned by a private company, organized for the purpose of its building and management.

Dr. Peacock's condition still continues favorable for his recovery but his attending physicians do not announce that he is out of danger. Sunday night his fever rose some and he was restless but today he has recovered a comfortable condition. Latest reports from Cathlamet state that Mrs. Longtain, the woman who shot him, is still locked up in the cell where she was first put and no efforts have so far been made for her release on bail.

Eugene Powell, who has been cooking at Frank Busch's ranch, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff McLean on Sunday morning and today an information was filed in the justice court against him charging with a threat to commit a crime. The specific charge against Powell is that he threatened to kill Dan Garner and pointed a loaded gun at him. The preliminary examination will be held in the justice court tomorrow morning.

The annual inspection of First Company, coast artillery corps, was conducted on Saturday evening by Major McGlachlin of the Fourth field artillery stationed at Vancouver. There was a large attendance and the members were put thru the various drills. After the inspection, Major McGlachlin complimented the officers in charge on the efficiency of the company and remarked it was one of the best drilled national guard companies, he had ever inspected.

The city council will meet in regular session this evening and in addition to reports from committees on numerous matters that have been pending for some time and the passage of a number of ordinances that were introduced at previous meetings, resolutions will be presented declaring the intentions to improve west Duane street, to improve Hume avenue, to improve Thirty-ninth street, between Franklin and Grand, and to improve Eighteenth street, between Exchange and Grand.

Hon. F. I. Dunbar has purchased an interest in the Astoria Abstract, Title & Trust Company and in connection with John N. Griffin will have charge of its local management. E. Z. Ferguson will manage the Portland office of the company and D. M. Stuart, formerly connected with it for several years has disposed of his interest and will engage in other business. The accession of Mr. Dunbar by the company will strengthen it in many ways in addition to his recognized personal worth and character. After being county recorder and later county clerk of Clatsop county he served two terms as secretary of state with exceptional credit and has rounded out an almost complete preparation for such a business.

M. J. Kinney of Portland is down on a business trip today.

The members of the Tillamook debating team and their chaperones are still in Astoria as the steamer has been unable to take them home on account of the severe weather. They are enjoying themselves however as entertainments are being given them each evening and now that the debate is over it has become a social and pleasant outing for them.

Charles H. Callender won a partial victory in his suit for $10,000 against the Old Oregon Mills Company in the United States court in Portland on Saturday. The suit was for the price of logs contracted for by the defendant from the plaintiff and the facts were essentially proven as claimed but the jury finally arrived at a compromise verdict and awarded Mr. Callender $5,000. It is unlikely that this will be appealed by the defeddants as another jury might give a larger verdict and there is every chance that it would. Whether Mr Callender will ask for a new trial has not been decided.

A telegram has been received from San Francisco stating that the new lighthouse tender Manzanita and the two light vessels that are to be stationed in this district, will have to undergo a general overhauling before leaving that port. The Manzanita and light vessels reached San Francisco about 10 days ago on their long journey around the horn from the Atlantic coast port where they built. They had encountered much rough weather and looked pretty well weather beaten. To place them in first class trim, it has been decided to dock them in San Francisco. The time of their arrival here is therefore indefinite.

County Clerk Clinton and Sheriff Pomeroy drew the list of jurors this morning, who will serve during the regular term of the circuit court, which will be convened on Monday, February 15. The list includes the names of 31 men as follows: W. E. Smith, Frank Norberg, O. I. Peterson, B. L. Ward, John Chitwood, W. H. Copeland, N. Simonson, Phil Bower, John Nordstrom, Nels Jensen, Jacob Heblack, M. F. Belan, W. C. Shaw and C. G. Palmberg, Astoria; W. E. Blackstock and Peter Gullickson, Fernhill; W. N. Moody and Hugh Cameron Knappa; H. F. Fisher and P. J. Glanz, Hammond; H. Oliverson, Casey; Fred Behnke, Lewis and Clark; S. Abrahamson, Elsie; N. Stanovich, Clifton; F. W; Preston, and F. P. Perkins, Warrenton; A. W. Utzinger, Frank Bohnart and H. L. Camp, Seaside; L. Enquist, Melville; George L. Hills Svensen.

During the past week the street committee made an examination of the conditions in the vicinity of the Adair drain in connection with the petition filed a short time ago asking that a new system of drains be put it. As a result, the committee will submit a report to the council this evening recommending the improvement, by grading and partial planking, of Thirty-seventh street, between Irving and Harrison; of Harrison avenue, between Thirty-sixth an Thirty-seventh, and of Thirty-sixth street, between Irving and Franklin. The plan is, after these streets are graded, to put proper drains in each and to later put drains in other of the cross streets probably as far west as Thirty-third. This work will, of course, not be undertaken until spring, but in order to care for the surplus water during the balance of the winter, the committee will recommend that a box drain be constructed on Thirty-fifth street from Irving avenue, a distance of about 500 feet, to connect with the present drain at the alleyway, between Harrison and Grand avenues.

During the hail and electric storm on Saturday evening, the flagpole at the Union Fishermen's Co-operative cannery was struck by lightening, which ignited the side of the building at the base of the pole and also set fire to an old matress and some netting lying close to the outer wall of the cannery. The night watchman, was partially stunned by the shock, but running to the door gave the alarm by firing his revolver, and then began fighting the flames, which he succeeded in putting out with a hand extinguisher before the department arrived. The loss was merely nominal, altho for a time about $1,500,000 worth of property was endangered, as in addition to the cannery itself which is insured there are over 300 boats and nets stored in the building and none of them are insured. The flagpole, which is 105 feet high and surmounted by an iron fish, four feet in length, appears to be an especial attraction for lightening, as this is the second time it has been struck, the first instance being about two years ago.

Fritz Anderson, son of William Anderson of Deep River, died at Burbank, California, on Saturday afternoon of consumption after an illness of a few months, he having gone there last fall for the benefit of his health. His brother, Einer Anderson, was with him at the time of his death and sent the sad news to his parents but whether his body will be brought here for interment has not been decided. He was about 20 years of age and born at his parents' residence at Deep River and has a large circle of young friends in that vicinity and in this city. When he left for California there was no suspicion that he had consumption and was suffering with bronchitis but the fatal disease soon developed.

Culmination of Romance Started Sometime Ago

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 2 Miss Helen Maloney of this city and Arthur Hurbert Osborn of New York were married today at St. Catherine's Roman Catholic Church, Spring Lake, New Jersey, where Martin Maloney, father of the bride has a summer home. The marriage had full sanction of the church. In October, 1907, Helen eloped with Samuel R. Clarkson, a London guest at the Maloney home. DREW BILL IS SATISFACTORY

President Believes More Drastic Measure be Troublesome

Washington, Feb. ■ The Japanese situation in view of the action of the Nevada legislature in criticising the president for interferring with California legislation and strongly denouncing the Japanese together with renewed efforts by the California legislature to secure legislation, was under consideration at the white house today. The president talked with several callers, among them being former Mayor Phelan, of San Francisco. He repeated his warnings against irritating legislation. The president believes the present Drew bill will not be offensive to the Japanese, but that any other legislation more drastic will prove exceedingly troublesome.

MATTERS BEFORE THE LEGISLATURE

Salem, Feb. ■ A bill was introduced in the senate today closing theatres and all places where admission is charged on Sunday. The few exceptions are principally hotels, drug stores, boat houses and common carriers. The bill is similar to the Idaho law.

WILLIAM I. BUCHANAN.

It is frequently suggested that William I. Buchanan, sent by President Roosevelt as special commissioner to negotiate with Venezuela, will succeed to Mr. Taft's job of "handy man," to be sent wherever trouble exists or is brewing. Mr. Buchanan has been connected with several great expositions in executive capacities and has also served his country as a diplomat.

WANTS STATUTES TO BE ENFORCED

Council Requests Police Commission to take Action

There was considerable business transacted by the council ■ its regular meeting last evening, one of the principal mars being the adoption of a resolution asking the police commission to direct the enforcement of the state laws on gambling and Sunday closing. All the members were present excepting Leinenweber and Mayor Smith presided. Petitions from D. J. Cummins, August Danielson and Johnson & Emgstrom, asking for liquor licenses were referred to the health and police committee and upon the recommendation of that committee licenses were granted to Carlson Bros, John O. Tiberg, Durham & Dibble and the American Importing Company. A petition from S. Peterson et al, asking for a sewer on west Commercial street; one from Hannah Porter et al asking for the improvement of Grand avenue, between First and Fifth and one from R. Basel et al asking for the improvement of Grand avenue, between Fourth and Fifth were referred to the street committee. A petition from the Oregon Coast Railway Company, asking for right-of-way across Ocean View cemetery was referred to the ways and means and public property committees.

A petition from George Flavel asking permission to improve Bond street, between Tenth and Eleventh, and one from A. C. Fisher et al, asking permission to improve Bond street, between Eleventh and Twelfth were granted upon filing of bond. Petition from J. L. Lovell, asking that Eighteenth street be improved was granted. A communication from S. E. Harris and A. E. Ferguson regarding assessment on their property for improvement of Ninth street was referred to the ways and means and street committees.

A communication from the Alaska-Yukon exposition mangement announcing that July 17 will be Astoria day at the fair was read with one from the mayor suggesting that a committee be appointed to make arrangements for the proper observance of the day. On motion the mayor's suggestions were adopted and he appointed Curtis Fox and Prael as such committee.

The ways and means committee recommended that the quarterly reports of the various officers be filed. Also that the tender made by Wm. Bell in settlement of the assessment against his property for improvement of Franklin avenue be declined and that in the future no rebates on street assessments be allowed. The reports were adopted. The same committee reported on the recommendations made in the auditor's annual report by recommending that the $10,683.44 in outstanding 1892 taxes and the $727,820.36 in old street assessments be not cancelled but be allowed to remain as liens against the property affected. Also that a typewriter with a 14-inch carriage be bought at a cost of $112.50 for auditor's office and the surveyor be directed to make blue print of Ocean View cemetry and a telephone be installed at the cemetry. The report was adopted.

The street committe reported that it had made an examination of the Adair drain, found it badly dilapidated and said a new system of drains must be established extending from the Adair line to Fortieth street. It recommended as a starter that the surveyor make a map showing the location of old drain as well as of the swamps in that section and that steps be taken to improve Thirty-seventh, between Irving and Harrison; Harrison between Tihrty-sixth and Thirty-seventh, and Thirty-sixth between Harrison and Irving. The report was adopted. On the recommendation of that committee the petition to improve ■ block on Thirty-ninth street was granted while the petition to improve Cedar street and the communication from the Savings Bank regarding damage to its property on Bond street were filed. The annual report of the city physician showing the death rate to have been less than one per cent was referred to the health and police committee. Ordinances were read the first and second times as follows: Appropriating $200 for use of the police commission in emergency cases; to re-establish the grade on Commercial and Bond streets between Forty-fifth street and east line of Adairs; to re-establish grade on Forty-sixth street, Commercial street to pierhead line; confirming the assessment for the Fifty-first street sewer.

Ordinances were passed as follows: Confirming the assessment for the Irving avenue sewer appropriations for the various departments of the city government, accepting the construction of a sewer on Irving avenue, adopting the report of the surveyor on a street thru block 69, McClures, appropriating $576.10 to pay Astoria Crushed Rock Co for rock, appropriating $348.50 to pay Charles Johnson for construction of sewer on Irving avenue. An ordinance creating what was to be known as a judiciary committee was lost by a vote of 7 to 1. Action on the ordinance granting a franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company and vacating the east 40 feet of First street in the Hinman tract was postponed until the next meeting.

Resolutions were adopted as follows: To improve Hume avenue, between Duane and Commercial; to improve Eighteenth street, Exchange to Grand to improve Duane street, Lincoln to Humes; to improve Thirty-ninth street, Franklin to Grand; instructing the street superintendent to construct temporary drain on Thirty-fifth street from Irving avenue a distance of about 500 feet; asking the police commission to enforce statutes against gambling and on Sunday closing of saloons.

USE FOR THE APPENDIX

Use it as Duct for Intestinal Medication

What purports to be an important discovery in reference to the vermiform appendix is described by one of the surgeons of the West London hospital, apparently showing that the dangerous, mysterious organ can greatly help a surgeon in treating diseases of the lower intestines, says a London cable dispatch. The difficulty of applying medicines in the lower intestines is overcome by using the appendix as a duct.

The operation begins exactly in the same manner as the familiar operation for appendicitis, but instead of removing the organ the surgeon threads it through the various layers of muscle in the abdominal wall and attaches it to the skin. It is then opened, and by a tube passed through it any necessary medicine can be applied directly to the mucous membrane of the lower intestines.

The appendix, it is said, may safely be left open in this position because the abdominal muscles protect it sufficiently.

Walpole and Balloons.

Sir Hiram Maxim's prophecy as to the use of airships in war is a serious parallel to Horace Walpole's facetious speculation made in 1784 after Blanchard's first ascent in England in a hydrogen filled balloon. "The seaports," he said, "will become deserted villages, and Salisbury plain, Newmarket heath and the Sussex downs will be utilized as dockyards for aerial vessels; there will be fights in the air with wind guns, and there will be a prodigious increase of land for tillage by the breaking up of all public roads as useless."—Chicago News.

"And what are the directions?" asked the practical person. "Would he begin operation by destroying all of the automobiles?"

Way
To Advertise
Astoria?
* * * * * *
A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.
We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

His Inheritance

By CLINTON DANGERFIELD

The tones of the elder man's voice ceased, and to John Ringwood, standing before him, it seemed that the whole world was suddenly enveloped in a mist of red shame. When Ringwood spoke his accents were curiously quiet and constrained, for was he not addressing Molly's father?

"And so," he said wondering vaguely if he were the same John Ringwood who ten minutes ago had asked so hopefully for the girl's hand—"and so, sir, this is your objection to me—because my father was a—a—coward"—the word came out with a gasping sound—"you think I must be one also!"

"Blood tells," returned Henry Morris hoarsely. "But, remember, lad, I would never have forced this painful knowledge of mine on you if you had not compelled me to say why I could not trust my girl to you. Your father's shame, known only to you and me, would have slept with him in his grave, but—you would know."

"That will do," said Ringwood thickly. "I am my father's son, as you say. There is no chance here, or I might prove to you that God does not always make us mere copies of those who go before. But that is idle. There is one thing—when I am gone tell Molly that I loved her; that I asked for her hand, but that there was a—a barrier between us. She shall not think I was making summer love to her. She shall not hate me for that."

"Very well," said the elder man grimly. "But if I had known the girl would interest herself in the first good looking stranger thrown at my gates by a broken ankle I would have taken preventive measures long ago."

"I will take the stage tomorrow," pursued Ringwood. "Until then I must trespass on your hospitality."

"And welcome," said Morris heartily. "You've met what I said like a man. Here's my hand."

"Is that necessary?" returned the other briefly. "You may as well avoid contamination when you have condemned another into hereditary leprosy."

Morris left the taunt unanswered, and just then the library door swung open, and a curly haired boy of sixteen pushed in with spoiled freedom.

"Everything's gone to sleep on the ranch," he said pettishly. "When's Markham and Molly coming home?"

"Your brother said he would bring your sister home by 8 o'clock," returned Morris.

"Gracious! I hope he will," said the boy. "But she said they might cut across to Denham's. She wanted to see old Aunt Hannah or some such nonsense. I told her she was going after one of Hannah's love charms, and she turned as red as you please."

"Try to talk sense," said his father irritably, and Ringwood crossed to the west window and stood watching the sunset fires die to an ashen gray.

"So rose the fire of my hopes," he thought. "Like this, it died in bitter ashes—flung to my father's level! The son, oh, mercy, of—a coward!"

Eight o'clock came, but neither the elder son nor Molly Morris had returned. At 9 a negro groom brought a note saying they would sleep that night at the Denhams', some fifteen miles away. A thrill, half anguish, half relief, shot through Ringwood. Best indeed that they should never meet again. He would take the stage early next morning.

Then on the heels of the negro stumbled in Lee Hung, the cook, who had been granted an afternoon off. Blanched to the palest of yellows, he stammered out a tale in his almost incomprehensible lingo which, translated, ran as follows:

Coming home on foot, he was aware of a tiny fire at the foot of Sevier's canyon. Inspired by ancestral deities, he had crept up to overhear the strangers converse. Developed, they had learned of Markham Morris' deposit that day with the express agent at Ravanshood; that they resolved that this money would circulate better at home and had shot the unfortunate express agent through his window, dead men being proverbially close mouthed; had seized the packet, which waited the midnight express, and now only tarried the rising of the moon.

Young Morris went white with rage and despair. That package stood between his family and financial ruin. His eyes flashed.

"Of course we'll get it back, dad, at once."

"Yes, lad. Lee Hung, how many men were there?"

"Allee samee fingers one hand no thumb."

"Four. I'm sorry your brother isn't here, Stanley. You are a bit young for such work. The foot of Sevier canyon. Let's see. We can be on them in half an hour."

"Take the short cut through the canyon, dad, and we can be at 'em in twenty-five minutes."

"No," said his father decisively. "To ride through that canyon trail at full speed means almost certain death. Quick, Lee Hung, and you, boy," to the negro, "saddle Prince and Firebrand. Stanley, help me get the pistols and a rifle for each."

Only two horses! Young Morris flashed an astounded look on their guest. Was that dogged indifference real? Of course nothing was expected from Lee or the [illegible]; this handsome Saxon with [illegible] gray eyes could he fail them in such need.

But Morris understood. This holding back was Ringwood's bitter revenge for the stinging brand put on him. Morris checked Stanley when he would have addressed Ringwood, and presently father and son swung into their saddles and galloped down the road.

As they vanished in the faint light Ringwood rushed for the barn, loosening his pistols in his belt as he ran. The two servants watched him scornfully as he saddled his gray with incredible swiftness.

"Marse Ringwood scared de fight run down dis way," muttered Sam. "He des nuttin' but trash, fo' all he so good lookin'. Gord A'mighty, I wish all de boys wasn't gone! Whar ebberybody, Lee?"

"Allee samee time off cept hunt bills," was the brief return, which meant that some of the men had an afternoon and the rest were after some refractory cattle in the hills.

"Marse Ringwood gone like de debble after him," growled Sam. And indeed the gray was flying at terrible speed.

The far, dim starlight sifted reluctantly down, and the horse's feet reached the ground more by instinct than sight. Ringwood bent over his neck, jockey fashion. For a scant two miles they kept to a badly marked road; then before them yawned the mouth of Sevier canyon, the broken trail merely a gray pencil mark among jagged bowlders and treacherous wave washed stones, rounded by old world floods.

A second the gray hesitated, and in that second Ringwood distinctly heard again Morris' voice.

"To ride through that trail at speed means almost certain death!" And he exulted that the words flowed in his soul like wine. Then he drove the rowels in his horse's flanks, and the gray in generous anger plunged down the canyon way at top speed, every beat of his steel shod hoofs striking fire from the rocks. Now they crossed a bed of clay worn slimily smooth by the soft lapping of the low stream, and here a goat might have fallen and taken no shame to himself, but the gray had that superb and rare quality which carries through everything—he believed in himself. Presently nine tenths of the canyon was behind them, though the frowning walls yet hung above. Once a panther hissed like an infuriated cat in their way, but the oncoming might of the two daunted her, and she fled ignominiously to the recesses of the cliff sides and mouthed resentfully after them, dragging behind her a tail twice its natural size.

But now open woods; the canyon was in the rear, and before Ringwood a tiny fire, with a crude half tent hugging it, and in its shelter four men. Thanks to the half mile of soft earth between them and the canyon, thanks to a quarrel already bred among them, they did not hear Ringwood until he was bearing down upon them, not fifty yards away.

Then they acted in unison. Four rifles were cocked—a challenge rang out:

"Stop or"—

It might be a harmless passing stranger, and they did not care for the noise of a fusillade just now.

The answer came clearly on the wind, "D—n you—throw up your hands!" a command they thought unnecessary, as their hands were up and their rifles in them. They answered with a fourfold volley of shots. In the next instant the gray was on them, and in the chaos that ensued Ringwood was only conscious that he got in several shots, that the butt of his pistol had proved quite useful, that two forms had clung to his knees and had gone down, that the badly scattered fire was catching the edge of the tent, and then he and the gray went down in their turn together, Ringwood oddly thankful in spite of the fact that sparks (perhaps from the tent fire) swam before his eyes, that the nearest robber made a soft cushion. Then fire and sparks went out blackly.

* * * * * * *

When light came again the moon was pouring down her full splendor. Over him bent two anxious faces, while his own reeked of the whisky used to bathe his forehead and temples. A sigh of relief hailed his open eyes.

"Thank God!" sobbed Stanley. "I thought he was gone! And after settling the four of them!"

"No, only stunned," returned their patient, rising obstinately to his feet, but glad to cling to the nearest saddle to steady himself, the earth whirled round so strangely. "I am all right, Mr. Morris. Don't trouble yourself any further by coddling the son of a coward."

Stanley stared, then said nervously:

"By Jove, he's off his head!" But his father answered by taking the tall figure in his arms.

"Lad," he said brokenly, "I've learned my lesson. A man is just himself, after all—not his father or his grandfather—and I'm hoping my boys may be cowards some day like you."

WEAKNESS IN CONSTITUTION

A Defect in the Law in the Matter of Succession

The language of the constitution is generally well chosen, but in the matter of the presidential succession it is defective. Had it said the vice president shall succeed to the presidency in case of a vacancy in that office this would have included all sorts of vacancies and have left no room for question. As it enumerates a vacancy from one of four causes—"the death, resignation, inability or removal of the president"—it leaves a doubt whether a vacancy arising from another cause—viz. the death of the president elect—would entitle the vice president elect to succeed.

The death of both president and vice president elect would leave the succession still more doubtful. An argument can be made for a line of succession through the holdover members of the cabinet of the retiring president, but it is not absolutely conclusive. It probably would not satisfy everybody and thereby create a disputed title. It might even cause very serious trouble, and congress should take the necessary action to make the presidential succession absolutely clear and certain in every contingency. The late Senator Hoar labored for many years to get this matter set at rest. Senator Bacon has taken it up afresh, admonished of its necessity, possibly in the very wide discussion of this question since the election. It is a weak spot in our governmental organization which congress should strengthen and make secure without further delay.—Philadelphia Press.

While it will probably do no good, the Budget desires to enter a protest against the adoption by the Oregon legislature of the report of the joint fisheries committee in which it recommends the repeal of the law prohibiting purse seines and the repeal of the law enacted by the people at the recent election prohibiting fishing above tide water. This latter measure was adopted by the people by a large majority and one that would have been larger had the voters not been mislead by the title of another measure drawn up in opposition to it. To repeal that law would be not only endangering the whole fishing industry but would be as well indirect defiance of the expressed will of the people, a dangerous precedent to establish.

SAVE TIMBER

George S. Long of the Weyberhaeuser Timber Company, in speaking of the outlook for the timber industry on the Pacific coast said:

"Public sentiment, as typified by the conclusions of the conservation congress, is demanding less cutting of timber and less waste in lumbering; and public opinion as expressed by the consumer, is demanding lower prices.

"There is a sentiment aboard in the secured definite announcement of coast weights. No matter in the disposition of our lumber is given as slight consideration as to its correctness as the weighing of cars. It is the biggest percentage of our delivered prices and the scale weight and operation should be regularly supervised. Cars must be cut off at both ends when weighed, and they should be weighed light when convenient and the tare checked. Our transportation committee should be authorized to employ a weighing inspector.

"During the past year the lumber situation could not have been worse, and the bottom was reached in September. With the turning of the tide we have been gradually improving, and 1909 opens auspiciously. It will take lumber to the markets which buy all kinds of common lumber for all purposes.

"It is estimated that fully 25 per cent of all the lumber manufactured is consumed in the box industry, and yet of this vast consumption that goes into boxes, there is not 1 per cent of it made from fir lumber, simply because in the centers where the boxes are used it would cost nearly as much to pay the freight as the boxes sell for. This rises somewhat from the excessive weight of fir. If we should meet this situation by supplying our hemlock, which is far superior in quality to the average lumber used in the east for boxes, the lumber would first have to be thoroughly dried and reduced to its least possible weight before started east, to bear the burden of the heavy freight charges and ultimately every piece of hemlock should be so marketed that it will find a ready sale for box purposes, instead of leaving hemlock in the woods, to be destroyed by fire, every foot of it should be saved, and handled with such care that it will become a source of profit to us, instead of a loss."

There is something reassuring as well as pathetic in the attitude which the sultan of Turkey assumed toward the reform movement in his empire. He recently declared that the guardian of the rights and greatness of the government and the country is first the Almighty and after that the nation acting through its representatives. It was the forgetting of this lesson by the sultan himself that made Turkey the "sick man of Europe." Fortunately for Turkey and the outside world the lesson was driven home by the bayonet point, so to speak, before it was too late.

The autocratic sultan stood forth robbed of his power when the army of Albanians delivered the ultimatum last spring that the aspirations of the people must no longer be repressed. The Young Turks knew their man and his weakness. They inoculated the Albanians with the fever of liberty, and when the Albanian soldiers refused to obey the palace commands that cruel and perfidious sway, so long masked under religious symbols as God inspired, had to go. The sultan now declares that the enemies to constitutional government are his enemies. It is a deathbed repentance, yet it may buy salvation for the Ottoman empire.

"The most competent and judicious authorities," observes the New York Tribune, have decided that Poe is outclassed by certain of his cotemporaries and successors, whose names, it is true, are still remembered, although their works are seldom read. Therefore Poe must be excluded from the American Hall of Fame. The Tribune approves of the verdict, but fails to state whether regrets for this momentous discovery should be tendered to the memory of Poe or the "competent and judicious" watchdogs of the Hall of Fame.

If the fresh egg question hangs fire in congress as long as the average measure it will be likely to become a crying issue before it is hatched out.

Fewer marriages in 1908 don't imply that too many girls were slow, but that too many would-be benedicts overestimated leap year as an ally to laggards in love.

MARRIED MEN GET PREFERENCE

Orientals Must Give Way at Frazer River Mills

New Westminister B. C. , Feb. 2—All Hindus, Chinamen, Japanese and other Orientals at present employed at the big mills at Frazer are to be replaced by married white men next summer, the benedicts and their families being imported from the mills along the Rideau river, in Ontario. This announcement was made yesterday by Col. Davidson one of the largest share holders in the mills, who is shortly going East for the purpose of organizing the migration of the millhands, all of whom will be provided with transportation to the Coast.

Constant trouble experienced with Orientals, especially Hindus, is the reason assigned for the change of help. Tuberculosis has made considerable ravages among the East Indians, many of them being incapacitated for work for long periods. Once illness overtakes a Sikh, a substitute is provided for his work, but as all turbaned employes look alike to the managers of the several departments, and change is not noticed until the substitute's poor knowledge of the work he is expected to do is made manifest. Representations to the various bosses, among the Hindus have had absolutely no effect in the past.

The preference of the management for married white men is on account of the fact that shingle men, such as were employed at the mill previous to the influx of the Hindu hordes two years ago, are not reliable, and cannot be depended upon to remain at work after pay day. Many of them had their homes in Bellingham, Everett, Seattle or other near-by towns, and made practice of going across every week end, often remaining until the middle of the following week.

The married men, according to the reasoning of the officials, having their homes at the mills, would always be on hand when needed, and would not compel the plant to close down because of their absence.

OREGON TO HAVE NATIONAL PARK

Fulton Bill Creating Saddle Mountain Park

Washington, Feb. 2—Senator Fulton has secured the passage of his bill creating the Saddle Mountain National Park in townships 5 and 6, range [illegible] Oregon. Also his bill authorizing the construction of roads and bridges in the Warm Springs Indian Reservation, and House bill to pay the heirs of T. B. Miller for the loss of a ferryboat on the Columbia River incurred during the Bannock Indian war.

Senator Borune has secured a favorable report from the agricultural committee on his amendment adding Portland to the cities for the establishment of office for the inspection and grading of grain.

GRAYS HARBOR LUMBER CUT

Record Established During the Past Year

Hoquiam, Feb. 2.--Regardless of the year 1908 being an off year in the lumbering business, the mills of this city made a record in cutting a total of 261,000,000 feet of lumber during the twelve months. The best record made, and probably the banner cut of the Coast, was by the National Lumber and Box Company and the Hoquiam Lumber and Shingle Company. The annual cut was 83,221,119 feet and the cut of this same plant in 1907 was but 35,413,000. The cut of the Hoquiam Lumber and Shingle Company includes both lath and shingles, which swells the figures. In addition to the lumber cut, the number of shingles for the year, exclusive of the Hoquiam Lumber and Shingle Company, was 130,604,750 shingles.

Following is the cut of each mill: Grays Harber Lumber Company 26,686,325 Hoquiam Lumber and Shingle Co 83,320,000 National Lumber and Box Co 83,221,119 Northwestern Lumber Co 30,536,465 E. K. Wood Lumber Co. 35,262,839 total 261,026,775

This seems to have been a year of records, the Polson Logging Company cutting and putting in the waters of the harbor over 130,000,000 feet of logs. The value of the year's cut of lumber figured at $10 per thousand, which is at a low figure is placed at $2,610,000, while the value of the shingle output is about $250,000. This does not include the box business done, or value of doors, which will reach another $100,000.

REGULATIONS NOW EFFECTIVE

Limit Length of Barges Towed at Sea

Washington, Feb. 2—New regulations devised by the department of commerce and labor to limit the length of tows of seagoing barges become effective today. The regulations were adopted after long agitation and investigation of the question. For a number of years mariners have complained of the danger to navigation arising from the excessive length of the barge tows along the coast and in the harbors.

The new rules prescribe that barge tows navigating the inland waters of the United States shall not exceed four vessels tandem, including the tug, and that hawsers shall not run to a length greater than 75 fathoms. The total length of the tows therefore cannot exceed 2000 feet. Provision is made also for bunching the tows on entering New York, Boston and other harbors along the Atlantic coast.

Some discussion has been caused by the limitation of hawsers between vessels to 75 fathoms. Two hundred feet has not been unusual in practice and the lengths as a rule have run from 125 feet up. The regulations provide, however, for lengthening the distances in case of bad weather and outside of the harbors probably no difficulty will be experienced in complying with the law.

This is Ground Hog Day, according to the old belief and as the story goes the animals come out of their holes for the first time since last fall and if they see their shadows they return and severe weather will exist for six weeks but if they do not see their shadows they remain out and the backbone of the winter is believed to have been broken. It would be a very smart groundhog that could see his shadow it this vicinity today

The commissoners of Wahkiakum county have decided to make small but creditable display at the A-Y-P exposition. The work of the schools of the county is expected to make quite an interesting exhibit and Skamokawa shingles, which took first prizes at both the St. Louis and Lewis and Clark Exposition will form part of the display.

The work of repairing the wharf of the Klovenhausen cold storage plant at Altoona is progressing as rapidly as the weather conditions will permit and it is expected to be completed during the present week. The damage was done by the steamer Senator at the time her steering gear became disarranged so the O. R. & N. Co is making the repairs.

The condition of Dr. Peacock is reported to be considerably improved today and in fact he was permitted to have a few of his personal friends make short calls on him. Present indications are that he will recover from his wounds and be able to return to his home again in a short time. There is a possibility of complications arising but as a general proposition he is considered to be out of danger.

As was recently done in Clatsop county, parties from Portland and the Sound are now examining every acre of land subject to delinquent taxes in Wahkiakum county with a view of purchasing it as soon as it is offered for sale by the commissioners. These men are most optomistic in their views and say that people are coming from the east this spring to procure all the farming land possible in the lower Columbia river district and will engage in dairying.

The other business of the meeting will pertain to routine matters.

Daniel C. Ramey, a Clatsop county pioneer of 1847 and a man widely known thruout this section as well as in Portalnd, died at his home in Knappa this morning, the result of a stroke of paralysis with which he was afflicted on Friday night. Mr. Ramey, who was a brother of Mrs. Mary A. Twilight of Kanppa was born in Illinois on January 21, 1828, and at the time of his death was slightly over 81 years of age. At the conclusion of the regular order of business the new officers entertained the members at a banquet, that was elaborate of its kind as the decorations of the table represented the best work of the window dressers of the city and different parts of the table represented the several classes of the retail business.

The February term of the county court will be convened tomorrow morning and will probably continue during the balance of the week.

The 1908 tax roll will be opened for collections in the sheriff's office tomorrow, but it is not expected that much will be done during the first few days, as property owners are just beginning to file the lists of property on which they wish to pay so that statements can be issued

Through a private telegram, received here this afternoon from Salem, it is learned that the Beals bill to tax timberlands has been defeated in the senate and that there is no chance of it becoming a law. This will be a relief to many property owners in Clatsop county alone.

A trust deed whereby the Astoria-Seaside & Tillamook Railway Company transfers title to all its property to the Astoria Abstract Title & Trust Company, as trustee was filed for record in the county clerk's office shortly before five o'clock on Monday evening. The deed is in the nature of a mortgage given to the trustee, for the purpose of furnishing security for bonds in the sum of $1 500,000 which the railway company is issuing and has already made arrangements to float in the eastern markets to raise funds for constructing and operating the proposed line. This mortgage will cover the entire right-of-way and franchises so fast as the railway company acquires them, as well as the track, rolling stock, power houses and all other property which the company may own. The document is a voluminous affair, consisting of 25 typewritten sheets and is drawn up in the form required by the eastern firm which is to float the bonds.

When the resolution introduced by Belland, asking the police commission to instructed its officers to enforce the state laws against gambling and relative to Sunday closing of saloons, was readat the council meeting last evening Curtis said he favored it but wanted closing of "blind pigs" included. He said he knew of two places where liquor is sold in the dry precincts and understands there are at least five. Belland spoke of arrests being made in other places for gambling and violating the liquor laws, and continued: "But we never hear of anything of the kind here. That is, not because we have not a good police force. We have officers who are willing to enforce the law, but they have orders not to. It is nearly a year since the police commission asked this council for its opinion on the enforcement of certain laws and I think it is time that question was being answered." Mayor Smith said he understood that some of the Chinese gambling houses are running in full blast and added that unless some arrests are made, he will use the authority vested in him and suspend police officers for not attending to their duties. Following this discussion, a resolution was unanimously adopted as follows: "Whereas, the district attorney of the Fifth judicial district has given notice that he will strictly enforce the statutes of the state of Oregon relative to gambling and the Sunday closing of saloons, and Whereas, the enforcement of the said statutes has been rendered difficult owing to the failure of the police department to co-operate with the district attorney's office, therefore, Be it resolved by the common council of the city of Astoria: That the auditor and police judge of the city of Astoria, be and he is hereby instructed and directed to communicate with the honorable police commission of the city of Astoria and state to the said police commission that it is the desire of the common council of the city of Astoria that the said statutes relative to gambling, the Sunday closing of saloons and the unlawful sale of liquor in local option precincts be strictly enforced and that the police commission instruct all officers of the police department to assist in enforcing the same by arresting all violators of the said statutes and procuring sufficient evidence to convict."

Borah told the president he did not look for an outbreak in Idaho such as occurred in Nevada.

Nixon sent a telegram to the president of the Nevada senate and speaker of the assembly in which he said in part: "I have no desire to inject my views but after a conversation with the president, I hold it my duty as a representative of the people of Nevada to suggest to the legislature thru you gentlemen that the object of the resolutions may be injured by radical action at this time."

Disapproves Measure to Prohibit Distilleries

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 3 Governor Patterson has vetoed the bill prohibiting the amnufacture of intoxicating liquors after January 1, 1910. The veto among other things says: "If this legislature shall destroy all distilleries and breweries, why cannot the next one forbid the raising or selling of grains or the cultivation of grapes, out of which liquors are made? Shall this or some future legislature prevent the farmer raising or selling tobacco or the manufacture or placing of it on the market? If we thus started where shall we end? It is better not to make the start." It is a foregone conclusion the bill will be passed over the governor's veto.

JAP MOVEMENT TO AND FROM

In 1908 Net Reduction in America 1667

San Francisco, Feb. 3—Statistics purporting to show the decrease in immigration and increase in emigration of Japanese in America were issued today by the local Japanese consul. The tables, which were furnished by the Japanese foreign office, show that during 1908 the Japanese leaving the United States exceed those arriving by 1667.

Of 5493 Japanese leaving this country for Japan during the entire year, 4641 were steerage passengers, 545 second class and 307 saloon passengers. The figures show that 3836 Japanese arrived here during the year, 1510 being laborers and 2316 non-laborers.

JAP'S STORY EXAGGERATED

San Francisco, Feb. 3 The investigation into the attack on Kaneko, the Japanese graduate student at the University of California, which again threatened to start the sensational press and agitators among the Japanese to howling "international complications," shows that the victim of the so-called assault grossly exaggerated the matter. It develops that three young boys, under 16 years of age, knocked off the hat of the Japanese and then slapped him, but did not do him bodily harm, or intend to do him any real injury.

When President Wheeler, of the University of California, investigated the case, he found that the Japanese had exaggerated the assault and that no college boys and anything to do with the matter. President Wheeler conferred today with Secretary Mori, of the Japanese Association, of Berkeley, and it was decided to drop the case as unimportant. As a result no complaint will be made to the Japanese consul at San Francisco by the Berkeley Association.

FAMOUS HORSE'S BODY FOUND

Paris, Feb. 3—A straw-stuffed white horse, which has been found in the cellar of the Louvre, turns out to be Napoleon's famous charger Vizier, presented to him by the Sultan of Turkey. An examination of the records shows that the horse died in 1826 on the estate of De Chaulaere, the Emperor's equerry. The latter was forced to flee for a political crime and his effects were sold.

Napoleon's horse, which had been stuffed, was acquired by an Englishman, D. W. Clarke, who presented it to M. J. Graves, of Manchester, who in turn donated it to the Manchester Natural History Society. At the dissolution of the society in 1868 the horse was forwarded to Napoleon III and was relegated to the cellars of the Louvre. It was forgotten during the critical period preceding the downfall of the second empire.

NO MORE RACING IN WASHINGTON

Anti-Race Gambling Bill Passes Senate

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 3—The anti-race track gambling bill passed the senate today. It passed the house last week and makes pool-selling, book-making and conducting places where bets are made on horse races a felony and provides that the possession of gambling parpahenalia is prima facie evidence to sustain the act.

An emergency clause, which if adopted would put the law into effect immediately, was the principal point of contention in the senate. An amendment was adopted to the clause making the act take effect May 1 instead of immediately but the concession did not save the clause from defeat. When the roll was finally called the vote stood 23 for the emergency and 18 against. Without this clause the law becomes effective June 11th.

The house treated the senate's defeat of the emergency clause as an amendment to the act and by an unanimously vivi voce vote refused to concur. When the report of the house's action reached the senate, President Ruth ruled the senate had not amended the bill and declared the motion to appoint a conference committee out of order. The controversy between the two houses leaves the status of the bill in doubt.

MAINTAINS OPINION ON MERIT OF REARING PONDS

Superintendent of Chinook Hatchery Takes Issue with Union Officials on Best Methods of Protecting Salmon

Chinook, Wash. Feb. 2, 1909.

Editor Budget: In the Budget of Jan. 31 appeared an article with large headlines entitled: "Best Methods for Protection of Salmon," written by Messrs. Rosenberg and Lorntsen and which is supposed to be an answer to my article that appeared in the Weekly Budget of Jan. 6. I would not have known the article was written by these gentlemen and concerned me had I not seen my name mentioned. It is as much as anyone can expect from those who have nothing but theory and hearsay to go by. All that I can find in their article is a fish story spun by some of their friends and is taken for granted by them. Also some flimsy remarks about myself mixed with theories from 20 to 30 years old. They have so garbled my article in leaving out part of it that it is almost meaningless. But I suppose that is another trick of theirs to mislead the public. There is nothing in my article which lays stress upon the salmon spawning in the upper river as I distinctly mentioned that we should get our spawn from there. Messrs. Rosenberg and Lorntsen tell us that the salmon has not a chance to get there because the fish wheels are catching all of them. I must confess that I know but very little about a fish wheel and less about Celilo Falls which I understand by Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen are the slaughtering ground of all salmon that try to get to the upper spawning grounds. I wish it understood that if I am not certain in my allegations I will confess every time because some day I might be called upon to explain and it would be awful to stand before a set of men asking me questions and say "I don't know." This happened in Portland not long ago when a certain gentleman after spreading himself on the destruction which was done at Celilo Falls, one of the gentlemen asked him if he had been there and investigated, when the answer came in schoolboy fashion: "No, I have not." Still that same gentlemen thot he knew it all. Now we will come to some figures which they say don't lie and which don't show that allsalmon are slaughtered at Celilo Falls.

From Mr Van Dusen's annual report to the fish commission of 1903 we find the following. In the Grande Ronde river he took 8,613,425 spawn; in Ontario 12,732,900, which makes a total of 21,346,325; in 1903 and 1904 he gives Grande Ronde 1,773,000; Ontario 25,055,000, which makes a total of 26,828,000.

The annual report of 1907 gives Ontario 7,013,000. In 1908 they took 5,000,000 salmon spawn and if the sexes had been equal they would have about 10,000,000, but there were so many more males than females. Still Messers Rosenberg and Lorntsen say that no fish can go by Celilo Falls. Of course we must understand that there are seasons that fish will not go in to the rivers as plentiful as at others. When this above mentioned annual report of Mr. Van Dusen was made there were as many wheels running as at any time. When Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen accuse me of being in with the wheel owners I stamp that as a falsehood, but knowing the accusers it will not break my heart. It seemed to me that when Mr. Rosenberg was in Seattle at the meeting of the fish commission appointed by Governor Mead that he acted like a double dealer as he certainly was very friendly around the wheel owner, the same gentlemen they accuse me of being in with. I am making my living by hard work. Can those gentlemen look their fellow men straight in the face and say the same? There is no one paying me for agitating falsehoods and sporting around. In fact it would be beneath my principles to receive money under such pretence. Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen say that Mr. Bowers, chief of the U. S. bureau of fisheries and his western agent, Fish Commissioner Riseland of Washington and Fish Warden McAllister of Oregon, all of these gentlemen are for the wheels.

Next Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen dish up theories all the way from 20 to 30 years old. Some imported from Germany, others from British Columbia and a few from America. They state that Mr Bowers in 1907 wrote to Mr McGowan saying that he was not in favor of rearing ponds; that may be so, but if Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen would inquire more into this they will find that the government has rearing ponds right now in which they are feeding young fry till they become fingerlings. The next gentlemen they mention (whose name I do not like to give) no doubt was sincere in his belief when he said that fry should be liberated as soon as the yolk sac is absorbed, but it was, when he said so, only a theory with him, he had not tried to feed the fry until they became fingerlings. The same gentleman came to Chinook to investigate whether sealions eat salmon or not, but not being able to get a live sealion he found a dead one which had two salmon in its stomach. In connection with this I wish to state that Dr. Greene from the U. S. fisheries department was in Chinook last year and he most certainly found out that sealions eat salmon as he discovered seven salmon and a mass of unrecognizable stuff that no doubt had been salmon by the fish bones found. If I am not misinformed Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen quote the gentleman who said that fry should be liberated when the yolk sac was absorbed, but did not always think so, for as I have understood it the fry were liberated just as soon as they were hatched and it would not surprise me if the same thing was not in practice right in the state of Oregon.

Let this be as it will, we all have to learn except Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen; they know it all and what they don't know they borrow from Gerstory borrowed from the same unreliable friends.

But Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen tell me I am in goodly company when I have Messrs McGowan, Seufert and Warren as friends, but they are not in it. When I read the last of the gentlemens' article I think they are my real friends, for they say, no doubt the wheels will have to go, and then Mr. Hansen will be transferred to an upriver hatchery instead of making freak experiments in the Chinook pond. I hope the wheels will go so that I will not be disappointed. When A. C. Little was fish commissioner about eight years ago he wanted me to get away from the Chinook ponds, but I preferred my freak experiments and begged to remain. I hope to continue experimenting with Royal Chinook salmon with the same success as in the past, as proofs will show that I have over 200 marked salmon tails of the Chinook freaks.

If I thot that wheels were the cause of the depleted salmon run I would shout just as loudly as Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen, but we have and are at the present time gathering more spawn and fry than we can handle properly.

What is the use of discriminating against any gear or shortening the season. This year statistics say that there will be 27,000,000 fry liberated. Just think of that vast number; how many will we get in matured salmon. History has told us, and which is true, that less than one fifteenth part return whereas if taken proper care of we should have at the lowest figure one-fourth. Now we will take the figures of fry that will be liberated this years (27,000,000) and say that only one-fourth will return a matured fish which will make 2,250,000 cases of canned salmon.

You have in Mr. McAllister a man who has at many times expressed himself that he does not know anything man professors or British Columbia fish culturists. The gentlemen also tell us that fry should be liberated from the hatcheries when there is a freshet and muddy water. That's just what is being done now, and Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen need only to go to the farmers who live on the tide lands adjoining the rivers and learn from them of the thousands of small fry lying dead in their fields and in small water holes dying. As the small fry is unable to stem the tide they will go where there is less current and as a consequence they are stranded when the waters subside. Then they quote German professors as far back as 1880. With all respect to them I believe that they knew as much as some fish culturists today, but then it is only a theory and have not put them into practice. We have too many theorists, but few practical men.

Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen quote from different fish culturists to establish that salmon return to sea after they spawn.

Why don't they investigate these facts for themselves. I have raised fry up to fingerlings from 4 to 5 inches long, marked them and in four to five years they have returned as salmon, or freaks as Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen call them, weighing from 16 to 53 pounds. It seems strange that intelligent gillnetters of Astoria can't see that they have been lead into trouble. Think of the way the fishing law stands at the present day and last fall many gillnetters were arrested and deprived of fishing all for the agitation of these gentlemen. Before they came to this river we had peace and the worst of it is the fishermen are paying them to injure their work. They tell us that in 1889 the wheelmen and trapmen were assessed $400 to use where it would do the most good. This must have been before both these gentlemen's time and certainly another fish about fishing, but is willing to learn. He is learning fast and I hope that he will remain in office long so that he can go ahead with the work he has laid out—to centralize—it is our only salvation and I believe that the legislature will give him the $15,000 asked for and the people of Oregon will see the results which I know will be good.

When Messrs Rosenberg and Lorntsen answer this article I would like to have their own experience rather than borrowed goods. I have plenty of time to wait until they have acquired their own knowledge and then they will be able to talk on "the best methods for protection of salmon."

Supt. Chinook Fish Hatchery.

RAILROAD WORK PROGRESSES

Surveying and Construction Under Way in Klamath

Klamath Falls Or., Feb. — The engineers are putting up the grade stakes on the depot site of the California Northwestern railway at Klamath Falls and the contractors will be at work there within a few days. The depot site has been used as a pasture for the past summer, and the original stake were all down. The fill there will be about 12 inches, while the fill where the road crosses the canal quite a distance above the depot grounds is 13 feet. The heaviest part of the fill is completed and the donky engines and cars are now fast working toward the depot. The steam shovel below town worked through the Reames hill this week, and will be removed above the city. This will practically finish the grade between Kalmath Falls and the marsh work, and beyond all doubt the cars will be running into this city by May or the early summer.

The railroad surveying crew in Klamath county, on the Oregon Eastern railway north and the Modoc Southern south, have been in the field all during the winter. Engineer C. R. Rankin, on the Oregon Eastern has now established camps at the Klamath Indian agency, and his crew is working south toward this city again. Work above the Indian reservation had to be discontinued for some weeks on account of the depth of the snow.

Engineer B. F. Knowlton, on the Modoc Southern, has been working south from Merrill, and with the opening of spring will work toward the line of the California Northeastern in Klamath county.

NEW RED CROSS STAMP

Stromboli and Relief Symbol Will be on Italian Aid Issue

The Massachusetts branch of the Red Cross has adopted a new specially designed one cent stamp as an additional means of raising money for the fund to succor the afflicted people of Calabria and Sicily.

The familiar Christmas and New Year's stamps for the benefit of the tuberculosis campaign have been remarkably successful. Since the Italian disaster all sales of these stamps have been for the benefit of the Italian fund. About 2,500 a day have been sold at the general postoffice alone but it has been thought best to have something distinctive.

The new stamp is triangular in form and represents Stromboli surmounted by clouds of smoke and steam, out of which, clear and triumphant, arises the Red Cross symbol.

The stamp design is the joint gift of Artists Mary Ware Dennett and Alice Morse who were consulted by the Red Cross officers.

The Atmosphere of Mars.

Professor Percival Lowell, the astronomer, says that the assistants at his observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., have been able to determine that there is measurable water vapor on the planet Mars and that the atmosphere of Mars affects the spectrum in the same way, though only one-fifth as much, as does the earth's atmosphere. There has been much controversy with reference to the atmosphere of Mars and its qualities. Those scientists who disbelieve in any life on the planet have known that their point could be proved if the absence of an atmosphere should be shown.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

The Way the Captain of a Slave Trader was Convicted

Romance writers are often blamed for making the plots of their stories turn upon slight chances and improbable incidents but here is an incident in real life stranger than fiction.

In 1799 the cutter Sparrow brought the brig Nancy into harbor at Kingston, Jamaica under suspicion that she was engaged in the slave trade. But, although many circumstances pointed to this fact, no clear proof could be obtained, as the brig had no papers from which the charge could be substantiated. The suspected vessel was therefore discharged, but the day before she left the harbor a man-of-war arrived, bringing some documents that clearly proved her guilt.

These papers had been obtained in a "highly improbable manner." While cruising off the coast of Santo Domingo the crew of the man-of-war had amused themselves by fishing for sharks. One monster was captured and cut up on deck, and in its stomach was found a bundle of ship's papers, the very documents flung overboard by the captain of the Nancy when he was boarded by the Sparrow.

Curiosity led the captain of the man-of-war to clean and examine the papers, and the result was that he brought them before the authorities at the nearest port. The unlucky brig was condemned on this romantically acquired evidence.—St. Paul Pioneer Press

A Lame Excuse.

"A French sentinel in Algeria," said a playwright, "had for his colonel a very tall, lanky, round shouldered man. This round shouldered colonel one night was making a quiet inspection. Passing the sentinel, he found, to his rage and indignation, that he was not challenged. So he returned to the man and roared:

" 'You didn't challenge me!'

" 'N-no, sir,' faltered the sentinel, saluting.

" 'Well, why didn't you?' the colonel demanded.

" 'Excuse me, sir,' said the sentinel, 'but I thought—I beg your pardon, sir—I thought you was a camel.' "

His Denomination.

A man who had been playing golf with a clergyman heard him swear two or three times under his breath. Suspecting the lapse, he could not be sure of it until one monosyllable came out with unmistakable clearness. After he had finished the match a friend of his said: "I saw you playing just now with the Rev. Mr. Dash. Of what denomination is he?" "Some people say he is a Congregationalist," replied his late opponent, "but I should call him a Profanitarian."—Argonaut

New Year's cakes in various grotesque forms were added to the regulation kind with which bakeshops and New Year's tables in Germany are decorated every year. Among those which attracted the most attention and sold best were the kaiserkuchen, which represented the German emperor with his mouth closely bandaged; Chancellor Bulow, as a jack in the box; President Roosevelt, rifle in hand, with a slain elephant on his back and a Zeppelin airship carrying the British islands away into space.

A VISION ON THE VELDT

The Form on the Rocks That Confronted the Soldier

I thought I saw a form of some kind between the bowlders. I jumped to the conclusion that it was a soldier. In a second it had vanished. I challenged but got no answer. Those pieces of rock seemed to terrify me.

I advanced toward them, but saw nothing. I retired back and took up my position leaning on my rifle. My eyes went again to the same place and there, standing between the two bowlders, was the outline of a woman. I brought my rifle to the present, covering the form which stood before me. I saw her walk from one piece of rock to the other.

I watched and saw her repeat her action. She then stopped and leaned up against one of the bowlders with her back toward me. I again advanced to where she stood. When I had got to within forty or fifty yards of her I saw her turn round and look straight at me with a careworn and sorrowful face.

Then I saw and knew who she was. It was my own mother. I was not mistaken, for she walked within a few yards of me, at the same time looking me dead in the face. She then turned about and walked to the two pieces of rock, and I saw no more of her. About three weeks after I received a letter from home telling me of her death and burial.—"A Grenadier's South African Reminiscence" in Occult Review.

Gambling For Maids.

"Many queer reasons are advanced by servant girls for losing a place," said the manager of the employment bureau, "but the queerest I have ever heard was given by a girl who blew in here last week. Her late mistress was a bridge fiend. One day for the want of money to bet she and her friends played with their maids for stakes. At the end of the game each woman considered herself in honor bound to stick to her agreement, and an attempt was really made to swap servants according to the ups and downs of the game. Some of the girls thus raffled off changed places willingly enough, but that client of mine refused to be swapped and hustled around hunting a new job."—New York Sun.

Rough on His Lordship.

A carpenter in an English town having neglected to make a gibbet that had been ordered by the hangman on the ground that he had not been paid for the last one he had erected gave so much offense that the next time the judge came to the circuit he was sent for.

"Fellow," said the judge in a stern tone, "how came you to neglect making the gibbet that was ordered on my account?"

"I humbly beg your pardon," replied the carpenter. "Had I known it was for your lordship it would have been done immediately."

The Wave of Indulgence.

Indulgence nowadays is very much exaggerated. We have even come to admire clever thieves, and as long as we are not the victims of the theft we are quite enthusiastic for the rogue who shows great cunning and daring in his crimes. He is almost a hero in our eyes, and we call him a genius.—Paris Figaro.

He Discovered Why.

Mr. Oldboy—Why do you bring so much water, Tommy? I merely asked for a drink.

Tommy—I thought you'd need more than a glassful, 'cause sister said you was the driest old stick she ever knew.—Illustrated Bits.

Gentle Hint.

Jack—Every night I would stand under her window and give a slight cough.

The Alert Japanese.

Another little illustration of the mental alertness of the Japanese. Every one of the American flags which they displayed in welcoming the United States fleet was provided with the full number of forty-six stars. Every one had been made to order for the occasion. No wonder the Japs use the rising sun as their emblem. They get up early in the morning.—Youth's Companion

CONVENTION OF "HOBOS"

J. Eads How Calls Them to Meet in St. Louis Feb. 22

J. Eads How, known as the "king of hoboes," has been heard from. Two months ago he left New York, and the first intimation of his whereabouts since then became known recently, when his followers in New York city received from him an invitation to attend a national convention of "hoboes" in St. Louis. The letter reads:

"Realizing that this is going to be a hard winter and that there are all the way from 55,000 to 100,000 men out of employment in all the large cities of the country, we have decided to call a convention of delegates from the different centers to meet in St. Louis on Jan. 22, 23 and 24. The object of this convention will be to endeavor to secure employment for all those desiring work and to attempt to get transportation for unemployed men to their jobs, as well as to consider other matters that are very vital to the unemployed."

Pigs' Blood For Tuberculosis.

Pigs' blood medically prepared is of the highest value in the cure of incipient tuberculosis, according to an announcement recently made by Dr. Daniel E. Ricardo, lecturer on gynecology and surgery in the Postgraduate Medical college at Chicago. Ox blood or cow blood is also good, according to the physician, but he places the highest value on pigs' blood, because the latter contains a much higher percentage of hemoglobin—the red part of the blood corpuscles.

DO YOU KNOW

* * * * * *

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

The progress being made in connection with the building of the proposed electric road to Seaside is most encouraging and indicates that without doubt construction on the road will be underway with in a very few weeks. The building of this road will be of great benefit to Astoria as well as to the section, which it will traverse, and its completion will mean the starting of electric lines to other parts of the county.

In commenting on the great waste of timber in all parts of the Pacific coast section, Mr. Long of the Weyerheauser Company said: "The Eastern lumberman who visits the Pacific coast is horrified and surprised at the waste in our methods of lumbering; he has been taught by experience that it is profitable to save everything. He does not see that there may be no profit in the economies which he has practiced in the East. He does not realize that the same kind of necessity which led our forefathers to waste the forests on the Atlantic coast, forces the Pacific coast manufacturer to throw away much raw material because it is a loss to manufacture it. But there is an advent of better times and conditions rapidly approaching. It will mean more care in logging; the bringing out of the woods fully 100 per cent. of the forest product, instead of 60 per cent. of it. The time is fast approaching when every sawmill man who expects to cater to the eastern trade must have more lumber sheds and ample piling room for his products, The man who builds sawmills today makes a mistake if he does not provide three or four times as much yard room as has been the practic in the past. The time will come when it will be just as safe for the western coast manufacturer to cut his timber close in the woods, and manufacture his lumber for the staple sizes that the trade wants, and put it in piles until it is thoroughly dried, and then find a market for it; until this time does come, it will be a difficult matter to practice many of the economies which today are not in evidence on the Pacific coast. Logging will be done by electricity at no distant date. Enough wood is burned in the forests to generate more than enough power to operate the mills, the donkey engines, the logging locomotives. This is a matter that every practical lumberman should look into. It means greater economy and greater profits in more ways than one. There is no power so satisfactory in logging as electricity. More work can be accomplished, and the fire hazard is reduced enormously." The pooling of the lumbermen for the purpose of selling lumber, instead of individual selling as at present, was also urged by Mr Long. He urged the lumbermen to organize selling agencies in different localities to handle the output of the mills. He said that such a system would eliminate much price-cutting and would do away with the middleman, that prices would be more uniform; that manufacturers would make more money than at present.

FIRST CATCH YOUR NOVELIST

Recently Anthony Hope discussed the ever pertinent question [illegible] making of a novelist. His remarks bore directly upon the attempt to establish classes in fiction writing at the higher institutions of learning. Mr Hope makes many good points against the theory that literature is a profession which can be mastered by routine application like the law and engineering. While admitting that one novelist may train another he insists that the teacher must have at the start a novelist for his pupil or his labor will be wasted. He cites the case of the French master Flaubert teaching the still greater Maupassant, but says "Flaubert had in Maupassant a born novelist caught young."

Mr Hope deprecates classes in fiction. If they are inevitable he suggests that only those candidates who have natural bent or fancy be accepted. That should prevent the spoiling of many a good clerk or other useful factor in business to make a poor novelist. As for the born novelist, at school the honest professor would tell him, that he doesn't amount to much anyway and thus smother the native fire before it bursts into flame. At best the school taught writer would be another Anthony Trollope, good for so many words every day in the year. It is said that every life has at least one romance in it. Now and then a soul does not rest until the story is told. If it is a good one the world cries for more and the novelist comes to himself.

Discussion as to whether Paul Jones or John Barry was the father of the American navy can wait until critics and experts determine that our armament is worth making a to do over.

OLICE BOARD MAKES A REPLY

o Charges of The City Council

The Astoria board of police commis ners held a regular monthly meeting the city hall on Tuesday evening th Commissioners Gordon and Logan ing present, Chairman Foard being t of the city. After the regular tine business had been transacted e recent criticism of the board by e city council was discussed and the lowing statement was adopted and ven out for publication:

"The police commission resents the blic statement that orders have been ven policemen not to enforce any dinance, because it is incorrect. No ch orders have been given, either as body or as individuals. Nothing ould happen to any policeman if he ade arrests for gambling or selling quor on Sunday."

"At the same time, it is the opinion the commissioners that the first ty of the police is to protect persons nd property, and to give more atten on to that than to breaking down the oors of Chinese houses, or spying on en in the back rooms of saloons and igar stores. The commissioners are atisfied that the police force has ade Astoria the safest town to live in hat there is in the whole country, nd are doing all they can to keep it o. In Portland, raids on Chinese amblers, Sunday liquor sellers and dis olute women seem to be the principal uties of the police, while highway obberies are reported by the hundreds. Multnomah county admits 25 murders ast year; Clatsop county not one. The recent saloon robbery and holdup ook place while the officer of the beat was eating his midnight lunch. Po icemen have to take time to eat, but t is likely there would be more robbers f they spent their time looking over ransoms or through key holes, seeking evidence to convict men for playing ard games for money. The place for olice on duty is on the street or at he station, where they can be found y anyone who knows of a crime or violation of an ordinance to call their ttention to."

HAPPENINGS IN THE NEHALEM

Everything Prosperous in that Growing Section

Jewell, Oregon, Feb. 1, 1909.

Editor Budget: Dave Alexander and wife went to Astoria Thursday to remain indefinitely. Dave intends to accept employment in some logging camp, and remain wherever employed thru the winter. He recently sold out his interest here in Nehalem to his father.

Eli Foster went to Astoria today with a load of butter. Eli has been milking 18 or 20 cows and shipping the cream to the Hazelwood Cream Co until recently, he decided that making butter was more profitable than shipping cream, so went into the butter business, and is making "good" so far.

Martin Jr. and friend came in from Astoria yesterday to spend a couple of months on his place near the "falls" His father recently purchased the place, which formerly belonged to John Wismere located between the falls and the junction of the Jewell and Elsie road. In answer to a question, he said the road was hub deep in mud from Olney into Jewell and about all one could do to get over it with a team. He was told, everyone living in here had grown accustomed to the road being in that condition, and in one sense of the word, it operated in our favor, in-as-much, as it keeps us farmers from going to town, and thereby saved us money.

Born on Tuesday to the wife of David Tweedle a son. Both mother and son are reported doing fine.

Willie Wage is helping Mr. Jamieson this week cut wood, and assisting in getting out shakes with which to cover his threshing engine. Jim's crop of oats last fall was badly damaged by getting wet in the field before he could get around to thresh them. He is now using them to fatten 80 head of fine hogs he has on hand.

Ralph Wooden, our popular new road supervisor was out yesterday making repairs to the road.

Will May went to Astoria Friday and returned Saturday with medicine for his youngest child who is reported as being quite ill.

Robbie Pope and Ed. Ridderbusch of Elsie passed thru here this morning on their way to Astoria. They had with them a petition for a bridge across the Nehalem which they were going to present to the county court, and which was signed by every one living in here with one or two exceptions.

OREGON TIMBER CHANGES HANDS

Three Deals Involving Many Thousands

Elgin, Or., Feb. 3—By a merger effected here last night to the Hacket Lumber company, the Star Planing Mill and J. L. Oberton, a strong company was incorporated under the name of Hacket Lumber company, capitalized at $50,000

The new company controls about 40,000,000 million of a fine grade of timber averaging 95 per cent yellow pine, the large plant of the Star Planing Mill and several well equipped sawmills.

The office and planner will be located at Elgin. The officers are: J. L. Overton, president; N. A. Hackett, general manager. They are stockholders with C. Gannett and C. Reiber.

WALLOWA TIMBER.

McAllister, Ore., Feb. 3 The Palmer Lumber Company of La Grand has purchased the Wallowa and union counties holding of the Crosset Lumber company of Iowa. The deal involves about 50,000 acres and the price $700,000. The land lies adjacent to the Wallowa river between its junction with the Grand Ronde extending east of Minum river,.

The transaction is believed to be but a preliminary move on the part of the Palmer Lumber Company to sell its entire holdingss of more than 100,000 acres to a Chicago syndicate. This deal is pending and is expected to be closed as soon as the experts sent out from Chicago can complete their report. The experts spent many weeks in Wallowa and Union counties, cruising the timber land and running section lines. If this transfer is made and it seems assured the price will be about $2,000,000. In addition to the timber lands owned by the Palmer Lumber company it opreates a sawmill at La Grande with a capacity of between 200,000 and 300,000 feet a day. This will be included in the deal. The Palmer company is at presented operating a logging camp about 12 miles from Elgin, employing 120 men.

DEAL IN LANE.

Eugene, Ore., Feb. 3—A $250,000 timber deal is being made in Eugene between Fred Fisk, ex-sheriff and now a timber broker representing several timber owners on the Siuslaw river, and Portland parties. A check from a Portland bank for $150,000 in part payment for the land was received at a local bank yesterday and the remainder will be paid when the deeds are delivered in a few days. The names of the purchasers are not given out. The timber being sold is some of the best in the state and lies in two large tracts, owned by a number of persons, most of whom reside in this country.

PIANO RECITAL TONIGHT

Dr. Emil Enna will Appear at Memorial Lutheran Church.

The music loving people of Astoria will have a treat this evening at the Memorial Lutheran church at 10th and Exchange street. Dr. Emil Enna, the well known pianist, will give a piano recital, his program will consist of numbers from the greatest classic and modern composers and as Mr. Enna has many admirers in Astoria he will undoubtedly have a full house.

The Eilers Piano house has sent down from Portland the largest concert grand piano ever built for Mr. Enna's use. This piano is a Weber and is 10½ feet in length, the longest string measure 8½ feet, the keys are seven inches longer than any ordinary piano key and it weighs over 1500 pounds. This construction gives the pianist an opportunity to produce a wonderful orchestral effect and a magnificent tone. An ordinary piano has always three steel strings for each key, but this piano has four, it was originally constructed for Miss Adela Verne, the great English pianist who is touring this country and creating a most wonderful success.

LARGE CENTRAL HATCHERY

Legislature Is Asked For an Appropriation

In his monthly report to the state board of fish commissioners, Fish Warden McAllister says in part:

"For your information, I respectfully call your attention to two bills I have introduced in the senate. In one I am asking for an appropriation of $20,000 for the operation and maintenance of coast stream hatcheries; the other for $15,000 to build and equip a central hatchery station on the Columbia river. Both of these bills should pass and I trust you as the board of fish commissioners, will use your influence to that end.

"The citizens of this state who live on our coast stream, from the California line to the mouth of the Columbia river, are asking nothing of the state excepting the above mentioned appropriation for salmon hatcheries and are depending on me, in a measure, to look after their interest. They realize that without the appropriation the hatcheries must of necessity be closed as the revenue derived from the issuance of licenses on these streams is not sufficient to operate them. As you are well aware, the results of our hatchery work on these streams are just bearing fruit; and, if discontinued at this time, would all be lost and hundreds of our best citizens be deprived of a livlihood.

"That a central hatchery should be built at some point on the Columbia river, below all irrigating ditches and power wheels, is obvious to every one familiar with the salmon situation. The revenue derived from this district is ample to operate and maintain the hatcheries, and also the central station, in the event of this being built.

Unconvinced.

Mrs Emerson—Waldo I was surprised to hear you say, "Hello, Mrs. Baker." Hello is a word that nice people don't use. They say, "How do you do?"

Waldo (aged five)—Why, mother, you never say "How do you do, central?"

Smith and the capital stock is $50,000. The object of the company is to conduct a general merchandise business in this city.

Captain Huelin, master of the British ship Aberfoyle, has received orders from his owner to load 100 tons of ballast in the limbers and to anchor in the stream. Work will begin immediately. It is probable that the vessel will be fixed for lumber within the next few days. Negotiations have been under way for several weeks for the chartering of the vessel.

An order was made in the probate court today appointing Martin Johnson, John Edwards and Alex Frederickson as appraisers of the estate of Einar, Ellen, Joseph, Arvid and Bernhard Svenson, minors. An order was also made appointing the same men as appraisers of the estate of Peter E. Svenson, deceased.

Strange as it may seem there appears to be a number of persons who do not understand the nature of the deed which the Astoria, Seaside & Tillamook Railway Company gave to the Astoria Abstract, Title & Trust Company. The issuing of this trust deed does not mean that the railway company has disposed of its holdings It is merely one of the necessary steps to furnish security for the bonds which are being floated too raise funds for building the road, and is the same procedure as is taken in all such projects.

Mrs. A. Longtaine, who has been confined in the county jail at Cathlamet since last Friday on a charge of shooting and dangerously wounding Dr. Peacock, was arraigned in Justice Graham's court yesterday afternoon and released under $500 bonds. Orders have been issued by the county authorities there forbidding any of the saloons to sell Mr. Longtaine any liquor, as according to reports he has been making threats against certain persons.

One hopeful sign is shown of the coming spring in the prices paid by the local merchants to help farmers of this vicinity for their livestock and produce. It is the reduction of butter five cents per roll and with another prospective drop in sight. This is said to be in anticipation of the California butter that is sure to be on the market soon after the prolific rains in that state. Potatoes are steady and may go higher as so many were frozen during the recent cold spell, some farmers losing their entire crop by not having them properly protected.

The February term of the county court was convened this morning and a great portion of the day's session was consumed in auditing claims on the various funds. A report was submitting stating that the contract awarded to James Boyle to make a fill on the Little Walluksi road is completed. J. F. Bartoldus was instructed to make an examination of the fill and upon his approval of the work, the clerk was directed to drawn a warrant in favor of James Boyle in the sum of $220. The bonds of the supervisors of several road districts were approved.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Astoria school board on Tuesday evening the question of smoking by pupils of the schools was discussed at length and while there was a question as to the authority of the board with reference to while the pupils were away from school property a resolution was adopted that anyone found smoking on the school grounds will be expelled and permanently kept out of the schools after this edict has been formally announced. With the exception of the formal resignation of Miss Goddard being accepted as a teacher only routine business was transacted at the meeting.

Rights-of-way for the electric line to Seaside are gradually being received. Deeds from W. I. Morrison and H. C. Thompson arrived today and others for rights-of-way thru property owned by estates and companies requiring a number of signatures have been approved and are now being signed. There is only one tract of any size left over which the right-of-way has not been secured and this will probably be in during the present week.

Our attention has been called to the fact that when the Westminister Guild had been mentioned in connection with the concert to be given on Friday evening of this week, a great many people have not recognized it as belonging to this city. This society which was organized in December, is composed of young women of the Presbyterian church and has Mrs. A. D. Garner, Mrs. C. A. Gearhart, Mrs. W. S. Gilbert and Mrs. Higgins as patronesses.

Captain C. J. Peters, master of the dredge Oregon, which is working on the channel in Coos Bay, has completed his first month of service and reports from Marshfield show that he has been successful in the work to which he has been assigned. During the 26 working days he has dug a channel 300 feet wide and 20 feet deep at low water from Smith's mill to the lower coal bunkers. All material from the bottom of the bay is being used to fill in tide lands. The dredge is now working in front of Marshfield.

The tax roll was opened for collections this morning and during the day quite a number of property owners paid the amounts assessed against their property, while many more brought in lists of their holdings to have statements prepared. The mails during the past day or two have brought remittances sufficient to reduce the roll $1056.50. On this amount, rebates in the sum of $31.21 were allowed, so the total cash receipts up to this morning were $1025.29. The three per cent rebate is allowed on all taxes paid prior to March 15 and before that time expires it is expected by far the greater portion of the roll will have been collected.

Rejection of the offer made by J. P. O'Brien, of the tug Wallula, for $80,000, ordering bids for two ocean going tugs on plans and specifications furnished, authorizing a survey to be made of the river towboat Oklahama and the appointment of John Driscoll to go to Salem in the interests of the pilotage bill now pending, were features of a special session of the Port of Portland, held yesterday afternoon. It was the consensus of opinion of the members that it is wise to use much precaution in the selection of tugs and tow boats, and according to the action taken, there will be no purchases of boats until a thorough investigation is made to determine a proper price. W. D. Wheelwright, speaking on the subject, expressed what proved to be the general desire of the other members when he said he would favor buying new craft to the exclusion of old. A letter was received from Mr. O'Brien, general manager of the Harriman lines in the northwest, offering the tug Wallula for $80,000 and the towboat Oklahama for $30,000. Mr. O'Brien said he regarded both as very fair prices. He thought, he said, it would be impossible for the port to build a tug as good as the Wallula for less than $100,000. In this regard, however, he was believed by Chief Engineer Lockwood, to be in error, as Mr. Lockwood declared that its equal or better can be purchased for $41,000. Therefore, the offer was rejected.

A large delegation of Portland sportsmen appeared before a joint meeting yesterday of the senate and house committee of the Oregon legislature, when the bill proposed by the Oregon Fish and Game Association and codifying the game laws of the state was considered. There was some criticism of the restrictions imposed on duck and pheasant hunting, but it is understood that a majority of the committee favors the bill as presented, with the exception of a few slight changes as to the season for hunting some of the game birds protected thereunder. Some of the sportsmen opposed that provision of the bill which closes for two years absolutely the season for hunting Chinese pheasants and provides that thereafter only male birds shall be killed and only from October 1 to December 1. Representative Brandon, a Linn county farmer, however, ventured the information that this protection was positively necessary if this game was not to be exterminated. Others opposed that feature of the bill which extends March 1 the season for hunting ducks. This is the only change in the present law and merely extends the season one month longer.

CHARGE AGAINST EX-GOVERNOR

Toole Accused of Connection With Land Frauds

Helena, Mont., Feb. 4—Sensational testimony, affecting Former Governor Joseph K. Toole, has been advanced before the legislative inquiry into the general land situation. W. A. Prodger, a Kailspell liveryman when on the stand testified that General Superintendent McRae of the Northwestern Lumber Co. had informed him that the first negotiations for the transfer of fifty thousand acres of state lands to the three timber concerns involved, would have been carried out immediately save for the alleged demand of Governor Toole for more funds, ten thousand dollars being mentioned as the alleged "graft" in this instance. McRae took the stand and denied having made such a statement and Governor Toole vehemently denied the allegation, as did other members of the board that they had received any money or any other consideration. The exoneration of the board members seems certain.

ANTI-JAPANESE BILL KILLED

Sacramento, Calif., Feb. 4—Grove L. COMMITTEE IN DIFFICULTY

In Preparing Reply to Demand for Inquiry

Washington, Feb. 4—The special committee of the senate committee on judiciary which is investigating the Tennessee coal and Iron absorption by the United States Steel Corporation expects to meet great difficulty in preparing a reply to the Culberson resolution, providing for an inquiry. The resolution calls upon the committee to report by what authority the president permitted the merger. Nothing, which seems to warrant the president giving his consent to the absorption nor anything which seems to demand that he should have forbidden the merger. It is even possible no report whatever will be made to the senate response resolution.

INTEREST OVER PENSION BILL

President Expected to Return it with Veto

Washington, Feb. 4—General interest is shown among congressmen today over the report that the president intends to veto the census bill on account of its provisions excluding the 3,000 employes of the census bureau in this city from the classified civil service. If the bill is vetoed it will be the most important measure he has antagonized in that way and if congress should pass it over his veto it will be the first time such action has been taken. The sentiment in congress favoring the census bill in its present form is so extensive that it is generally believed that a two thirds vote can be obtained for it.

ADDITION TO NEVADA FOREST

Made by Order President Has Signed

Washington, Feb. 4—The president as just signed a proclamation adding 600,185 acres to the Humboldt national forest in the northern part of Elko county, Nev., bordering on the Idaho pine. This area contains a large amount of pine, fir, and aspen timber estimated at 64,000,000 linear feet. This timber, although not all availabale at present, is practically all accessible and can be handled by employing modern methods of logging. This addition gives the forest a total area of 1,168,-818 acres.

This recent addition to the Humboldt national forest covers a region of vital importance from a watershed stand point, since many important streams upon which extensive irrigation projects are dependent have their source in the forest. Mining is also an important industry of the region and promises great development in the future. Already a number of stamp mills have been established. These mills are also dependent upon the streams of the region, and the future welfare of the industry is almost entirely dependent upon a cheap and nearby supply of timber for fuel and mine props.

Stock raising is another important industry which can be greatly developed in this region by assigning certain districts to the various stockowners and thus avoiding unnecessary trampling out of the grass. The recent addition to the Humboldt forest has the hearty support of practically all the local residents who have submitted various petitions and letters requesting that the additions be created. The Humboldt forest will remain in charge of Forest Supervisor C. Sydney Tremewan, with headquarters at Elko.

DUST STORM INJURES WHEAT

Great Damage Done in Umatilla County

Pendleton, Or., Feb —In the opinion of many farmers much damage was done to growing grain by the dust storm of yesterday and last night. Reports from the surrounding country indicate that the storm was much worse than was at first supposed, the sheltered location of the city preventing the full force of the storm being felt here. In fields where the soil was loose the dirt was blown away from the roots of the grain, leaving them unprotected and causing the grain to fall over. In other places the soil was made to drift like snow, burying some of the wheat so deep it will never see light again.

Great havoc was also wreaked on the roads and much difficulty was encountered by those attempting to come to town. It was almost impossible to go in the face of the storm, while the holes that were scooped out and the dust drifts made fast going with the wind precarious.

COASTWISE RATE IS WEAKER

Charter Prices Are Reported as Lower

San Francisco, Feb. 4—Late reports of the coastwise freight market indicate a sickly condition of affairs. The steamer Daisy Freeman has been fixed to load in Willapa harbor for this port at $3.50 and the Tahoe to load on Grays Harbor for San Pedro at $4.25, both these fixtures marking a reduction of 25 cents from the former rates, while it is reported that a fixture has been made from Grays Harbor to San Pedro at as low as $4.

The Riverton Lumber company which recently went into bankruptcy, will have its mill machinery and all its timber holdings in Coos county Oregon sold at auction, a call for bids for the propery to be opened February 15, having been made by Trustee T. L. Johnson.

It was reported today that the Alaska Packers' association had finally decided to purchase the American bark Homeward Bound, owned by Hind, Rolph & Co. This vessel, with the Star of Scotland, formerly the Kenilworth, and the Star of Iceland, formerly the Wiliscott, will give the Packers' association three of the finest American bottoms afloat.

EFFORT TO SAVE SUNKEN STEAMER

Attempt Will be Made to Float Republic

New Bedfrod, Mass., Feb. 4 Although she lies at the bottom of the Atlantic, in the open sea, at a depth variously estimated from 38 to [illegible] fathoms, attempts may be made as an experiment to raise the White Star liner Republic, which sank after being in collision with the Lloyd-Italiano steamer Florida W. W. Witherspoon, of the John Arbuckle Wrecking Company, who had charge [illegible] the work of raising the cruiser Yankee, is now figuring on the probable damage to the Republic

"We have been looking for a deep water job for some time," he said, "and a steamer wrecked in the Klondike region was first to come under consideration. The Republic affords us the opportunity, perhaps, to demonstrate the method. The steamer is certainly worth saving. If it was a pile of $1,000,000 in gold down at the bottom of the sea, someone would be going "after it."

PENDLETON TO HAVE NEW MILL

Woolen Works Will Be Rebuilt by Bishop Brothers

Pendleton, Or., Feb. 4—Through hard work on the part of the Commercial club committee the woolen mill proposition is now practically assured Pendleton. The mill will be rebuilt by Bishop Brothers. Of the $30,000 needed to take the bond issue, the sum of $27,000 has been raised. The remainder will be secured in a few days.

Electric power will probably be used for operating purposes. It is understood that satisfactory rate has been secured, though no formal announcement has been made. Unless unforeseen difficulties arise the new company will be formed at once and the rebuilding of the mill undertaken. The machinery of the old woolen mill was recently purchased by Bishop Brothers. The new mill buildings will be of reenforced concrete.

It is understood that a total sum of $45,000 will be invested in the business.

PERFECTION IN LITERATURE

Example of Charles Dudley Warner's Painstaking

The extraordinary pains and patience with which Charles Dudley Warner did his literary work are shown in an account given by a writer in the New Amstel magazine of the strenuous way in which Mr. Warner produced an obituary notice some years ago.

Professor Edward L. Youmans was a close personal friend of Mr. Warner, and on that account when Mrs. Youmans died the editor of a daily paper asked Mr. Warner to write a sort of personal appreciation of her. This he consented to do.

He was left alone from 10 a. m. until half past 12, when he went to lunch. Returning at 2 o'clock, he worked without interruption until 4 o'clock when he turned over to the editor what he had written.

Yet the work was not complete. Mr. Warner read the first proof and in succession three revised sheets.

Each time he made change after change in phraseology, seeking out the one right word, while even in the nicety of paragraphing he seemed to make clearer what he desired to express. Nor did the close revision end with the marking of the last proof.

After the paper had gone to press and the first sheets had been brought up to the composing room for an O. K. Mr. Warner looked wistfully at the editor and observed:

"Would you object to lifting the form? I see a sentence in the last paragraph that might be somewhat changed. She was too good, you know, to have a slovenly tribute paid to her."

Even the printers refused to get angry over the delay, and forthwith the form was sent up and changes went on for an hour. At last, though publication was delayed fully two hours, the editor, but not Mr. Warner, had the supreme satisfaction of knowing that the work was as nearly perfect as human art could make it, and the edition was sent out.

A Bashful Wooer.

He loved her, but quailed at confessing it
Till one eve—where's the harm?—

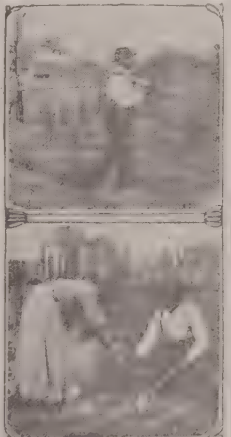
POSSUM AND POLITICS

POSSUM meat is considered about as appetizing a dish as could be set before anybody, even a king, by some connoisseurs in such matters. Therefore it was as high a compliment as could be paid President Elect William H. Taft by his Georgia neighbors when they [illegible] up a "possum dinner" in his honor at the Auditorium in Atlanta. Not that the menu was to be confined to possums. But that sweet and juicy animal was decided upon as the central attraction of the feast, barring, of course, the honored guest himself. Since Judge Taft took up his winter residence in Georgia he has been feasted a good deal. If he desires to keep down his flesh by his conscientious exercise on the golf links, he certainly is subjected to a good many temptations to increase it and thereby offset the effects of his golf playing by the many invitations extended to him to sit down to appetizing meals.

JUDGE TAFT AND THE ATLANTA AUDITORIUM.

It was only a short time ago that he did full justice to the barbecue of Charles S. Bohler, given on the latter's extensive cotton plantation about ten miles from Augusta, and a few days later he faced a spread of "possum and taters," besides a menu of heavy dimensions, as the guest of the Augusta Bar association.



BRINGING HOME THE POSSUM—ROASTING ON THE SPIT.

Mr. Taft at the barbecue distinguished himself by eating, but at the banquet he was noticeably sparing of the food. He remarked with some feeling that sleep was really what nature craved. His confession that he would like to take a nap did not prevent his making a speech, however, on the lawyer's life and the life of the judge. He expressed his regret on leaving it.

Catching possums is a sport of which the negroes of the south are fond and in which they are expert, and in anticipation of the Taft possum dinner there were busy times among the colored people of the section. Judge Frank Park of Worth county, Ga., contributed thirty possums to the dinner and also sent three cooks to assist in the proper preparation of the meal.

Skinning and dressing the possum is a process that requires cleverness for its proper execution. The colored folks often roast the little beast over a [illegible] out of doors, which is believed to give the meat a specially appetizing flavor.

A cartoon in the New York World on the day of Senator Benjamin R. Tillman's reply to President Roosevelt [illegible] him represented Mr. Roosevelt and the South Carolina statesman in a duel to the death, the former with his "big stick" and Tillman with his celebrated "pitchfork." Mr. Tillman has not wielded his unique weapon quite so much of late as in former days, partly on account of the condition of his health. He was much run down last spring and took a trip to Europe in the summer which recuperated him somewhat. Nevertheless his physician advised him on his return to his senatorial duties that he must avoid all excitement. In consequence of this little was heard from him this session up to the time of the Roosevelt secret service episode and the developments which brought Mr. Tillman's name to the front and connected him with charges of improper use of his position in the senate to further private ends. Mr. Tillman's reply to the accusations emanating from the White House showed that, though his health may be somewhat impaired, he is still able to wield his celebrated pitchfork with vigor.

Senator Tillman, like many of his fellow lawmakers, has a large fund of anecdotes at his disposal. One of them, which Harper's Weekly relates, pertains to a section of the senator's state remarkable for the great longevity of its residents and containing an odd character long known as "Old Jim" Tolliver. "No one knew Jim's exact age, but he was popularly supposed to be somewhere round ninety," said Mr. Tillman.

BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN.

"'Old Jim' enjoyed no greater pleasure than to joke about the senility of his neighbors, for he himself was as spry as a youngster of forty-five. One morning 'Old Jim' Tolliver met a friend named Taylor. 'And how is my venerable friend?' asked Tolliver.

"'Venerable nothing!' exclaimed Taylor. 'I am not near as old as you are, Jim, and you know it.'

"'I'm not so sure about that,' said 'Old Jim.' 'Tell me, Taylor, what is the first thing you can recollect?'

"'The first thing I recollect,' replied Taylor, 'and that must have been eighty years ago, was hearing people say, "There goes 'Old Jim' Tolliver."'"

Charles Nagel, the Missouri Republican leader who is talked of in connection with the next cabinet, is urged for the post of secretary of commerce and labor. He is a lawyer and was born in Texas in 1849. He is a graduate of the St. Louis High school and the St. Louis Law school and attended lectures at the University of Berlin. He was admitted to the bar in 1873, has served in the St. Louis council and the legislature of the state and is one of the trustees of Washington university.

DOES MODERN MUSIC PAY

Old Time Prices Compared with Those of Today

Lewis M. Isaacs has an interesting article in the Bookman on the earnings of musicians and publishers. Times have changed. Schubert sold his best songs for [illegible] cents each, and Mozart got $100 for each of his two best operas. "Today the tales of royalties paid composers make the profits of a Wall street broker seem small by comparison. And if it is not strictly true that George Cohan [illegible] $5,000 a week or Victor Herbert [illegible] out of his music the actual figures [illegible] big enough to give color to the story. It has only just been announced that the Rome, Turin and Milan opera houses have each paid Richard Strauss $4,000 for the bare right to produce his opera 'Elektra,' a work not even yet completed and of the success of which there can not be any present assurance whatsoever. Oscar Hammerstein is reported to have paid the composer $10,000 to secure the American rights of performance. Strauss is certainly taking revenge for the treatment accorded musicians of the past. Mascagni's one act opera, 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' brought the composer $90,000, besides winning the Sonzogo prize. 'Hansel und Gretel' brought Humperdinck [illegible] in [illegible] twelvemonth, while Puccini's earnings from his operas, while difficult to estimate, accumulating as they do from so many sources, must be conservatively $50,000 a year." [illegible] music pay?

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?
* * * * * *
A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.
We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

A death rate of less than one per cent was the record in Astoria during the year 1908, according to the officialr eport of City Physician Reames. This is exceptionally low and shows that Astoria is one of the most healthful cities on the Pacific coast, if not in the entire country. Nature has been kind to Astoria in providing a healthful climate, and pure water, but even these conditions could be materially improved were certain precautions taken. For one thing the piles of rubbish that are permitted to accumulate in back yards and various other spots ought tobe removed, pools of stagnant water that form in low spots should be drained off and more attention should be given to providing proper plumbing and sewerage. These are matters that can be attended to immediately, but in the mean time the fact must not be lost sight of, that one of the greatest menaces to public health is to be found on the beaches and on the tide flats in the business section of the city, which can be remedied only by filling in by pumping sand from the cahnnel or sluicing dirt from the hillside.

ENDOWMENTS

H. E. Huntington, nephew of the late Collis P. Huntington, who since the latter's death has been one of the ruling spirits in the Southern Pacific, is the latest of the "captains of industry," to announce his retirement from active business life and with this announcement comes the assertion that he is going to take up, as a hobby, the growing of tropical fruits in southern California. Andrew Carnegie retired from business and commenced building libraries. Rockefeller retired and went to endowing colleges that were already rich beyond need. Harriman retires and then changes his mind, but when he does draw out of business the chances are he too will begin endowing some monuments of steel and stone.

It would be immensely interesting to know the real feelings of these men of vast wealth when they come to the period of shaking off some of the burden of its possession.

Probably some of them feel that the mere fact of their being able to "endow" fully justifies all the process thru which they skinned the rest of us piecemeal for their dollars. Perhaps others of them really do want a rest and let go in order to avoid ever-accumulating burdens. However this may be, it is a bit curious that the hobbies to which they purpose to devote their futures seem to be very similar. Huntington may prove the exception to this.

If Huntington can make the desert places of Southern California or anywhere else produce fruits and vegetables, he will have created a monument for himself far nobler than any poverty-stricken college that Rockefeller can take under his wing. What is better still, his example may be followed by other multi millionaires and we may have great irrigation plants and vast settlement schemes as the result of the philanthropy, or whatever it is that prompts them, of our Creoseuses. Surely it is better and nobler to make fine farms for the poor of the cities, whereon they can be self-sustaining, than to build them libraries that they can't eat and won't make use of. And it is more patriotic, too, for the farm is still the bulwark of the nation's greatness, producing not only what fills the national stomach but the bulk of the brains that makes for national progress.

When will that tired feeling or death give us a multi-millionaire whose money will be used to make productive the millions of arid acres of the great west and southwest? When will such a one make farm settlement his hobby?

A YEAR OF ANNIVERSARIES

Notable centenary dates are not only numerous in 1909, but are distributed over the whole year. After Poe, who was born Jan. 19, 1809, followed Mendelssohn, the composer, Feb. 3; Lincoln and Darwin, Feb. 12, and Chopin, the composer, March 1, five men of genius given to the world in the space of six weeks. The last half of the year will be marked by the centenaries of Oliver Wendell Holmes, falling on Aug. 29; Frances Anne Kemble, the famous English actress, who passed her prime in America, Nov. 27, and Gladstone, Dec. 29.

The current year is also a marker for certain history making events. Hudson's discoveries and explorations in 1609 will be celebrated with imposing ceremonies along the river bearing his name. The first great battle of the peninsular war was fought in January, 1809, at Coruna, Spain, resulting in an English victory over Napoleon's lieutenants and the death of the English commander, Sir John Moore. A few months later Napoleon redeemed his fortunes by crushing the Austrians at Wagram, on their own soil, and, it is believed, making terms which included his alliance with the Austran princess, Marie Louise, and the divorce of Empress Josephine. The divorce took place in December, 1809, and Napoleon's lucky star began to wane.

Some people go wild over every bit of naturalness portrayed on the stage, then straightaway swear that the fried strawberries on the "after the theater" supper table are the most delicious thing that ever happened.

Lest we forget—congress is the chosen representative of the people, whether the people stand for it or not; hence an attack on congress is also an attack on the people.

That predicted cold wave the first week of the year sidestepped some localities, but settled right down to business between the capitol and the White House.

The biggest shingle mill in the world burned just after Christmas, a hint from Santa Claus that children no longer need "paddling."

Manuel of Portugal scents a plot to take his throne away. A truly royal sport would start right in plotting to get it back again.

Requires no high order of genius in the weather shop to guess it "may snow or rain" these days.

Too much discussion about the Panama canal purchase may put it into the heads of those lucky French investors that more is coming to them out of Uncle Sam's strong box.

FOREIGN SHIPS FIXED FOR COAL

Government Continues to Charter Tramps of Other Nations

Despite the emphatic protests of American owners of tonnage the United States government, continues to charter foreign vessels to carry coal for the navy. Reports from the East coast states that two more foreign tramps have bene taken for this purpose.

The freighters in question are the Norwegian steamer Jethou, 2781 tons and the British steamer Strathdee, 2846 tons. Both are to carry coal from Neport News to Magdalena bay for the Puget sound navy yard and it is significant that both were chartered at private terms.

American owners have protested time and again against the navy department fixing foreign vessels in this trade. On the Atlantic coast are many American vessels disengaged while the same still remains true on this coast, although there has been some improvement. Foreign vessels bringing coal to this coast seeks outward cargo and usually such low rates are accepted that the market is demoralized. This has been true on the Pacific for over a year.

Advices from Liverpool state that there are 112 steamers of an aggregate tonnage of over 200,000 at present laid up in the Tyne, and there are no signs of any immediate improvement in the shipping trade. Practically the whole of the available berths are occupied, and the owners are obliged to seek accommodation for their idle vessels in other ports. One Newcastle shipowner, it is stated, has had to order two of his steamers to proceed to Stavanger to be laid up in the Norweigan port. It is many years since the shipping industry on the Tyne has been in such a depressed condition.

"The recent depression in shipping has been beyond contemplation," says H. E. Moss, a Liverpool marine man. "Steamers not many years old have been sold at about half their original cost, while new vessels have been realized on at considerable loss to their owners. The market for second-hand tonnage is overstocked, and there are but few buyers New steamers of 6,000 tons dead weight that were sold a few years ago at $240,000 to $250,000 can today be built for $165,000, and other sizes in proportion. Builders and engineers are very short of work, and in some instances are offering to build new tonnage at below actual cost in order to keep their works going. Prices for new steamers were never lower and men with the courage of their convictions building at today's figures, must necessarily realize handsome profits in the near future, for such tonnage must perforce supplant old and useless vessels. Many regular lines and others are already profiting by present low prices to replace their older steamers.

OREGON MAY BUILD RAILWAYS

If Measure Now Being Drafted is Passed

Salem, Or., Feb. 4—Railroads constructed in the state by the state as a whole, or by districts to be known as railway districts, and then leased for operation or operated by the state, in order that the long bottled up portions of the interior may be opened by transportation facilities, is the purpose of a bill now being drafted for submission to the legislature and which has an excellent chance of passage.

Backed and urged by the many business organizations and development leagues of the state, a committee of prominent lawyers is now at work on a constitutional amendment preparatory to its submission to the legislature at some date during the present week. Already the speaker of the house and the president of the senate and different leaders in the two houses have signified their friendliness to the proposed measure, and it is practically assured that the resolution will be passed by the two houses.

According to the plan being outlined in the draft of the amendment, the measure is to be submitted to the people of the state at the next election. It is to provide that it shall be constitutional for the state as a whole, or for districts in the state, to construct railroads. The state may construct a railroad within the limits of the state, the district within its limits. After the construction has been done, the state or the district will either operate the line or it will lease it for operation for a term of years.

In the meantime, while the amendment is being up before the people, a commission will be appointed by the governor to find suitable routes for railroads which may be necessary for adequate transportation facilities in the interior districts. This commission, having found these routes, will be in a position to furnish data upon which districts may be formed, or the state may act immediately after the adoption of the amendment and its going into effect. Construction of the lines desired might therefore be commenced immediately after the adoption of the amendment, or as soon thereafter as the details may be settled.

This measure is considered of great importance, it being argued that it will prove the solution of the transportation problem of the state. For years the Harriman interests have bottled up the interior sections of the state and retarded their development. What new lines have been constructed have demonstrated beyond a doubt that such lines would be a paying investment, and therefore the people of the state or of a district would not be menaced by any loss in the construction of such roads.

With the power granted by the constitution to construct such roads it would be possible to open all sections of Oregon and bring the present remote sections of the state in close touch with the markets. This would affect the interior, and the Coos bay districts, and all other sections which now have no railroad facilities and which apparently will have none for years to come if the present railway systems must be depended upon.

STEAMER FALCON IS PURCHASED

Vessels Bought by San Francisco Firm

Advices from Seattle report the purchase of the steamer Falcon by the Charles Nelson Lumber company of San Francisco from the estate of the late Elmer E. Caine of Seattle. The consideration is said to have been $225,000.

The Falcon will be operated in the coast lumber fleet between San Francisco and Tacoma and other Sound ports. The steamer Riverside, recently chartered by the American-Hawaiian Steamship company from the Nelson company, is a sister ship of the Falcon, both having been built in Seattle. The Riverside, up to the time of her charter by the American-Hawaiian company, operated between the Sound and San Francisco in the lumber trade. It is probable that the the Nelson company has purchased the Falcon to take her place on that run.

SCHOOL TEACHER STILL MISSING

Silverton, Or., Feb. 4—Speculation is rife as to what has become of J. C. Clark, the teacher at the Scotts Mills school, who made an unceremonious departure from the city Monday morning of this week, when a delegation of angry mothers, carrying horsewhips, visited him. It was supposed that Clark would go to Salem and lay his cause before the superintendent of Marion county schools, but information from that place this morning is to the effect that nothing has been heard of the missing school teacher since leaving here Monday. Neither has he been heard of at Eugene, Lane county, which is the nearest county to Marion.

Friday afternoon Clark severely punished a 14-year-old boy named Philips, who had disobeyed the rules as laid down by the young schoolmaster. The boy is said to have been terribly bruised from the ruler in the hand of the principal. The parents of the boy and several neighbors resented the treatment and Monday congregated at the school house for the purpose of giving him a whipping.

Sentiment seems to be decidedly in favor of the pupil at Scotts Mills. It is undersood that the school board had determined to ask Clark to resign.

Sudden Stimulus.

The villager rushed into the volunteer fire house.

"Come on, boys!" he shouted excitedly. "Lem Wheatly's barn is burning down."

"Oh, shucks!" yawned the captain lazily. "We'll have to look up our red shirts and fire hats. Tell Lem we'll be there in an hour or so."

"But Lem's barn is burning, and there be five barrels of hard cider stored in the loft."

"What's that? Five barrels of hard cider? Come on, boys! Every man to his post. We'll have that barn saved inside of twenty minutes!"—Detroit Tribune.

HEAVY LOSSES AMONG SHIPS

Japanese Companies Unable to Reinsure Risks

Consul John H. Sordgrass writes that the marine insurance companies at Kobe are experiencing difficulty in reinsuring the Japanese risks with foreign companies. He adds:

In 1907 the tonnage of Japanese steamers lost amounted to 30,000, against an average yearly loss of 25,000. During 1908, from April to August, the losses reached 25,000 tons; so it is feared that when the losses during the dangerous periods between October and March are added the toll for the twelve months will be found to be exceptionally heavy. In some quarters this increase in the number of accidents is considered to be the indirect result of the general trade depression, which has prompted Japanese shipowners to take more risks, while in others the opinion is held that they are partly due to mishaps occuring to inferior boats, which were acquired in large numbers during the Russo-Japanese war.

It will also install a system of electrical conveyors by which the lumber can be taken directly from the mill to vessels or cars without the extra handling that is now necessary and will result in considerable saving.

At today's session of the county court an order was made directing R. R. Woodin to make repairs to a damaged bridge in district 15 and report the amount of lumber used to the court. The report of the viewers on the road petitioned for by A. P. Lillinas and others from the north fork of the Klaskanine to Bear creek was read the first time and action postponed until tomorrow.

Dr. A. A. Finch has returned from a trip to the Rogue river valley, where he has a ranch, and states that during his week there was not a drop of rain and in fact the dust was blowing on the country roads. He says that the average annual rainfall there is only about 25 inches but that there are so many mountain streams that irrigation is quite practical and profitable to the acerage, which has doubled in value within the past few years.

The music lovers of our city will enjoy a high class concert at the Presbyterian church Friday night. Misses Evelyn and Erma Ewart of Portland assisted by Miss Irene Simmington and Miss Campbell of our city will render an excellent program. The same concert was given in Portland last Tuesday. The following telegram received from Mr. Gifford Nash explains itself, "Concert tremendous success. The Misses Ewart received an ovation." The pianists are sisters of Mr. Dale Ewartt of the Ewart-Steele Electrical Company of Astoria. Auspices Westminister Guild.

At the next meeting of the chamber of commerce, to be held on Monday evening, an amendment to the constitution will be introduced that will relate to the elimination of the present Promotion committee and direct that its work will be conducted in the future by a board of directors of the chamber This will be done with the full accord of the members of the committee as they believe that its aims can best be carried out in this way for the reason that the present system has been found impractical and cumbersome in some details. It will be necessary for this amendment to lay over until another meeting, after presented but there will be ample time for it to go into effect before the adjourned annual meeting in April.

At the regular weekly drill of First Company, coast artillery corps, last evening Lieutenant Cullen of Fort Stevens made an interesting and instructive talk on the subject of coast artillery, giving an outline in general of the object of the organization of this branch of the service and the manner in which it is handled. This lecture was the first of the series which that officer will give during the coming few weeks, the next one being on submarine defense or mines. Following the drill Captain Abercombie met with the directors of the athletic association and an agreement was reached whereby the military company will rent a drill room from the athletic club and also an equipment room, provided satisfactory arrangements can be made with the owner of the building. For the use of these rooms the military company is to pay $35 per month and all the members of the military company are to join the athletic club. Captain Abercrombie issued an order last evening directing the members of the company to report at the armory at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning for a practice march, if the day is pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Simmons left yesterday for their home in Ilwaco, after visiting in the city for a few days, the guests of Mr. and Mrs A. L. Steele. They were returning from a trip to Stephens, Wash. and report that during the recent storm there were eight feet of snow at that place.

A raft consisting of [illegible] yellow fir logs, which averaged 1702 feet on the log, was sold today by President McGregor of the Sorensen Logging Company to Finke Bros of Brookfield, making a total of 164,370 feet for the raft. One of the logs scaled 10,500 feet, while another scaled 10,600 feet. This raft probably has the largest general average of any ever placed in the waters of the lower Columbia river.

While the taxs are not being paid very rapidly at the sheriff's office, a large number of property owners are bringing in lists of their property to secure statements, so it is expected that during the coming week a large sum will be collected. None of the owners of large timber tracts have yet paid, but all will undoubtedly do so in time to take advantage of the three per cent rebate allowed up to March 15.

The semi-annual statement of the earnings and expenditures of the Great Norhern system for the six months ending December 31, 1908 shows a falling off in the road's income as compared with the same period last year. The net operating income for the last half of 1907 amounted to $12,858,712, while for the last half of 1908 the operating income was $12,492,100, showing a decrease of $366,612, or a net loss of 3 per cent. The total operating expenses were cut $35,981,881, or about 17 per cent.

It will surprise many of the friends of B. A. Seaborg, the veteran Columbia river canneryman, to learn of his present whereabouts and his occupation. Over an office in a building at Medford, Oregon, is the sign: "B. A. Seaborg, Contractor & Builder." He is engaged in that business there and quite successful, in fact being the leading building contractor of the section and is engaged at present in erecting a large brick building. To a former Astorian he said that when a boy in Finland he learned the carpenter trade and now in his old age, over 70 in years, it was coming in handy again.

Basket ball is becoming popular with the younger members of the Astoria Athletic Club. Last evening a trial game was played between the girls team of the high school and a pick up team of boys in the club. The tryout was for the purpose of giving the girls a practice game prior to the contest that will take place Saturday evening at the club. It is expected that a basket ball team from one of the colleges in the state will arrive in the city Saturday which will be followed with a similar game next week. Secretary Kinney stated this morning that the boys and girls are taking an active interest in the gymasium work. The feature for tomorrow evening will be a country dance to which all friends of the club are invited.

Feeling that agreement reached by the joint committees of the Oregon and Washington legislatures is unjust, representatives of the gillnetters are in Salem endeavoring to prevent the enactment of laws which will be detrimental to the industry. They are showing the members of the legislature that to repeal the law prohibiting purse seines will operate against the interests of Oregon and in favor of Washington. They contend that repeal of Oregon's initiative ban on wheels should not go through the Oregon legislature. Clackamas and Willamette river fisheries want Clackamas river kept open for fishing and demand that fishing in the Willamette river be permitted two weeks earlier than the interstate opening on the Columbia, May 1. Astoria gillnetters are represented in the capitol by H. M. Lorntsen and Ole Settem, who are working hard in the house.

The steamer Eureka, with a cargo of lumber for California, went to sea this morning.

The steamer Argo left out on Wednesday evening for Tillamook with all the freight that she could carry. A portion of her deck load was hay and goes into one of the richest farming sections. The explanation for this is that the grass is too valuable for pasturage to run into hay and at $23 a ton with added freight it is cheaper to import the baled hay for winter use. One Tillamook dairy man states that when bald hay can be purchased at $17 per ton no hay will be cut in that section.

GILLETT WARNS LEGISLATURE

Asks Reconsideration of Japannese School Measure

Sacramento, Feb. 5—Governor Gillett sent a special message bearing on Japanese legislation to the senate and assembly today. It says:

"Gentlemen: —Believing there should be further and more careful consideration of assembly bill No., 14, which provides that a board of school trustees shall have power to establish separate schools for children of Japanese and that there-after they shall not be admitted to any other public school, and further believing that the enactment of the provisions of said bill at this time may affect the interests of the entire nation and perhaps seriously, I most respectfully request you to reconsider the vote by which said bill was passd and take the matter up for further most careful consideration. Within a few hours after the passaseg of said bill the president of the United States, alarmed at the possible consequences of the enactment of such a law, sent me a telegram containing the following language: 'This is the most offensive bill of all and in my judgment clearly unconstitutional and we shall at once have to test it in the courts. Can it not be stopped in the legislature or by you?

"A telegram so forceable as this coming from the president is entitled to full consideration and demands that no hasty or ill-considered action be taken by this state, which may involve the whole country."

The governor asks that sentiment and personal opinion and considerations be laid aside and that the interests of the state and nation be considered. The leading opponents to anti-Japanese legislation do not believe they can secure the necessary number of votes for reconsideration.

The assembly unanimously voted to postpone further action on the Japanese segregation bill until next Wednesday. In the meantime the hearing of the bill upon the existing treaty between the United States and Japan will be examined into.

MURDERER HUNG AT SALEM

Walter Johnson who Killed Elmer Perdue

Salem, Feb. 5—Walter Johnson, convicted of the murder of Elmer Perdue of Spokane in the mountains back of Hillsboro while on a timber cruising expedition, was hanged at the penitentiary here today. Johnson killed Perdue for the purpose of robbery.

Walter Jonhson was convicted December 14 last of having murdered Elmer Prudue of Spokane Wash. Perdue in the summer of 1908 in company with several Swedes, was taken to the mountains 22 miles from Hillsboro by Johnson to be located on a timber claim. The Swedes did not like location and returned leaving Johnson and Perdue in the mountains. Johnson confessed that after Swedes left he blew top of Perdue's head off with a shot gun. Johnons said that the murder was for the purpose of robbery and that he secured $140. After the killing, Johnson returned to his home near Hillsboro, and though notoriously in straightened circumstances, paid all his debts. This attracted suspicion to him and he was arrested while visiting Portland, August 16 last.

CHARTER MARKET CONTINUES DULL

Grain Season on the Coast Is at End

Commenting on the condition of the coast charter market the San Francisco Daily Commercial News says in its weekly review:

"The grain season on the coast is ended and it is almost impossible for vessels to get anything in the way of a grain charter. The last fixture was at 17s and at the present time offers of tonnage at 16s 3d have been turned down by shippers. It is not thought that the floods have done irreparable damage to the crops in the central part of California; in fact, with favorable weather during the remainder of the season an increased yield may be looked for. The disengaged tonnage on the coast has decreased slightly during the week, but is still unwieldy enough to depress rates. In lumber chartering the only fixtures of importance have been the British ship Marion Inglis to load on the Sound for Chimbote, Peru at 38s 9d; the Norwegian steamer Henrik Ibsen to load at San Francisco and Eureka for Sydney and Melbourne at 32s, the Norwegian steamer Eir to load on the Sound for the West Coast on time charter, and the barkentine John C. Myer to load on Grays or Willapa Harbor for Sydney at 20s, and barkentine Amazon to load on Puget Sound for Sydney at 28s 9d.

"Coastwise freights are rather easier on account of poor demand. The most recent fixture was made at $4.25 Grays Harbor to San Pedro, a reduction of 25 cents."

WASHINGTON'S BANKING BILL

Raises Fund to Guarantee Bank Deposits

Olympia, Feb. 5 A bank deposit guaranty law, providing for the insurance of deposits in state banks, but differing in many particulars from the Oklahoma act was introduced in the senate today by Paulhamus of Pierce. The guaranty feature of the bill are tacked on the end of the banking legislation recommended by the state Bankers' association. The bill provides for the levying of a guaranted tax on all state banks, this tax to form a fund placed in the custody of the state bank examiner and by him deposited in the state treasury. In the event of the failure of a bank this fund is to be drawn upon to pay any deficiency that exists in the payment of the depositors. The state acquires a first lien on the assets of the bank for the re-embursement of the fund.

The tax is an annual one, equivalent to one-half of 1 mill on the average daily deposit of each bank the first year; the tax in the second year is one-fourth of 1 per cent, and thereafter one eighth of 1 per cent. Ten per cent of this tax is payable by the banks in cash and the balance in non-interest bearing certificates of deposit until the guaranty fund reaches $1,000,000, and is thereafter payable in cash. When the fund reaches $10,000, the state treasurer is authorized to invest the excess in state and government bonds and certain other specified securities drawing not less than 2 per cent. per annum the interest to go to the banks contributing to the fund.

Only current accounts are guaranteed in full Deposits drawing 2 per cent. are guaranteed up to 90 per cent; deposits drawing more than 2 and less than 3 per cent. are guaranteed up to 80 per cent., and deposits drawing more than 3 and not over 4 per cent are guaranteed to 70 per cent. Secured deposits are not to be gauranteed. Provision is made for national banks participating in the plan.

The tax on the banks is based on the average daily deposits, unless such deposits are less than the capital stock, in which event the amount of capital stock is taken as the basis. The capital stock is the basis in computing the tax on new banks.

HUGE ICE GORGE ALARMS FARMERS

Danger Threatens Crooked River County

Bend, Or., Feb. 5—There is an immense ice gorge in the Crooked river canyon at Steward's. It is about three miles long and in places 60 feet high, stretching from one wall of the canyon to the other, and is almost a solid mass of ice. The gorge was formed during the severe cold and it will probably take two months or more of warm weather to melt it.

People living along the river below the gorge are apprehensive for the safety of their homes. They fear that if the should break loss suddenly they would be swept down the river. The telephone is at hand, however, and in case of danger every ranch would be notified.

PROPOSES TAX ON EARNINGS

Prospective Bill to Raise New Revenue for Oregon

Salem, Or., Feb. 5—Another piece of legislation to make E. H. Harriman, the railroad rajah, sit up and notice Oregon, has appeared in the legislature. It will cause a spasm among other railroaders and representation of the railroads can be expected to appear on the scene now within a day or two to reinforce those already flitting around the lobby.

This last jolt for the railroads proposals a tax of 1 per cent on the gross earnings of all railroads in Oregon on the business done within the state It is, with the exception of the amendment to the inheritance tax law, the first substantial attempt to raise new revenue for the state. Revenue-producing measures really receive as much consideration as appropriation bills.

Senator Hart prepared the bill and it was introduced in the house by Reynolds and McKinney, since all revenues bills must have their origin in the lower house before receiving action by the senate. It is a bill which follows closely the law in New York, Pennsylvania, Deleaware, Minnesota, Vermont, Maine, Maryland and Ohio. Two or three other states have had similar laws, but they have been repealed. That the bill just introduced is constitutional, there is no doubt in the mind of Senator Hart, especially in view of the statutes in the eastern state, where the same idea is being employed. Again, the decision of the supreme court Tuesday in deciding the case of the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph Company strengthens the new bill.

There are two sections of particular interest in the bill. The first imposes the tax, or license fee, and the second is the definition of what constitutes a railroad corporation, and, therefore, is liable to the taxation under the act. The first of these sections follows:

"Sections 1. That in addition to the taxes now provided by law, every railroad company or corporation doing business in this state shall pay to the state of Oregon a license fee of 1 percentum on the gross earnings of such corporation received from business transacted within the state. Such license fee shall be paid annually by such company our corporation to the treasurer of this state."

FOUR MAROONED RESCUED BY TUG

Three Men and Boy Victims of Launch Wreck

Victoria, B. C. Feb. 5—Bringing three men and a boy, Capt. England and son, of Vancouver, and Archibald and Fred Beaver, of Victoria, rescued from Hunter island, in Fitzhugh sound, where they were marooned for three days and nights without food or shelter, following the wreck of their gasoline launch Porcher, of Vancouver, the tug Pilot reached port today with the barge Oregon, laden with gypsum, from Freshwater bay, after a remarkably rought trip. At one time there were over thirty tons of ice on the tug.

When passing through Fitzhugh, sound, bound south, the attention of Capt. Scarff was attracted by a big fire on shore and a series of flashes of light as though some one was trying to make signals. He lowered a boat and the four shipwrecked people were found on the beach, huddled about their fire, utterly exhausted and famished. Their launch was driven ashore during a gale while bound north from Vancouver to Refuge bay, Porchur island.

VAGERIES OF WEIGHT

Can a Pound of Food Make One Three Pounds Heavier

Here are two personal experiences of my own that are equally striking. After having put on rather too much weight, probably through excess and other mistakes of food and drink, I played a severe tennis match and lost seven pounds in weight. Then I took a glass of wine and at once by this put on two pounds. Then I took a meal slightly larger than usual and put on another two and a half pounds though the meal itself weighed only one pound.

On another occasion when I had fasted for a day or two and had naturally lost two or three pounds a day I ate a meal weighing about one pound and went up in weight not one pound but three pounds.

How can only one pound in food add three pounds in weight?

How, in the case of other people, can three pounds a day's food and drink—add nothing at all?

In my own case one principle appears, and this is that my nature is at [illegible] getting toward the normal, but comparatively slow in getting far below or far above the normal.

A not uncommon but very striking phenomenon is that of the shampooer in a Turkish bath in London. He finds that after his day's work, which involves copious sweating and hard physical exercise and scarcely anything to eat or drink, he goes up in weight some two or three pounds merely by resting.—Eustace Miles in Metropolitan Magazine.

The members of the Volunteer Fire Company Number One of Warrenton will give a Masquerade ball at Warrenton on the evening of Friday February 12. All Astorians who desire to attend can return the same evening by taking the Launch Teddy Roosevelt. x

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

LIGHT STREAKS OF THE MOON

Due to Salts of Various Minerals Says Astronomer

The radiating light streaks on the moon's surface are explained in a new way by H. G. Tomkins, an English astronomer, who suggests that they are due to the salts of various minerals brought to the surface by evaporation, just as they are in arid alkali tracts in many parts of the earth.

When beds of solid salts or strata partially filled with salt exist below the surface they often dissolve in subsoil water, which rises to the surface and dries, leaving a white efflorescence.

The radial arrangement Mr. Tomkins accounts for by supposing molten matter to be thrown up from below, breaking the crust in radiating cracks and upheaving the strata around the center of pressure. Saline strata would be pushed upward with the others and might thus bring them within reach of evaporation, the efflorescence on the surface thus following the direction of the radial cracks.

On the moon the conditions are just right for such a series of occurrences. Though water in a free state does not now exist on the moon's surface, it probably did so exist at some time, and the salty deposits that would form by evaporation would be very heavy because of absence of rain to wash it away. If rain should cease on our own planet a similar state of things would doubtless ensue.

A curious fact about the moon's "rays" is that they disappear when the sun's altitude is low. This the advocate of the new theory explains by supposing that a fair amount of illumination is necessary to bring out the slight difference in whiteness between the streaks and the surrounding country.—New York Herald.

Do We Bathe Too Often?

The evils of the daily bath and an urgent plea to return to the old fashioned Saturday bath night are set forth by Dr. John H. Clarke in his new book, "Vital Economy."

Dr. Clarke points out that the skin when dry is a nonconductor and prevents the escape of body electricity. When wet in the bath the skin is deprived of some of its insulatory powers and rapid waste of body electricity, which persons who are not robust can ill afford, takes place.

"Children and especially babies," says Dr. Clarke, "are great sufferers from the bathing fashion. Delicate babies are kept perpetually delicate or are washed away altogether because their nurses or parents think it absolutely essential that they should be dipped in water once if not twice a day."—London Mail.

The Toad Survived.

An experiment bordering close to the wonderful was recently made in the clay testing department of a machinery company at Bucyrus, O., in which a toad was placed in a twenty ton brick press and was four times subjected to a pressure of 11,000 pounds without injury. The question at issue was whether such a pressure would kill the toad or whether its ability to compress itself was sufficient to allow it to come out of the ordeal alive. The toad was first placed in a lump of granulous clay and the whole pressed into a brick. After the huge press had done its work the solid brick was lifted from the machine, and the toad winked its eyes contentedly, stretched its legs and hopped away.—Popular Mechanics.

A Parliamentary Scene.

Talking about dramatic scenes in parliament, of which we have had several in both houses this session, we wonder if our readers have heard of the scene some weeks ago in the assembly of South Australia. During a debate the prime minister stated that some gamblers had cut off a comrade's finger because he had joined the Salvation Army. A member questioned the truth of this statement, when the prime minister astonished the house by dramatically stretching forth his hand with a bottle in it, exclaiming, "Here is the finger and the deposition accompanying it!" Our daughter parliament has beaten us for gruesomeness this time.—London Chronicle.

Whistling Sign of Contempt.

A Moroccan shows his contempt of anything by whistling. A conflict between tribesmen and a battalion of French troops was recently precipitated by the whistling of a locomotive on a railway being constructed near Casablanca. "The giaours are laughing at us," said a chieftain when the construction engine [illegible] a toot to warn the natives at work on the line to look out. The Arabs went wild, mounted their horses and rode on the whistling enemy. They had to be calmed with the whistling of rifle balls.

PINKERTON AND THE BEGGAR

Why he Gave the Fellow Who Lost his Leg a Dollar

It was a raw, stormy night. Mr. Pinkerton was walking home from the club, after a fine dinner that put him on good terms with himself and with the world, when he was accosted by a big, burly chap, who requested financial assistance.

"Say, mister, can't ye help a pore feller what's lost his leg?" the beggar whined as Pinkerton passed along.

"Lost a leg?" retorted Pinkerton, eying the man suspiciously. "Why you have two legs, haven't you?"

To all appearances the man certainly had.

"Yes, sir," returned the beggar, with a mournful smile that stirred Pinkerton's heart. "I've got two of 'em left, sir, but my best one, ah, that is gone forever! I lost it in a railway accident, sir."

"For heaven's sake, what were you before this catastrophe happened," cried Pinkerton—"a centiped?"

"No, sir; just a plain, ordinary human bein', sir. The leg I lost, sir, was a wooden one, sir, and it used to excite a lot of sympathy when I got it strapped on. It was worth $4 a day to me, that leg was, but, now it's gone, I'm the dead brokest beggar in ninety-seven counties," explained the beggar.

Whereupon Pinkerton gave the fellow a dollar. This at first seems an extravagant sum to give to a man like that, but in this case it was not so, for Pinkerton is a writer by trade, and he knew he could put the incident into words and sell it to some editor for $10 or $11.—Judge.

A Wife to Be Pitied.

"I don't believe in early shopping," said the short man in the corner of the car.

"Why not?" the man with the dark green hat asked him.

"For a very good reason," replied the short man. "If I don't give my wife her Christmas spending money until the day before Christmas, she can't come back at me for more, can she?"

And he grinned atrociously.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Misunderstood.

When Mark Twain was a young and struggling newspaper writer in San Francisco a lady of his acquaintance saw him one day with a cigar box under his arm looking in a shop window.

"Mr. Clemens," she said, "I always see you with a cigar box under your arm. I am afraid you are smoking too much."

"It isn't that," said Mark. "I'm moving again."—Success Magazine.

Merely Practice.

Father—Why do you allow that fellow who's calling here to remain so long?

Girl Law Student—Merely practicing for my court practice, father.

Father—How so?

Girl Law Student—Well, I was prepared to dismiss his suit, but of course I had to listen to his argument for a stay.—Baltimore American.

Wise Girl.

Her Mother—I thought I just heard you saying goodby forever to Mr. Sniggsby.

She—Yes.

Her Mother—Then why are you penciling your eyebrows and taking such pains to fix yourself up?

She—I want to look my best when he comes back.—Chicago Record-Herald.

One Is Illegal.

"What is the difference between making money and earning money?" asked the youth.

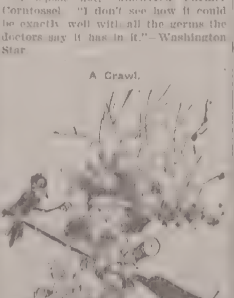
"Sometimes the difference is a trip to the penitentiary for counterfeiting," answered the home grown philosopher.—Pittsburg Post.

Diagnosis.

"Is that water you are using well water?"

"I s'pose not," answered Farmer Corntossel. "I don't see how it could be exactly well with all the germs the doctors say it has in it."—Washington Star.

A Crawl.



The Huntsman—Honest, Mr. Bird, I wasn't huntin' for you. I was after butterflies.

WRONGFULLY ADDRESSED

One Romance of Uncle Sam's Dead Letter Office

Something like 2,000,000 letters annually fail of delivery in the United States owing to insufficient postage or incorrect addresses. The dead letter office at Washington employs a large force of clerks to handle these. The packages that have been received at the dead letter office have contained false teeth, glass eyes, brass keys and thousands of other things that one would never expect to find in the mails.

It would be interesting to know how many engagements have been broken, how many friends have been estranged, how many fond hearts have not been reunited, how many deals have fallen through, how much money has been lost and how many quarrels have been prevented by letters that never came.

A pretty romance was revealed at the dead letter office the other day when a young woman called there to see if a wrongfully addressed letter had been received. It had, and she was greatly relieved. "I heard that Jack was untrue," she said, "and wrote him breaking our engagement. The day after I wrote I found out that I was wrong. My heart was almost broken, but Jack kept right on coming to see me and never mentioned the letter. I began to think I must have misdirected it and find that I did. It must have been fate. Now he will never know."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

WHO RULES?

It is fast being impressed upon the people of Oregon and in no uncertain way just where the power lies that is dictating the enactment of the laws which govern the state. We send men to the legislature and imagine they are going to work for our interests, and after casting our ballots we return home from the polls secure in the idea that we are the people who rule ourselves. We have even gone further than that in Oregon. We have instituted what is called the initiative and referendum and on election day we walk up to the polls and cast our little ballots in favor of some legislation which we want enacted. As soon as the result is announced and we find our favorite measure has passed we swell with pride and puff up with the assurance that now we are certain to have just and adequate laws of our own enactment. But what do we find? In the first place, our public officers refuse to enforce these laws of our making and the courts help them to evade the consequences by issuing injunctions and then our legislators, the men who during the campaign were ever anxious to promise eternal fealty to the people's interests, break their necks to override the wishes of their constituents by repealing the measures, which the people have enacted. An example of this is now at hand. At the June election, the voters of the state declared by a majority of over 26,000 that there shall be no more fishing for salmon in the Columbia river above tide water, but was that law enforced last fall or was any attempt ever made to enforce it? No, and what is worse a scheme is now on foot and it bids fair to be worked successfully. to have the legislature at its present session repeal that law, and why? Simply because a little coterie of men in Portland, which controls the Multnomah county delegation, wants it repealed. The pilot law, the tax law and in fact every measure that touches upon an important matter is enacted or killed at the dictates of this same influence. We of Oregon are prone to boast that we select our own United States senator, that we enact our own laws, but it has been an open secret for years that one man who heads a powerful combination in Portland, can and has made and unmade more than one law of the state by merely signing his name to a telegram of instructions. How long are the people of the state going to stand this? It is true they have stood it for years, tho perhaps unconsciously, but now that the truth is being forced upon them, will they have the courage to rebel and demand that their decrees be respected?

It seems that President Roosevelt is not the first or only great man to become exercised over the freedom of the press. Napoleon once sued the editor of a London newspaper for libel and got a verdict. Leight Hunt and his brother went to jail for two years for libeling the prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. The alien and sedition laws were invoked to convict an editor in Vermont who had spoken evil of President John Adams. James G. Blaine instituted suit against the Indianapolis Sentinel for a particularly atrocious libel in the campaign of 1884, but the case was never tried. Governor Pillsbury of Minnesota under threat of a $50,000 libel suit made the St. Paul Globe retract a story that he was manipulating the election returns in 1886. Secretary of the Interior Vilas came all the way to Minneapolis in 1886 to have William Welch indicted for an alleged libel growing out of some insurance transaction in Wisconsin years before. It was never proved. The remarkable thing about these cases is that few or none of them came into court, and the public was robbed of the spectacle of very great or very prominent men giving their testimony on the witness stand. The public does not stand for lawsuits growing out of politics. The juries usually disagree. When they do come to a decision they often award funny damages, as one Hennepin county jury did when it gave Ignatius Donnelly a verdict of 1 cent against the Pioneer Press.—Minneapolis Journal.

IMMORTALIZATION OF 'OLD ABE'

If controversies over a centennial memorial to Lincoln should postpone the realization of the scheme until his second centenary rolls around the memory, which some people imagine is in need of a prop, will run no risk of perishing "from the earth." There was majesty as well as pathos in the hurried farewell of comrades to the remains of Sir John Moore as the poet describes it when saying:

We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone,
But we left him alone in his glory.

In the same spirit Theodore O'Hara wrote:

And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead.

Moore's weeping soldiers would have raised a stone and carved a line but for the enemy thumping at their heels. Yet that could not help an iota in perpetuating the name burned into English history by deeds of which that lonely midnight burial was the sequel.

The name of Lincoln can never become a mere memory. Through him the republic endured, and with the life of the republic the work he wrought is imperishably intwined. All this is trite, and the question of the hour is as to the place and the form of a centennial marker of the nation's respect. Opinions differ as to details, but agree in essentials. Its site should be where the greatest number of Americans are to file past in the years to come. Its form should symbolize the appeal which the story of Lincoln makes to the universal heart. In Lincoln's own time that appeal was symbolized by the homely title Old Abe. Idealism will overshoot the mark if it carries the mind of posterity too far away from that rugged Old Abe of 1861-5 whom men then loved for his ruggedness.

The big fine is off, and now it's up to Rockefeller to rebate that trifle per gallon which he put on to the customer when Judge Landis got rattled with the multiplication table.

The centenary of Darwin will be honored by scientists, although it is now admitted that the nature fake associated with his name was not original with him.

Uncle Sam didn't get a chance to spend that $29,000,000 Standard Oil money, so we won't have to "skin the cat" to pay it back again.

Better for the husband to bear with the divinity he has than fly to the affinity whose cantankerousness he knows naught of.

Novices at the roller skate walk should remember that the trick is to keep the feet, not the eyebrows, on the pavement.

A first aid to the injured dispensary on Capitol hill is among the long felt wants of our seat of government.

That "truth testing machine" will be handy after March 4 to qualify notables for the Ananias club.

Pugilist Johnson's finishing blow at Burns scored also an uplift in the race issue.

SALOON MAN SHOOTS LOGGER

Affray Follows Refusal to Serve Drinks

Portland, Feb. 5—Tony Moer, a Norwegian logger, was shot and almost instantly killed last night by Hans Goodager, proprietor of a saloon on North Third street in this city.

Moer and Goodager were both, it is alleged, under the influence of liquor. Goodager who was arrested, charged with murder in the first degree, admits the shooting. According to an eye-witness, Moer and a companion entered Goodager's saloon and asked to be served with liquor. The saloonman refused, because he states Moer had the reputation of being a saloon brawler. Goodager ordered More to leave the resort and at the same time, it is alleged, threatened him with a revolver. Moer knocked this weapon from Goodager's hand and the latter picked up another revolver. The saloonman is alleged to have become infuriated by this time, and coming from behind the bar, it is asserted he shot Moer in the back of the head.

CAPTAIN NICHOL LOSES LICENSE

Verdect of Court on Fifeshire Wreck

Local marine circles will be interested in the report of the court of marine inquiry at Sydney on the wreck of the British bark Fifeshire, which was lost off Gilbert late last summer. The inquiry has resulted in the suspension of the license of Captain John Nichol, who was master of the Fifeshire. Captain Nichol, who is well known at this port, has had a series of misfortunes since he was here, the Fifeshire being the third well known sailing vessel he has lost.

Captain Nichol was master of the British bark Dunslaw, which he lost on a trip from the Sound the vessel being destroyed by fire off the Horn.

Scarcely more than a year ago he lost the British bark Glencairn while en route to Puget Sound from Europe. The vessel went ashore in the vicinity of the Horn. As a result of that disaster the license of Captain Nichol, it is said, was suspended for a time. His next command was the Fifeshire, which he lost on Gilbert islands last August.

The court of inquiry found that the Fifeshire struck the reef at the Gilbert islands in the afternoon of August 21, 1908, while on a voyage from Newcastle to Astoria, with a cargo of coal, and subsequenly became a total loss. The weather was fine and clear, with moderate wind from east-northeast. The vessel was well found and provided with all the necessary life saving apparatus. The board held that the wreck was caused by the gross negligence and carelessness of Captain Nichol in taking his ship into a position that he knew to be dangerous and that he did not keep a proper lookout. Captain Nichol's licenese was suspended for twelve months.

As a result of the loss of the British bark Falls of Halladale, the papers of Captain D. W. Thompson were suspended for six months, with recommendations that he be allowed mate's papers in the meantime. The Halladale went ashore on the coast of Australia November 14 of last year.

GRAVEYARD FOR MANY VESSELS

Many Wrecks Between Mouth of Columbia and Willapa

The recent wreck of the French ship Alice on the beach at Ocean park has recalled recollections to pioneers of this part of the coast of numerous wrecks along this part of the coast the past twenty five years. The vessels which strand on this particular stretch of beach between the mouth of the Columbia river and the Willapa bay light are almost invariably a total loss.

Salvage operations along this beach are almost out of the question, due to its being a flat ,sandy beach. Since 1881, when the British ship Great Brighton went ashore, twelve vessels have been wrecked there, and of the entire number but two were floated, and both of these at heavy expense.

The British ship Great Brighton went ashore in 1881 and was a total loss.

January 19, 1887, the American schooner Harvest Home was wrecked and became a total loss. A portion of this vessel is still visible on the beach, where she drove in a furious gale.

November 21, 1891, the British ship Stathblane, 1,364 net tons ,was driven ashore in a terrific gale. Several members of the crew, including the master, were drowned .

March 19 1896, the British ship Glenmorag, 1,576 net tons, went ashore while en route from Callao to Astoria and became a total loss. Twenty-four men out of her crew of twenty-six were saved.

December 19, 1896, the German bark Potrimpos, 1,231 net tons, from Manzanillo to Astoria, went ashore. The vessel was a total loss, but the crew of nineteen was saved.

February 28, 1896, the American steamer Point Loma, Captain Conway, from Puget Sound for San Francisco, was wrecked. The crew was saved, but the steamer was a total loss.

November 26,1900, the well known British ship Poltolloch of Glasgow, en route from Rosalia to Astoria went ashore. The vessel was floated, but only after she had cost the underwriters $400,000.

February 22,1904, the American schooner Frank W. Howe, from Ballard to San Pedro, piled up on the beach and became a total loss. Seven members of the crew of nine were saved:

July 17, 1904, the American schooner Zampa was wrecked on the beach. She was en route from San Pedro to Astoria. The vessel was afterward floated .

March 26, 1905, the schooner C. A. Klose, from Vancouver for San Francisco, drifted ashore and became a total loss. This vessel was abandond at sea and drifted ashore with no one on board.

February 5, 1907, the schooner Solono drifted ashore while en route from San Francisco for Grays Harbor. The vessel is still on the beach, but there is now practically no hope of saving her. Her crew was saved.

January 15,1909, the lastest disaster occurred when the French ship Alice, Captain Auberts, was driven ashore with a cargo of cement from London. The Alice is a total loss. Her crew was saved.

NO MONEY FOR ALASKA ROADS

Congress Will Make no Appropriation For Work

Washington, Feb. 5—While Alaska road enthusiasts in Seattle were forming plans to secure from congress this year an appropriation of $1,000,000, house members who are sticklers for technicalities, so involved the appropriation ot $350,000, included in the army appropriation bill, which passed the house that the item was stricken from the bill, and there is grave likelihood that no approriations for roads in the territory will be made this year.

The original paragraph, which read, "For construction and maintenance of roads in Alaska," was stricken from the bill on the ground that no appropriation could be made except for "continuance" of road building.

An amendment was offered covering this technicality. At this point it was brought out from a number of sources that no direct appropriaton for roads in Alaska could be made since no law existed permitting it.

The only law at present covering this mattter is, that all moneys derived from liquor licenses in the territory shall be expended for roads, schools and care of the insane. The point was sustained by the chair, and no way was then left open to retain the appropriation in the bill.

Senator Piles has begun an active campaign to have the appropriation retained when the senate considers the army bill. He will introduce an amendment covering the appropriation of $100,000, for the furtherance of roads as suggested by the Alaska day movement. It may be considered a more judicious course simply to restore the house item of $350,000.

Washington, Feb. 5—Representative Hawley today introduced a bill authorizing the sale of all the reserved lands on the Siletz Inidan Reservation. The government farm on the Siletz reservation is to be cut up into five-acre tracts and 40 acres of this farm nearest the government building is to be laid off as a townsite and sold, reserving to actual business men and residents the right to buy the land upon which their respective buildings stand.

Where such lands are sold to other than the owner of buildings thereon, the owner shall have the right to sell its improvements to the purchaser of the land or remove his improvements. The net proceeds of the sale of these lands is to be paid in part to the Siletz Indians and part is to be spent in erecting schools for their children.

The fire department had a strenuous time during Thursday evening as it answered four alarms. Three were on account of chimmney fires, two in Uppertown and one in Uniontown, and no damage resulted from them. Shortly before midnight a fire was discovered at the Louvre at Seventh and Astor streets caused by crossing of electric wires and damage to the amount of about $100 resulted before it was extinguished.

More trouble is being experienced by the breaking of the dykes in the vicinity of Warrenton and the railroad track was again washed out on Thursday afternon from the water that comes from the Lewis & Clark district. The last break was near the mill of the old Oregon Mills Company and it was necessary to transfer the passengers on the trains last evening. Until all the dykes are repaired and the water is drained off such temporary delays may be expected.

Captain Parsons reports that when about 10 miles to the southward of the mouth of the Umpqua river the Alliance narrowly escaped colliding with the monster uprooted tree that has been adrift off the coast for several weeks and which was reported here on the former visit of the Alliance. The tree was passed at 1:30 o'clock in the morning and Chief Officer Nolan who was on the bridge at the time, says he discovered it just in time to steer the craft aside about its own width. A collision would probably have damaged the steamer seriously, as the tree is said to be fully four feet in diameter. Chief Officer Nolan, who was promoted from second officer the trip before, will leave the steamer this trip. L. A. Fitzmorris, formerly chief officer on the Coos Bay liner Breakwater, having come from San Francisco to relieve him. It is understood that, Mr. Nolan has been offered command of a coaster running out to San Francisco.

The following telegram from Salem is to a certain extent self explanatory but does not tell all the truth: "On or before May 1, 1909, the existing local 4-cent passenger fare on the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad between Goble and Seaside will be reduced to a maximum of 3 cents a mile and the company will retain the privilege to establishing lower and special rates when the occasion requires. This matter was brought to the attention of the railroad commission several weeks ago, upon complaint of numerous citizens of Astoria. The Officials of the railroad appeared before the commission and without any evidence having been taken, voluntarily acquised in the reduction of rates." The request for this alleged reduction of rates was made by some people on the Seaside branch where there was a few cents differential against their points. And the rates to other points was lower than three cents the company was willing to grant the request and it can now have the authority of the state commission to charge an established rate of three cents a mile if desired but whether it will do so or not will be determined later. The new rate, if universally adopted would increase the rate to the principal points on the road and in proportion increase its receipts.

At this morning's session of the county court, the report of the viewers, who selected the route for a road about two miles in length from the north fork of the Klaskanine river to Bear creek as petitioned for by Andrew P. Lillinas and others, was read and the road ordered opened. A warrant was ordered drawn in the sum of $100 in favor of J. Wiike for damages to his property in connection with the opening of the road. Frank Olson, prosecuting attorney for Wahkiakum county, Wash., appeared before the court and stated that his county had allowed the claim of Clatsop county in the sum of $100 for holding the inquest in the case of Madaline Longtaine, who died in the hospital here during December. The clerk was instructed to turn the testimony from the inquest over to Mr. Olson and Coroner Gilbaugh was directed to deliver the exhibits which he has relating to the case to the Wahkiakum county authorities. A petition, signed by a large number of residents of the Nehalem valley was presented to the court, asking that a bridge be built across the Nehalem river at Vine Maple. The court made an order, stating that as it had not made a levy this year with the idea of building said bridge, the court takes the matter under consideration and will investigate the location and cost of the proposed bridge during the present year with the view of building it, when the road from Astoria to Nehalem is completed, as the court is of the opinion that until the main road is finished to the Nehalem river, it is better to apply all funds available for that purpose.

A SCOOP

Without saying a word Herman Wise hiked himself to Chicago and New York to get ahead of his competitors and the boys in his store are tickled because the new spring styles of suits for men and young men are so beautiful, nothing like them has ever been seen before. Mr. Wise writes from the east that he just went to the leading manufacturers and asked the special favor of giving him the first pick of the latest things in suits. As a result the stylish fellows in Astoria will have the latest spring suits ahead of any city on the coast and as soon as the good dressers of the eastern metropolis. Mr. Wise states that price cuts no figure with him. It was style and workmanship that he was after and he secured what is best today in Chicago and New York.

Look in the windows of Wises store and see what the Broadway chaps are going to wear. There's nothing slow about Herman Wise. He is Astoria's champion clothier and there is not one of them in all Oregon to take the championship away from him. LAUNCHING OF THE DELAWARE

Great American Battleship in the Water

Newport News, Feb. 6—The great American battleship Delaware was successfully launched from the yards of her builiders today.

The Delaware ▨ 2,000 tons heavier than the Dreadnought, with 25 per cent more efficiency in her batteries. She is 4,000 tons heavier than the star ship of the famous battleship fleet under Admiral Sperry, the flagship Connecticut. The Connecticut carries four 12-inch guns, the greatest weapons used on a modern battlship, while the Delaware and the North Dakota are to have ten each, and a corresponding array of smaller guns.

The dimensions of the great ship are as follows: Length 510 feet, breadth at water line 85 feet 25-8 inches, mean draft of water 27 feet, total coal capacity 2300 tons, contract speed 21 knots. The total cost of the vessel will be about $7,000,000 When in commission she will carry a crew of 878 men and 55 officers.

The Delaware ▨ so far as known, all round the most powerful battleship ever launched. She is one of four sister ships authorized by congress which will form an indomitable squadron. The others are the North Dakota Florida, and Utah. The Delaware will have a speed of 21 knots. Her main battery will permit a broadside 25 per cent greater than any other battleship. Her hull is protected by a water line armor belt eight feet wide and eleven inches thick. Above the water line the armor is seven feet wide and ten inches thick. Her contract price is $3,987,000. The Delaware will have a displacement of 21,000 tons, which is 2100 tons greater than British Dreadnaught and 750 tons greater than Britian's latest vessel, the Vanguard.

The Delaware was christened with champaigne by Miss Annie Penewell Cahill of Bridgewell Delaware a neice of the governor of that state. The launching was followed by an elaborate banquet.

Valentines

Oh, where are all the valentines
With gold and silver lace,
Whose roses, lilies, columbines,
Oft wreathed a dainty face?
And whence are flown the doves, in truth,
O'er bleeding hearts on guard?—
The modern swain but sends, forsooth,
A fancy postal card!

Oh, where are all the valentines
Where Cupid with his bow
Fond heart with fond heart intertwines
And bridal roses blow?
No more love lyrics in his youth
Indites the lover bard;—
The modern swain but sands, forsooth,
A fancy postal card!,

You can buy Imperiales everywhere. The mouthpiece Imperiales with their thin mais paper—crimped, not pasted—their clear, rich tobacco, have fenced off a field for themselves that no other cigarette has ever been able to trespass.

The Best
Way
To Advertise
Astoria?
* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

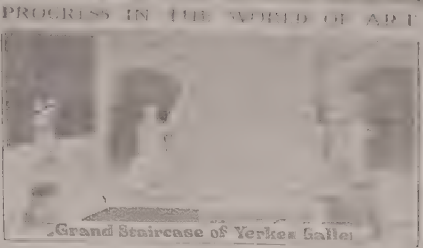
PROGRESS IN THE WORLD OF ART



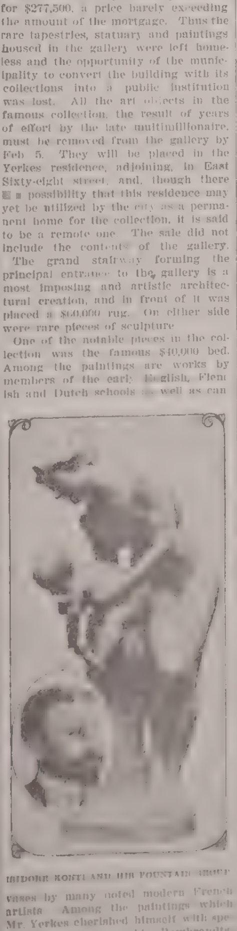
Grand Staircase of Yerkes Galle

THE [illegible] of New York sustained [illegible] when [illegible] Charles T. Yerkes was forfeited by the municipality and the art gallery which the dead traction magnate intended should become a public institution was allowed to go into private hands. It is said the building which Mr. Yerkes erected for his art treasures will probably be torn down to make way for some other rich man's private residence. An insurance company held a mortgage against the Yerkes estate and the gallery which Mr. Yerkes willed to the city of New York with its contents was put up at auction under foreclosure proceedings and sold for $277,500, a price barely exceeding the amount of the mortgage. Thus the rare tapestries, statuary and paintings housed in the gallery were left homeless and the opportunity of the municipality to convert the building with its collections into a public institution was lost. All the art objects in the famous collection, the result of years of effort by the late multimillionaire, must be removed from the gallery by Feb 5. They will be placed in the Yerkes residence, adjoining, in East Sixty-eight street, and, though there is a possibility that this residence may yet be utilized by the city as a permanent home for the collection, it is said to be a remote one. The sale did not include the contents of the gallery.

THE BENJAMIN CONSTANT PORTRAIT OF MRS. YERKES AND THE $40,000 BED.

The grand stairway forming the principal entrance to the gallery is a most imposing and artistic architectural creation, and in front of it was placed a $60,000 rug. On either side were rare pieces of sculpture.

One of the notable pieces in the collection was the famous $40,000 bed. Among the paintings are works by members of the early English, Flemish and Dutch schools as well as cameo vases by many noted modern French artists. Among the paintings which Mr. Yerkes cherished himself with special fondness were his Rembrandts. He was also a great admirer of J. M. W. Turner and once paid about $80,000 for a painting by this artist. The collection included a painting of Mrs Yerkes—that is of the magnate's second wife—by Benjamin Constant.



ISIDORE KONTI AND HIS FOUNTAIN GROUP

The discovery [illegible] made in this country [illegible] the holding of the big international exposition [illegible] in sculptural decorations that the effect of such adornment is much heightened by giving them proper out of door surroundings. Carrying out this idea Chicago, the first American city to hold [illegible] embellished to an [illegible] extent [illegible] the sculptor's art, has been making the experiment of an outdoor exhibition. The display was held in Humboldt park and is said to have been the first outdoor sculpture exhibition ever given in this country. Various societies co-operated, the Field Columbian museum lent a number of groups from the late but not lamented Columbian exposition, and the sculptors of Chicago and the west contributed [illegible] of their works. Passing along through the shrubbery one came, for instance, upon "The Miner," a big muscled man, carrying his dinner pail and stooping to kiss his little daughter, a group by Charles J. Mulligan, who has done many such works and has fitly been called the sculptor of labor. On the lawn at the side of the path was Leonard Crunelle's "Boy and Hen" struggling as though in the midst of an afternoon frolic. On the bank of a stream which wends its way through the park was the same sculptor's "Youthful Bather."

In New York a somewhat similar experiment was tried in connection with the recent annual exhibition of the National Academy of Design. The sculptural exhibits, instead of being arranged as usual with the paintings in the Vanderbilt gallery, were placed by themselves in the Gould riding circle, next the Vanderbilt gallery. In this apartment, with its tanbark floor and lofty roof, the out of doors impression was intensified by placing at the end opposite the entrance some columns from the Massachusetts studio of Daniel C. French so to form an exedra and arranging hemlock trees in the background. In the center of the rear wall was placed Mr French's latest important work, the Melvin memorial, entitled "Mourning Victory," an achievement that has been compared favorably with his now famous "Death and the Sculptor." In the center of this unusual gallery was a fountain with a fountain group by Isidore Konti, and in front of it was the rather remarkable figure by Fernando Miranda, entitled "Primitive Marksman." This certainly had not only the open air, but the primitive, even primeval spirit, the man here represented, on his back with upraised feet, supporting his bow and aiming an arrow at the sun, being a creature who might well have lived in the glacial epoch so far as thoughts of civilization were concerned. The fountain group by Mr Konti, showing a mother holding her child and bending over as if to dip it in the flowing water, is a very chaste and beautiful creation worthy of an artist whose work in several expositions has contributed so much to popular education along the lines of art.

BUST OF POE BY EDMOND T. QUINN.

The centenary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe on Jan [illegible] special interest to the [illegible] by Edmond T. Quinn [illegible] the sculptural division of the academy exhibition. It has been spoken of as one of the most effective sculptured likenesses of the poet yet produced and interprets his artistic temperament as only a true artist appreciating the achievements of a member of another creative profession could do. An interesting contrast might be instituted between it and the Poe bust by Zolnay in the possession of the University of Virginia. Mr. Quinn's Poe is one which exerts a fascination much like that which the poet himself must have exercised over those who were able to appreciate his genius. The bust was purchased by the Bronx Society of Arts and Sciences for the monument dedicated by it in Poe park, Fordham, on the day of the centenary.

The residents of the Nehalem valley have peitioned the county court to construct a bridge across the Nehalem river near Vine Maple. A bridge is needed there as during a great portion of the year many of the people are unable to cross the river to the postoffice except by boats and there is no way in which teams can be taken across, while the river is high. The court appreciates this fact, but wisely deems that the construction of the main road to the Nehalem is of first importance but judging from the order made in court yesterday, the bridge will be constructed as soon as the road is finished. That this decison will be satisfactory to the petitioners is certain, as it is understood they did not expect the bridge could be built next summer, but want the matter taken up and the preliminaries arranged so that the bridge can be constructed at the very earliest possible moment.

The commissioners court of Wahkiakum county has approved the claim of Clatsop county for the expense attending the holding of an inquest in the case of Madaline Longtaine, the Cathlamet girl, who died at the hospital here last December. The claim was a just one, as this county was not interested in the case, excepting the death of the girl occurring here made the holding of the inquest in this county necessary according to law, and Wahkiakum county is to be commended for its fairness in allowing the bill, which amounted to about $100.

The breaking of some of the old dikes on the west side of Young's bay by the recent high tides, should be a warning to the owners of the property to have their dikes rebuilt during the coming summer, in order that a repetition of the great amount of damage may not occur. Some of these dikes had not been repaired for years and the result was that the unusually high water burst thru them and flooded large tracts of land in the district. The damage done amounts to several times more than would the expense of repairs at the proper time.

The California legislature appears determined to attract attention from the entire county even if it has to enact some useless anti-Japanese measures. If the people of California want to get rid of the Japanese all they have to do is to stop patronizing them, but if it is only notoriety the legislative members desire, they might pattern after Oregon's solons and pass laws fixing the length of sheets on hotel beds, providing the length of hat pins and several others equally as silly.

George S. Long's suggestion that the state acquire logged-off lands unfit for agriculture and use them for forestry should be weighed by the legislature now in session. It is time for the state to adopt a conservation policy. The sooner one is adopted the longer will lumber be a great source of wealth to the state. The demand for low priced lumber, on the one hand, and the demand for greater economy in the cutting of logs in the woods and sawing them in the mills, on the other, seriously conflict, as Mr. Long appoints out. To grant both demands does not look possible. It is out of the question for the state or the federal government to regulate the production and price of lumber so the ordinary laws of trade will have to continue to work themselves out to a large degree. Men are in the lumber business primarily for profit, not for working out a conservation policy. But there are some things that may be done under present conditions. Logged-off lands unfit for agriculture should be producing a new growth of timber. On this matter the state may will legislate without seriously interferring with the lumber business.

CALLING THE TRAMP'S BLUFF

Experiment should be made without delay to test the hard luck stories of "out of works" who appeal to the sympathies of the thrifty in interior New York. The regions most frequented lie along routes of travel between New England and the lakes and between Canada and the south. Migratory hoboes, whether claiming residence in New York state or to be en route to inviting pastures beyond the borders, can be placed in colonies to earn their keep or at least do enough to prove their sincerity.

Projects similar to tramp colonization have been tried in Europe with fair success. The continent has had in the past many worthy workmen who traveled from point to point seeking better wages or to see the country or to satisfy roving instinct. No doubt the modern idle tramp over there counterfeits his honest brother and gets charity by making the "out of work" bluff. At one time the tramp printer was an institution of American country life. He moved from town to town seeking work, generally getting it by an appeal to fraternal sympathy, but he at least made an effort to pay his way. He has been succeeded by a tramp who pretends that work awaits him somewhere in the beyond and plaintively asks for charity to tide him over. Charity merely confirms idleness in such a case, and, however decent the beginning, the end is pauperism. A man who is forced to tramp to find work is to be pitied. In the colony he can have work without tramping for it and must at least make a show of earning what he eats

Venezuela's fugitive president is a type that even South American republics cannot afford to tolerate. A certain class of bold adventurer is admired in these days. But Castro is one of the worst of his kind. His rule in Venezuela was not alone dictatorial; it was brutal and vicious. Diaz is a dictator, but his sway has been beneficent on the whole. Under him Mexico is progressive. Perhaps he makes the Mexicans a nation of children, yet he leaves them a heritage of manhood to improve upon in the future.

There is something picturesque about Venezuela's "man of destiny," born a peasant and promoted from mule driver to general, then president. However, his sins against the spirit of the age, against democracy, have been heinous. Measured by every standard of decency, he is an outlaw of civilization, like the pirates whose audacity, cruelty and viciousness he has exceeded because his opportunities were greater. Any nation which sees to it that South America is rid of this monster forever will come in for the whole world's applause. The title "president" is far too sacred to serve as a shelter for the infamies of Cipriano Castro.

The best man on the job of clearing away snow is getting along in years and works in fair weather only. But he can put away more snow between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. than the biggest shovel brigade ever mustered will dispose of in a ten hour day and overtime. Old Sol, "that's him."

When the forests are all nationalized humble citizens of the states who attempt to "take to the woods" will be likely to strike a dead line.

James Smith was in town today buying supplies. He bought a coffee mill and will hereafter grind Folger's Golden Gate Coffee fresh as he uses it. He use to ask the grocer to grind it.

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

It is hard to convince yourself that there is any [illegible] result [illegible] when you know your friends continue to treat you in the same old way.

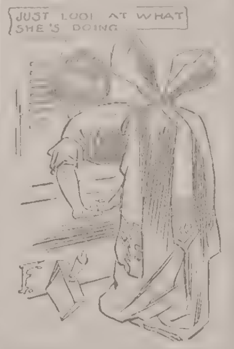
There are men whom the world would get along without, but these men are in darkest and densest ignorance of the fact.

It takes a man of keen perceptions and great persuasive ability to discover a thing that doesn't exist.

Everybody would like to be good, but the great trouble is that most of us know so many disagreeable people who wont let us.

If the nondescript girl with hay colored hair is known as a blond beauty, she has a millionaire father.

An absentminded man ought to be made to absent himself and hunt his mind up every time he indulges his peculiarity.



JUST LOOK AT WHAT SHE'S DOING

Between knowing what we ought to do and knowing what our friends ought to do some of us are so busy that we are necessarily inactive.

The man who is the author of his own misery doesn't draw a royalty from one of the six best sellers.

AVE HOPES FOR TARIFF

umbermen Believe They Can Win Fight

Bellingham, Feb. 6--Affiliated Lum- r Manufacturing Associations of the nited States have recently effected ganization in Washington, D. C. to ght for the retention of the tariff on mber and shingles, according to J. . Bloedel, a member of the board of vernors of the National Lumber anufacturers' Association, who has st returned from the east. The lum- ermen, he says, have hopes of re- ining the tariff on shingles, and from e-half to two-thirds of the duty on mber.

A Valuable Asset.

Dr. William A. White, superintend- nt of the Government Hospital For e Insane near Washington, was alking about the asylum grounds one ay when he met a patient.

"Doctor," said the insane man, "how any crazy folks are there here any- ow?"

"A great many," the doctor replied— two or three thousand."

"Well," continued the questioner, you'd have a hard time making a liv- ng if it wasn't for us, wouldn't you?" —Cleveland Leader.

VAST TONNAGE DISENGAGED

Many Vessels Laid Up at Liverpool

Liverpool, Feb. 6—Over 1,500,000 tons of shipping are laid up for want of employment and freights all over the world are lower than ever before, is the rather discouraging introduction of H. E. Moss & Co's annual steamship review. The year 1908, they say, like its predessor, ended most unsatisfactorily for ship owners, ship builders and every one else interested in shipping, with few exceptions. It would be difficult for many to recall to memory any period so unfavorable as that of last year. We are not surprised that with 1,500,000 tons of shipping laid up at home and abroad, and freights all over the world lower than were ever known before, the advent of 1909 was hailed with the hope that the depression in shipping had about passed its worst phase. The American panic of October, 1907, has left its mark all over the world. It destroyed credit, restricted trade in every direction, and, coming so unexpectedly on top of an oversupplied market caught most of us unawares.

The time has now arrived when it is impossible to disguise the fact that at least 1,000,000 tons of old and obsolete tonnage must be broken up. It is good for no other purpose; and the soner those interested face the inevitable and readjust their values, the sooner freights will improve, for it is improbable that such tonnage can be worked again at a profit. Already ship breaking has become an important industry at home and abroad, and is rapidly increasing.

A SCOOP

Without saying a word Herman Wise hiked himself to Chicago and New York to get ahead of his competitors and the boys in his store are tickled because the new spring styles of suits for men and young men are so beautiful, nothing like them has ever been seen before. Mr. Wise writes from the east that he just went to the leading manufacturers and asked the special favor of giving him the first pick of the latest things in suits. As a result the stylish fellows in Astoria will have the latest spring suits ahead of any city on the coast and as soon as the good dressers of the eastern metropolis. Mr. Wise states that price cuts no figure with him. It was style and workmanship that he was after and he secured what is best today in Chicago and New York.

Look in the windows of Wises store and see what the Broadway chaps are going to wear. There's nothing slow about Herman Wise. He is Astoria's champion clothier and there is not one of them in all Oregon to take the championship away from him. Whoop la, but the salesmen in Wise's Clothing store are proud of the old man's scoop.

In addition to these new spring clothes Mr. Wise has sent by express the niftiest neckwear.

If you want the latest; if you want style; come to Wise's for you can't look foolish in a Wise suit. x

SAILS ACAIN TO MYSTIC COCOS

James Brown Knows Where Lies $59,000,000

San Francisco, Feb. 6—Captain James Brown, who was a member of party that searched for the famous Cocos Island treasure in 1850, sailed again for the South Seas tody torecover the spoils of the Spanish freebooters taken from them by Captain Smith, of the schooner Black Witch, which sailed from Salem .Mass., in 1820. Ever since that time venturesome treasure seekers have sought the rich loot, but all that have ever come of their search has been countless romances of the sea.

According to an inteview given by Captain Brown before he sailed, the reason for the failure was the fact that the party which he accompanied in 1850 removed the treasure from Cocos to another island of the South Pacific. In the expedition of 1850 Brown sailed with Captain Smith, son of the doughty seafarer who relieved the Spanish ships of their great treasure. According to the captain, the treasure was found and $1,000,000 was removed to Australia after the schooner had broken up and all of the crew except the captain, the steward and himself had perished. The remaining $59,000,000 was buried on another island. Before this country was reached the captain and steward died, so he claims that he is the only living man who knows the wereabouts of the treasure. Captain Brown left this port on board the Mariposa, and he plans to outfit a small steamer when he reaches the group of islands where the treasure is buried. He has a family in Providence, R. I.

BUILD TOWER AT MARSHFIELD

One to be Erected by The Weather Bureau

Marshfield is to have a steel storm-warning tower just as soon as it can be built in the east and sent to Coos Bay, according to advices which have been received by District Forecaster E. A. Beals from Washington, D. C. It will be equipped with high-power electric lanterns and will be placed on a prominent site donated by the city of Marshfield. The service in this line there heretofore was made up altogether of day displays consisting of flags. But with the new tower established signals will be given day and night. Otto Schutter will act in the capacity of displayman. Mr. Beals also states that for the purpose of testing the best method of measuring snowfall a station will soon be established at Meacham, Or. A site for it has been given by J. P. O'Brien, general manager of the O. R. & N. Co.

On accountt of the inclemency of the weather, the practice march by the local military company will not take place tomorrow, but will be posponed until some future date when the weather conditions are more favorable.

The senate has passed Senator Fulton's bill appropriating $175,000 for a site and public building at Astoria, and it is understood the measure will meet with little opposition in the house. A new postoffice and customs house is badly needed in Astoria.

The street committee has decided to have a crushed rock walk laid along the west side of the McClure school property as it is believed such a walk will be much more durable and thus cheaper there than one built of wood or cement.

Captain Mason has been ordered to San Francisco and passed through Astoria on the Senator. He said he had no definite knowledge why he is called there but presumes it is to take charge of one of the new boats of the company.

The arrival of the body of Fritz Anderson of Deep River, who died in California has been delayed on account of the floods and from the latest reports it cannot reach here before Monday noon so [illegible] will be impossible to hold the funeral on Sunday from the home of his parents as originally intended

United States Commissioner O'Malley of the bureau of fisheries reports 2,000,000 silver salmon eggs in the government hatchery at Cazadero and 200,000 brook trout and 50,000 lake trout eggs in Clackamas station. The fry from these eggs will be distributed in May among the streams tributary to the Clackmas river.

This morning Street Superintendent Kearney served notice on the owner of the abutting property to repair the portion of Franklin avenue near Thirty-first that has been damaged by the sliding ground and in order to avoid the danger of an accident pending the making of repairs, he has fenced the north half of the street so that it cannot be used by teams.

The southeast storm, changing to southwest, continued over Friday night and was accompained by unusually cold weather for that direction the wind. The weather bureau barometer registered the low point of 29.48 this morning, which would indicate that the storm will be continued. As it was full moon last night seafaring men predict that present conditions will continue for another week.

Articles of incorporation of the Ocean Beach Land Company were filed in Multnomah county yesterday by C. R. Donnell, N. W. Bower and F. A. Russell. The capital stock is $25,000 and the company was formed to handle Sunset Beach, a resort near Gearhart. Articles of incorporation were also filed by the Dubois Lumber Company. The incorporators are J. E. Dubois of Pennsylvania, J. K. Gamble and J. E. Magers and the capital stock is $500,000.

At today's session of the county court a petition from R. S. Wood and others for a road branch off from the Elk creek road was read and J. F. Bartoldus, R. M. Wooden and G. F. Parker were appointed as viewers to to meet on Monday, March 1, and select the route for the proposed highway. A petition from W. L. Moody and others asking for a road near Knappa was read and E. B. Kunzler, W. E. Cole and George Stevens were named as viewers to lay out the route for the proposed highway.

The Oregon senate passed a bill yesterday afternoon appropriating $12,000 to construct a central hatchery to be located on the lower Columbia river. The plan is to send eyed salmon eggs from the upper hatcheries to this central plant where they will be developed into fingerlings and released at some point near the ocean, the contention being that in this manner more of the fry will be able to reach the sea than under the present arrangement of releasing the fry in the upper rivers, where they have to battle with trout and other natural enemies on their long journey to the ocean.

McCue's measure to enable counties to levy a tax for a publicity fund was the subject of considerable discussion in the state senate on Friday afternoon with the result that it was amended and sent back to the house. The bill provided that a tax of two mills could be levied for this purpose by the county court. In Multnomah county this would bring $472,000 for publicity. In Marion it would mean $62,000, in Jackson $53,200, in Washington $24,000, and Clatsop $17,000. The amount which could be raised by 2 mills in other counties has not been figured out. It was proposed to compromse on one mill, but this was considered too high, and the senate concluded that one-half of one mill would be ample, and the bill was sent back as amended.

Chief Engineer Lockwood and Superintendent Campion of the Port of Portland commission were in the city this afternoon for the purpose of looking over the bar tug Wallula, which the members of the commission contemplate purchasing. They also made a cursory inspection of the pilot schooner Joseph Pulitzer as it is expected that a bid will be made for her in the near future if her owners are willing to dispose of her. The pilots, with the exception of a couple, are not taking much interest in the matter as they are well acquainted with the inside facts of the whole proposition. They believe that it is all a scheme of the present owners of the tugboat system on the Columbia river and bar to unload a White Elephant on the tax payers of Multnomah county.

District Forecaster E. A. Beals has been advised by the department that the plans for the new steel storm warning tower [illegible] Marshfield had been accepted, and that the construction work would begin as soon as material could be secured from the east. The signals which will be displayed from the new tower will be for both day and night. Heretofore the storm signals which have been displayed from Marshfield have been visible only during the day time.

The new bulkhead to protect the lighthouse keepers' residence on the north side of the Coquille River was washed out Sunday. The work was done by James Laughead of Portland, and was completed less than a week ago, and was thought to be very solid, but owing to the fierce rolling of the breakers it gave way. The work was as solid as could be made from timbers, but it is conclusive from the result that nothing less than cement work will suffice.

The half a dozen Astorians, who went to Salem to assist in the passage of more equitable prohibition measures, have returned home. They do not speak in very complimentary terms of the proceedings of the members of the legislature with reference to their way of conducting business. The measure that they were interested in did not come up for a vote but they talked with the members about it. It is in substance that cities of three thousand population or over shall have the right to regulate the question of prohibition within their own limits.

The next debate, scheduled for the Astoria High school team, is between the Newberg High school team but whether it will be held there or in this city has not been decided. The subject will be that the state school fund shall be apportioned according to the number of teachers in the several schools instead in accordiance with the school census as at present. Who ever discovered such a subject for children to debate upon must have forgotten that they were once children and that the Oregon legislature has been unable to arrive at a conclusion on the subject.

It is more than probable there will be no trap gear put out in Baker's bay this year before the first of May says the Observer. Usually a few fishermen put out in the middle of February, and fish a month when they are liable to do fairly well if the weather is not bad. As the Oregon legislature holds only 40 days, and the chances are that the law making the close season run from March 1 to May 1 will be passed and go into effect by the 20th of February, there will be no market for fish in Oregon, at the canneries or fresh fish markets. Chris Hansen, who generally puts out his gear by the middle of this month, says it will not pay him to put out for two weeks fishing and take chances on unsettled weather.

In the New York Commercial of January 30, Charles Corby, of the Corby Commission company, is quoted as follows relative to operations in the 1900 pack of Columbia river salmon. "The same conditions prevail on the Columbia river today as have obtained ever since packers were compelled to rely on the hatcheries for their supplies of raw material, and there is no reason to expect any change in the situation; hence, with requirements in hand in advance, we are in a position to work to much better advantage in arranging for sufficient high-grade chinook salmon for packing under the best labels." It is understood that practically all the representatives of Columbia River packers are booking orders subject to approval of prices by the buyers. The situation on spot Columbia river salmon is said to be one of the strongest known in many years. Practically all the stock available is in the hands of jobbers.

The Astoria school board has a hard proposition to meet within the next few days that probably should have been anticipated. On next Monday at least 30 graduates of the grammar grades of the schools will enter the High school and those who have been attending will continue their studies. While the building has been crowded this addition will make it impossible to have sufficient seating capacity and some new arrangements will have to be made. It [illegible] suggested that the primary grade in the building be transferred to new quarters, but these are difficult to secure on such short notice for there are few vacant houses in the vicinity that could be utilized and it would take some time to adapt them for school purposes. One suggestion is to purchase a portable school house for emergency purposes, like the present, and could be placed on leased land in different parts of the city.

While not officially announced it is understood the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad Company will begin hauling gravel to ballast the entire road about the first of April. It is the intention to put on at least three work trains and rush the work as rapidly as possible.

The members of the county court are now making investigations relative to the hauling of rock on the Nehalem road during the coming summer and have not yet decided whether they will let the work by contract or do it by days' labor. It is probable, however, that the court will require those huling the rock to use wide tired wagons in order to avoid as much as possible, the cutting of the road bed.

Frank J. Carney, who was recently appointed as postmaster at Astoria, has selected Astor M. Salvon as assistant postmaster. Mr. Carney expects to receive his commission and assume the office in about two weeks.

Birch & Jacobsen have been awarded the contract by the Flavel estate for the entire rebulding of the street and sidewalk on Bond street between Tenth and Eleventh streets. The work will be of the most substantial character and will be commenced as soon as the material can be secured.

Work on loading the French bark Asnieres at the Hammond Lumber Company's mill was suspended for today on account of room being made at the wharf for loading a partial cargo on a tramp steamer. The bark has about 600,000 feet of the 1,500,000 feet necessary to complete her cargo on board.

SENATOR PERKINS OF CALIFORNIA

Washington, Feb. 8 In view of the attack which Roosevelt made upon Senator Perkins, of California for his attitude on Japanese agitation in his state, the friends of Perkins believe he will defend himself on the floor of the senate. WIDOW AND LITTLE DAUGHTER OF EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON.

Miss Elizabeth Harrison, the little daughter of the late Benjamin Harrison, is now eleven years of age, the youngest living daughter of an American ex-president. It was in 1896 that General Harrison married Mrs. Mary Scott Lord Dimmick, a niece of his first wife. The marriage for a time caused an estrangement between the ex-president and his son and daughter. Little Elizabeth was about four years old when her illustrious father died.

. STRANGE SOCIETY CULT .

There's a new and strange cult in New York city. It numbers among its disciples society folk and its chief apostle is Mrs. Aso Neith Cochran, founder of the Aso Neith cryptogram, which by the mere changing of a person's first name to accord with the date of his or her birth enables any one to be or do anything and everything. The Aso Neith cryptogram clinches a disciple fast to success, like a double spring steel trap. It also cures disease, makes bad figures good and assures happy and productive marriages.

The new system was expounded by its founder at the home of Mrs. James Dunlop Smith in New York the other afternoon, and among those present were:

Lee De Forest, inventor of the De Forest wireless; Paulding Farnum of Tiffany & Co., Lady Gridley of the English court, Mrs. Elizabeth Lindsay, Miss Florence Kea and Lieutenant and Mrs. John Howard, son-in-law and daughter of General Chaffee.

With hardly an exception the given names of those mentioned were found not in accord by Mrs. Cochran and were altered to suit. For instance, Mrs [illegible] Lindsay [illegible] Elizabeth [illegible] Grady, and Miss Florence Kea's [illegible] Velma.

Mrs. Cochran explained that each number up to nine was represented by a vibration and each number corresponded to a letter in the alphabet.

"And vibration is life," declared Mrs Cochran emphatically. "Then, of course, when the vibrations emanating from the letters in persons' names are not in harmony with the number signifying the date of their birth they are not in harmony with themselves. That is mathematics. "We can't change our last names, but we can change our given ones. If our names are out of harmony things must be adjusted. Life and health and happiness are mathematics. Therefore we can be successful if we adjust our names.

"One of the great things about this science is that you don't have to believe it. If your names are out of accord with your birth date make them in accord, and with complete harmony there will be no limit to attainments."

CABLE WILL CARRY POWER

System to be Put in At Vancouver

Vancouver, Wash., Feb. — An electric submarine cable carrying 10,000 volts is to be placed under the Columbia river, just above the big railroad bridge to carry power for lighting and other purposes in this city by the Portland Railway Light & Power Company. The cable has arrived in Portland, and its installation will begin the first of the week. An electrical expert in the laying of cable has arrived from the east to superintend the work.

This submarine cable is in three sections and weighs eighteen tons. To lay it three barges and a tug will be required; one large barge and two smaller ones, the tug being used to tow them and their loads to the places required. The cable is what is termed No. 3 copper, covered with a lead covering, over which is a jute cover, all incased in a No. [illegible] steel armor, making a cable about 3 inches in diameter.

The power station here will be maintained when the cable is completely installed, so that in case of accident to the power houses on the Oregon side, power can be generated there. The fires under the boilers will be kept banked at all times.

Automatic regulators are to be installed in the power house, and this will do away entirely with the fluctuations in the voltage, which has been noticeable here this winter. These will cost $3,000.

The power company expects to expend the sum of $25,000 in improvements in Vancouver this year, including the submarine cable.

The Cause of the Delay.

Our small boy, Arthur, had long believed that a baby in the family was desirable, since most of his playmates came from homes provided with this adjunct. In good time his mother told him confidentially that his oft expressed wish for a family baby would probably be gratified. The news was too good to keep, and Arthur was promptly boasting to his nearest chum.

"But when are you going to have it?" demanded the friend.

"Oh, I don't know—'fore long, I guess," answered Arthur.

"Huh," sniffed the other, "what's the use of waiting? What good's a baby if you can't have it when you want it? Why don't you get it right away?"

"Well, you see, it's this way," explained Arthur, driven to his wits' end: "we've ordered the baby, but we haven't paid for it yet!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Pleasant While It Lasted.

He listened intently. It was his wife and her mother talking.

"No, my dear," the latter was saying, "I must go tomorrow. I do not believe in a mother-in-law making long visits. But, before I go, I want to tell you what a treasure I think you have gained in your husband. He seems to me to be near perfection. Are you sure, however, that you are not too strict with him? Do not be quick to chide him when he stays out late. Men need a little latitude, you know—say two or three times a week."

The man stirred uneasily in his sleep. It seemed so real; but, alas; it was a dream!

AFFAIRS IN THE FAR EAST

Opinion Expressed by Admiral Rodley Evans

Chicago, Feb. — "A few days ago when the Russian government floated a loan of $360,000,000, which was subscribed 30 times over, that was Russia's notice to Japan "to get ready for war and stay ready, for I'm going to lick you."

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, "Fighting Bob," seated in his apartments in the Auditorium Annex made this significant statement. The old fighter was talking guardedly. His statement was not made on the spur of the moment. He had studied the situation and the conditions. His mind had been made up on this point. His eyes flashed and he shook his finger menacingly at his interviewer as he spoke.

ROBLEY D. EVANS.

"And what is more," added the admiral, "Japan herself recognizes and realizes the position in which she is placed. The handwriting is plain. Japan can read."

A number of statements of national import, viewed from the viewpoint of "Bob" Evans, did the admiral make. Briefly summarized they are:

The United States will have no trouble with Japan.

Neither will England.

When the next Russo-Japanese war does come, Germany, France and Austria will espouse the cause of the Russians.

England will find herself allied with Japan by virtue of existing treaties.

What the result of it all will be no man can foresee. In discussing purely national affairs with reference to the navy of the United States, Admiral Evans said:

"We are approaching the day—I do not say it is near at hand, but we are approaching it gradually—when the United States will have a fleet of warships so great so powerful that no power on the face of the earth will dare tackle us."

TRAINING OF WILD BEASTS

Whips, Sticks and Iron Rods Are the Methods

"Kindness and argymint," said the backwoods father of five husky sons, "is great things, but whenever I wanter persuade one o' my boys to do suthin' in a hurry thet he don't wanter do I use a bale stick."

In laying down this rule for the government of his offspring the old backwoodsman hit the principle of wild animal training straight in the nose. The only use an animal trainer has for the word "kindness" may be found in its employment when he discusses his professional methods with an interviewer.

Many pounds of good white paper have been wasted in describing instances of mutual affection between animal and trainer, but when it comes right down to actual cases the sole bond between the domestic man and the wild beast is a good strong stick, and the fiercer the beast the bigger and tougher the stick. Of the great army of nature fakers certainly the professional animal trainer is commander in chief.

Whips, sticks and iron rods are the accepted instruments of persuasion, and trainers constantly employ them. When a wild animal is to be broken the first thing to break is his spirit. It is done with a club.—Everybody's Magazine.

Unkind.

"My dear," exclaimed a young bride, "my husband writes so beautifully! You really ought to see some of his love letters!" "Yes, dear, I know," was the unkind retort. "I have a drawer full of them at home!"—Manchester Guardian.

Astoria?

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

Buried Treasure.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

The death of James Norris of the village of Colville produced the first wave of excitement the place had experienced since the chimney of the Methodist church had burned out seven years previously. Mr. Norris was an old bachelor. He was a crank and a miser. It was sure that he had plenty to live on, and yet he lived alone and in squalor. He lent money where any one would pay him 10 per cent interest, and he was the owner of several pieces of real estate. Among them was an old cider mill. It was in the rear end of this that the old man had his residence. In the fall he ground apples and made cider for all who would buy, and this was his only work.

It had been talked over a hundred times by the villagers that Norris had his money buried where robbers could not get it and that in case he died suddenly his heirs, if any came forward, would have great trouble in finding it. This was a real cause of worry to many citizens. Some of them even went so far as to advise the old man to tell them the exact spot so as to save time in digging. When he refused to do so it was taken as another evidence of his meanness. On the morning that his death became known the village of Colville was as excited as if a circus had come to town. Now the disputed point as to how much he was worth and how much money he had buried would be known to all. There were some who would have gone hunting for that money right away had not the justice of the peace stepped in and taken charge.

Men came from a distance of fifty miles to help in that search. At one time the searchers numbered nearly a thousand, and so many strangers had to be lodged and fed that Colville took on a boom. The first thing was to search the old mill. Men fought each other as they crowded into it. Then the half acre of sterile soil around it must be explored, then the marsh and the piece of woods back of it. Most of the searchers gave up after a day or two, but some continued on for a fortnight. At the end, however, nothing had been found.

Five years passed, and then came the next brain storm. A tin peddler drove into the village to remain over Sunday. On Sunday afternoon he wandered down to the old mill to have a look at the ruins. A high wind on Saturday night had brought roof and frame to the earth. In "mousing" around his eye was caught by the flutter of a piece of paper, and an hour later the village was seething. The peddler was no hog. He had found a good thing, but was ready to divvy with the public. If he got $10,000 out of it the villagers might share the rest. That piece of paper was the key to the old miser's buried treasure. It must have been concealed in a hollow beam all the time. The writing on it ran as follows:

"Oct. 17th, 1888.—B one B of C today 7 p w of the b O T."

The town didn't think much of that peddler when he entered it. He was looked upon as just a common tin peddler who took paper, rags, sheepskins, old iron, beeswax, butter and eggs and such things in exchange for his tin pans and dippers. Before Sunday had passed, however, men were taking off their hats to him and wondering when he would be governor of the state. He was the only one that could make any sense of the paper, and he didn't give it away until after he had been invited to dinner by the justice. Then he read it off as:

"Buried one barrel of cash today seven paces west of the big oak tree."

It was evening when the puzzle was solved. Lanterns were lit and bonfires built and the seven paces paced off. They struck at a spot where there had been no digging, and the justice appointed ten men to guard the place for the night. In the morning the ruins would be searched for more papers. There must be others. When a miser begins to bury barrels of cash he does not stop at one. He goes right ahead and buries five or six in order to make the search after his death interesting.

Hasty breakfasts or none at all were eaten next morning, and then the ruins were searched. Not an inch of beam or board escaped scrutiny twice over. Nothing further was found except an old tobacco box, and that was empty. A groan of despair followed the conclusion of the search. The miserable old man had buried only one barrel of cash, after all, and the tin peddler was to have $10,000 out of that. Four men began to dig at seven paces due west of the big oak tree. The ground had settled down as hard as asphalt, but had it been cast iron they would have stuck to the job. There were 600 people in a circle about them when the shout of discovery went up. One of the picks had struck the barrel. There was a great rush, and it was a quarter of an hour before it could be cleared of dirt and lifted out. Then there were more cheers and more rushes. The barrel was up ended at last, and as the head was knocked in the price of real estate in Colville soared to the clouds. Next moment it fell with a thud like that of a brick house coming down. The "b of c" was a barrel of cider instead of a barrel of cash. The old man had buried it as an experiment to see what the taste would be years hence. Two minutes of awful suspense, half a dozen terrible yells in chorus, and then the peddler went flying for his life and the villagers called each other fools and went home.

Old Mississippi has seen great changes. For ages she knew only the red men hunting on her banks or darting hither and thither in their canoes leaving streaks of light on her broad bosom. She saw De Soto come, an apparition from another world. Later the flatboat, the sun glittering on its water dripping sweeps, marked the approach of civilization. The steamer followed the flatboat, an era that marked the old river's greatest glory, a glory of which she was robbed by the railroad built on her banks.

In the middle of the last century what was then regarded a floating palace stopped at Memphis, took on passengers and proceeded on her way down toward New Orleans. Among those who came aboard at Memphis was Arthur Davidson, the son of a widow living on her plantation near that city. Her husband had been a spendthrift and had mortgaged his plantation. From the day of his death for ten years Mrs. Davidson struggled and saved, scraping together every loose coin that came in her way to pay off this mortgage and leave her plantation to her children free from debt. These were two girls and two boys. The eldest boy, Arthur, was twenty-one, the youngest boy eleven. The widow determined to send Arthur to New Orleans, where the money had been borrowed to pay it off and to enter upon a business life. Her property was to be reserved for her minor children.

At that time, when the long table in the cabin was not set for meals, a number of groups were scattered about playing various games of cards. Arthur Davidson stood over one of these tables looking on. It was not only Arthur that listened to the fascinating click of gold pieces (for our individuality is merged into that of our parents and our children; it was both he and his weak father. He sat down and joined in the game.

He had in his pocketbook money for his traveling expenses. The $10,000 with which to pay off the mortgage was in a money belt about his waist. Arthur Davidson soon lost his expense money, rose from the table and walked out on the guards, struggling the while against temptation to go back and redeem his loss by risking the money intrusted to his care. The image of his mother came up before him—terror stricken, pleading. He saw his younger brother and sisters ruined at an age when they could not at that day hope to provide for themselves. But the temptation was too strong for him. Feverishly he unbuckled his belt and, taking out a number of $500 bills, placed them unfolded in his pocketbook. Then he returned to the cabin and resumed his place at the table.

While there were gambler sharks on the Mississippi, there were many games made up of planters, cow men and others in legitimate occupations. The game in which Arthur Davidson was playing was fair, but he was reckless, doing an inordinate amount of bluffing, and he lost steadily. The more his mother's savings diminished the more reckless he became. The game continued far into the night, and toward the small hours of the morning he had parted with more than one-half he had taken from his belt.

It was about 2 o'clock when some one of the players opened a fat pot, and every one stayed in. It was Davidson's last say. He raised, as he usually did, and still no one dropped out. This transferred to the pot about half of what he had left of his original sum. The cards were now drawn. The opener drew three, the next two drew two each and the last three one each. Davidson was one of those who drew one card. The opener bet, and Davidson raised him with all the money he had left. Since he was so given to bluffing, the others, supposing he had drawn but one card to scare them off, called him.

If he won he would win twice the mortgage money. If he lost he would have nothing left. After the last bet he laid his cards on the table face down. It was noticed that he was laboring under a terrible excitement. He bent over the table, his head resting on his arms. The rest showed their hands. The opener had one small pair, another had a pair of aces, a third had two pairs, sevens and fours, and the fourth man had a pair of queens. The highest hand in the lot was the sevens and fours, not a hard one to beat.

"Come, Davidson; show your hand."

Davidson didn't move. One of the players, impatient to know the result, turned over the young man's hand. It contained a pair of tens and a pair of threes. It had won.

"The pot's yours, youngster," called one of the players. "Wake up."

All expected Davidson to start up and eagerly clutch his winnings. Instead he remained immovable. They shook him. They turned his face so that they could see his features. It was livid.

"Is there a doctor aboard?"

Word was passed, and a man in the ladies' cabin came forward, raised Davidson looked into his face, felt his pulse and pronounced him dead. His heart had yielded to the excitement of standing on the precipice between ruin and a doubling of the money he had been tempted to risk.

Davidson's body was shipped back to his mother and with it not only the $10,000 she had intrusted to his care, but $10,000 additional.

Since then tens and treys have been called the dead man's hand, and it is a hand that is rarely beaten in draw poker.

INDEPENDENCE DAY HONOR

Danish-Americans to Celebrate Next Fourth of July

Denmark will have a Fourth of July celebration next summer given by thousands of Danish Americans who will go there for the occasion. This was recently announced by Dr Max Henius of Chicago, who went to New York to make arrangements with the Danes in that city for the celebration, which will be in Aarhus, where there will be an exhibition of the resources of Denmark.

Dr. Henius is president of the Danish American society and has sent a cable message to the president of the exhibition in Aarhus, asking that the Fourth of July be set aside as a Danish American day. The president has agreed and has turned the program for the day over to Dr. Henius. It is the intention of Dr Henius to arrange for a number of speeches by prominent Danish Americans. Aarhus is one of the oldest towns in Denmark, and there lie the bones of departed Danish [illegible]

BASEBALL

With the near approach of the baseball season the businessmen of Astoria should take steps to secure a strong team that could be connected with one or more of the coast ball leagues for the purpose of playing a series of high class games this summer.

From an amusement standpoint there is no greater or more wholesome outdoor sport than baseball and with its tremendous attending interests it becomes a business feature that means thousands of dollars in trade to all lines of merchandise each season.

Astoria has never enjoyed this privilege while her sister cities for miles around have taken advantage of the game and given their people the benefit of its amusement and profits. All that is required is proper management by men of responsibility. It is possible to secure a ball team here that could be developed equally as strong as in other cities while accessible grounds are obtainable at each end of the car line with but little effort. The trouble heretofore has been solely in the lack of a proper baseball sentiment. The encouragement that should have been forthcoming in the past was not sufficient to keep any baseball club together, so the result has been that Astoria has neither enjoyed thepleasure nor the financial profits that accrue wherever this great national game is made a feature.

It looks reasonable that a few businessmen whose interests lie along these lines could readily form a company and procure one of the best ball teams on the Pacific coast. Astoria is certainly big enough to support such an organization and with proper league connections thousands of people could be attracted to Astoria ever season that otherwise would not have an excuse to visit here.

The country resounds with praise of Jack Binns, the wireless telegraph operator on the steamship Republic rammed by the Florida, says the Tacoma Ledger. Binns remained at his post, sent distress messages to the wide world and forwarded them with other messages about the accident. He deserves praise, though his conduct was not, of a sensationally heroic character. He was not a coward That is clear. Hundreds of others on the Republic were likewise brave. Captain Sealby was brave almost to the point of folly. Passengers, women and men, manifested great self control while they waited in the fog for the arrival of help. Jack Binns is especially picked out as hero because of the novelty of wireless telegraphy. The praises of Jack Binns are partly due to the interest of the world in wireless telegraphy. Jack happened to be at the post of duty when the critical, or, as the fashion of speech nowadays, psychological, moment arrived. He did not desert his post, though he was in anything but a comfortable situation. He just did his plain duty and for that he deserves praise. Being made a "hero" does not exactly suit Jack Binns. He calls it what Sherman called war and says he will be mighty glad when he gets through with it. He refuses to go on the stage and exhibit himself a "hero" and for that he also deserves praise. Jack Binns only did his duty, but in that he set an example that will not be forgotten by other wireless operators when they find themselves in a similar situation.

ONE MAN CULT

A growing opposition to one man power in this country is an encouraging sign of the times. There are even faint echoes of a grumbling against the one man church. Dr. Aked thought it wise to publicly announce that his church is a church and not Mr. Rockefeller's chapel. The case seems to be that dictation, either real or implied, has been notorious in a few instances, and people have grown suspicious and jealous where things always go one way. Since the days of "Boss" Tweed it has become the habit of underlings to say that everything must be "put up to the boss," and yet it may be that there is really no boss.

Probably the day of the boss is over in America. At the same time there is a one man cult going on which is as un-American as the political or the social boss. This is the fad for tacking every sort of public movement to the skirts of this or that big man. Some worthy people think of a movement to better conditions and rush to the president or the governor for an indorsement that will give the society a "boom." Of course the movement must be keyed to meet the views of this chief sponsor. The end is a one man atmosphere for that movement. Criticism is not wanted. A "society for the promotion of single blessedness" would not be likely to convene in Washington and ask the president to open the discussion. Nor would a "go-as-you-please sporting club" look for a benediction from Governor Hughes.

Usually the "great man" prefers that the people take the initiative in good works and cultivate independence of any individual's frowns or smiles. Advertising is all very well, but too much inspiration from a source not primarily committed to a movement may result in nervelessness and inefficiency.

Centuries ago the view was held by people of refined culture that it was laudable for man or woman to commit self murder rather than face the loss of fortune, reputation or health. There was more reasonableness in this doctrine than in the notion which actuated the college professor and his wife who destroyed themselves recently from a morbid impulse. Death removed an only child, and they could not brave the future stripped of their one life incentive. The extreme selfishness behind this strange tragedy is unmistakable.

Leaving aside the orthodox teaching of this era, the whole tendency of our moral and intellectual culture is improvement of the human type. It is natural, of course, to wish to produce from one's own loins a high type of individual. Parents heroically deny themselves in order to elevate their children. But the great end to be reached lies beyond the scope of one individual life. So long as there are ideals unattained by the average something noble remains for the cultured to live for. Culture is a heritage, and every educated person is the steward of at least one talent, which should be kept at work until an accounting is imperatively demanded.

Annie Peck, who recently scaled the highest peak of the Andes, says that good lungs and a strong heart are the essentials to success in mountain ascensions. Plus a level head, these are the things that count in all kinds of climbing.

Noble work that of relief and rescue in the earthquake zone, but it is well to keep a little sentiment for the fellows who will make Messina and Reggio rise out of the ruins.

It seems that there are two Ananiases in the Bible, one of them not that kind of man. Time enough yet, however, to get his name in the papers.

With 12,000 independent telephone companies on the job one ought to be able now and then to get on a wire free from listening barnacles.

One-fourth of the world's sugar crop is consumed in America. Yet certain things here are slow about sweetening up.

GULF STREAM HAS CHANGED

Assertion Made by British Ship Master

In an interview which he gave on his arrival at Glasgow recently, Captain Frank Mills, of the British steamer Glen Finlas, declared that the gulf stream had disappeared, and he gave as his reason for the change the recent earthquake. Captain Mills' account of his recent investigation and its startling result was received here yesterday.

Captain Mills states that he was en route from San Lucia to Glasgow, with hides, and that when he arrived at the point where he should have entered the gulf stream he shaped his course accordingly, allowing for the influence of the stream on the vessel's course. Shortly he found the course strangely at variance with what it should have been, having counted on the gulf stream to assist the vessel. The temperature of the water was taken and it was found that it did not correspond in any particular with the gulf current. It was 52 degrees instead of 76 degrees. Captain Mills admits that it was uncanny, but has no explanation to offer other than that given above.

A Christmas Letter.

If Santa Claus were not a myth,
As also is his reindeer,
Today I'd be contented with
My lot and not complain, dear,
For then I might ask him to take
To you a gift that's very Particularly apt to make
The heart on Christmas merry.
But I should bid him bring to me
Precisely this same present.
A fair exchange would seem to be Appropriate and pleasant.
So, sweetheart, in these mythless times,
Since I can do no better,
A merry Christmas, with the rhymes
That lock love in my letter.
—New York Life.

Up to the Minute Romance.

"Will you be my true love?" he asked.

"No," she replied, "but I am perfectly willing to be your affinity."

Then he gave her a soul kiss, and they lived happily for a year. The only difficulty now is the adjustment of the alimony.—Puck.

LUMBER VALUES SHOW INCREASE

Demand Stronger with Stocks Considerably Reduced

Lumber values advanced from 50 cents to $1 a thousand feet recently. The advance is attributed to increasing demand and lower stocks, owing to the enforced curtailment of the output during the snow in January when for nearly three weeks most of the mills in the Pacific northwest had to suspend operations.

Orders for the middle states and the east are coming more freely and California is buying large quantities. While lower grades of building material are abundant, there is quite a scarcity of clears and such stuff as flooring and finishing lumber commands good prices.

As to the situation in the middle states, where a great deal of Oregon fir is placed, the following from the American Lumberman of Chicago, is of interest:

"The last week witnessed the sale of more yard stock than had been disposed of during any week since the cold weather set in. In some territory where retail associations are strong the retailers prefer to get along without placing any unnecessary orders from the first of the year until the time of the annual convention of his association. This year, perhaps more than usual, the buying at retail meetings has been heavy, and as the retail meetings will continue for the next three weeks in the middle west there is still considerable business of this kind to be taken care of.

"If the general tone of the trade as viewed at conventions this year, is any criterion, the retailer in general is optimistic and expects a good year. As a general rule, he is inclined to be conservative in this regard and will say that he is not looking for any extraordinary trade but just a good average year's business.

Indications are numerous that the railroads are buying a little more freely of late and that they are planning to increase their purchases from now on until spring. The car building companies have also figured in the market during the last couple of weeks, although their business has not taken the form of large orders.

"Woodworking consumers are found generally to be increasing their operations and, consequently, taking on more stock than they have been willing to carry for a good many months. Many door and millwork factories are behind with their orders and the outlook seem to them very bright, feeling, as manufacturers do, that with the cessation of winter weather building will resume on a large scale throughout the winter.

"The furniture trade is showing some improvement. Manufacturers of medium grade furniture concede that they are now doing a fair business and that their requirements are very rapidly increasing.

"Viewed from all standpoints, the condition of the trade seems to be gradually righting as all facters in lumber business recover their confidence in the stability of lumber values on a better than present basis. The lumbermen's confidence is easily imparted to his customer and it is unquestionably a fact that he has in his control the immediate future of the business.

STATE COLLEGE WINS ITS SUIT

Permitted To Disburse Fees Received

Olympia, Feb. 8 The supreme court has orderd a writ to issue requiring State Auditor Clausen to issue warrants to pay out funds turned into the treasury by the state college regents aggregating directly $2,000. The opinion upholds the right of the college to withdraw a total of $7,493.75.

Interpreting the laws of 1907, which require all persons in state offices or at state institutions who receive money to turn the same over to the treasurer, the court holds this does not apply to any moneys collected at the pullman school for fees etc., but applies solely to state college moneys derived from the sale of college lands and the like.

The majority opinion is written by Justice Gose and is concurred in by Judges Rudkin, Fullerton, Chadwick and Crow. It recites the laws regarding the powers and duties of the regents of the school, the fact they have a treasurer who gives bond and who is to make disbursements of the moneys in his hands upon order of the board, and declares this special act is not to be presumed to be repealed by a general act.

Justice Mount writes a minority opinion, concurred in by Dunbar, which asserts the majority decision sets aside both the acts in question and the provision of the state constitution that no money can be drawn from the state treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation. These two judges say "if the state college is not included within the meaning of the act then upon the same reasoning no state institution is included".

The girls basketball team of the Astoria high school was defeated on Saturday evening by the team from the Monmouth normal school by a score of nine to one. While defeated, the local team did exceptionally well and played an excellent game considering the fact that it was the teams first match game, that it had little practice and was pitted against the champions of the state. With practice the local school will have a team, which can hold its own with any similar organization in the state.

Auditor and Police Judge W.J. Estabrook of Warrenton was in the city Saturday on a brief business trip. He stated that Mayor V. H. Coffey of Warrenton made the following appointments: J A. The removal of the lumber from the hold of the derliet steam schooner Minnie E. Kelton [illegible] being removed slowly as each piece has to be slushed to clean it as half the hold was full of sand and mud and this is the best opportunity to do the work. The vessel floats at high water and it is necessary to flood her to keep her in position at low water. According to the records of the loca weather bureau office over seven inches of rain has fallen in this city during the present month. This means over an inch a day and for a similar period it is a new record in this city. At times there has been a greater average for several days and one day nearly five inches fell but for a continuous fall for seven consecutive days it has no equal as shown by the records of the office. The February average rain fall is much larger than this but only one week of the month has passed.

At the conclusion of the conference the Californiaas declared their mouths had been closed by the president, who will give out a statement for publication tomorrow morning. The fact that the state department was represented at the conference has excited more speculation, than any other feature, and has caused belief that certain representations have been made by Japan, as to how she regards the possible legislation in California. The intimation was conveyed that important messages have been received from Ambassador O'Brien at Tokio, portraying the feeling there. In reply to inquiries along these lines, Secretary Bacon declined to talk.

Tillamook county's principal industry, dairying, shows a gratifying increase over the year 1907, as is evidenced by the reports of three cheese factories just made public. These are the Red Clover Creamery Company, the South Prairie Creamery Company and the East Beaver Cheese Copmany, Each had an increase in the amount of milk received making a total of 778,078 pounds. The three manufactured 532,553 pounds of cheese, which brought in a revenue of $65,720.37. During 1908 the average price for butter fat was several cents lower than in previous years. The average yield of cheese to the 100 pounds of milk was 10.9 pound for these three factories.

Ex-Mayor Herman Wise returned today from a two week's business trip to Chicago, the ostensible purpose of his trip being to secure an advance line of spring clothing for his large store in Astoria. He succeeded in this without any delay as a portion of the shipment has already arrived in the city. While in Chicago Mr. Wise stated that the weather was extremely cold which he contrasted to the equable climate of Oregon which was pleasant when he left and as weclome his return. In speaking to a number of whole sale merchants Mr. Wise learned that a few manufacturers still felt the effect of the recent financial panic but in a measure business thruout the middle west and east was fast recovering from it and trade was assuming its normal proportions. There is much travel on all railroads lines both going and coming which makes one feel that there is about as much business transacted during the winter months as during the busy seasons of the year. "It is remarkable" continued Mr. Wise "how much municipal advertising is carried on. Cities and towns everywhere maintain a traveling representative on various trains who hand out circulars and pamphlets setting forth the merits of each locality and some of them must certainly appeal to the tourist who is seeking for investent. Im often wish that Oregon would exploit its various resources a little stronger considering that we have so much to offer the homeseeker and the capitalist. A short stay away from home will illustrate to any Oregohian how happy we should all be because we live here."

Coroner Gilbaugh held an inquest this afternoon on the body of Christ Konias, the crippled Greek whose body was found on the tide flats at Clifton on Saturday morning. Very little new facts were disclosed after all the witnesseses, who were supposed to throw light on the case, had been examined except that his companion Andrew Moricous a fellow countryman, committed the deed for the purpose of robbing his person of about $700 that was in a belt around his waist. A few more details were brought out making positive that he was the murderer as he was seen going east on the railroad track at seven o'clock on Saturday morning and a number of small coins were found on the railroad track, shortly after he passed by. The coroner's jury returned the following verdict: "We the jurors being first duly sworn, depose and say that we have this date, at the request of the coroner, examined into the death of Christ Konias and find that he came to his death at Clifton, Clatsop county, Oregon February 5, 1909 by blows upon his head, inflicted by one Andrew Moricous and by the evidence shown we believe said Andrew Moricous is guilty of the crime of murder." Sheriff Pomeroy is using every endeavor to trace the man and has been doing so since Saturday evening and as his people will not shield him in a case of this kind and will assist in his capture if possible.

KING EDWARD VISITS GERMANY

Royal Party Arrived at Berlin This Morning

Berlin, Feb. 9—King Edward and Queen Alexandra arrived at Berlin this morning from London and were given a warm welcome by the emperor and German authorities. The city is gaily decorated in honor of the visitors and large crowds gathered on the street to witness the procession to the palace.

WILLIAM GREETS KING EDWARD

Berlin Gives Royalty a Hearty Welcome

Berlin, Feb. 9—A special train, bearing the king and Queen was met at the station by Emperor William, the crown prince, his eldest son and other princess of the royal house and other high officials of the court. The king and emperor greeted each other heartily and repeatedly kissed each other on the cheek. These exchanges being over the procession for the march to the palace was formed, immense crowds lining the throughfares. Within the Brandenburg the mayor and aldermen of Berlin welcomed the royal visitors.

As the procession neared the palace a salute of one hundred guns was fired amid great cheering. The emperor, empress, king and queen had an informal luncheon together. The visiting queen was given a public reception of much greater heartiness than anticipated. The welcome was entirely respectful than a counter demonstration. King Edward evidently was pleased and seemed in a jovial mood.

ELKINS WINS FOR RAILROADS

His Committee Reports Adversely on Fulton Bill

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—Senator Elkins, chairman of the senate committee on the interstate commerce, has presented a report to the senate in support of the committee's adverse action on the Fulton bill which would authorize the suspension by the interstate commerce commission of a proposed change of rates by railroads upon protest of the shippers. The report says the adoption would offer a premium to every shipper to enter a protest against any advance in rates whether they are reasonable or unreasonable, and that it would ultimately turn over to the interstate commerce commission the function of initiating rates of the entire country.

By its provisions the interstate commerce commission, in its discretion may issue an order continuing the existing rates and rules whenever changes are proposed until a hearing has been held and a decision rendered by the commission. The amendment gives the shippers the right to file a protest against any proposed change within 30 days after the notice that such change has been forwarded to the commission by railroads. The commission may then issue a continuing order until the lawfulness and reasonableness of proposed change is determined.

HEAVY SNOWFALL IN YOSEMITE

Thirty to Forty Feet in Hills About Park

Yosemite, Cal., Feb. 9.—The federal park rangers patrolling the Yosemite National Park claim that the heaviest snowfall for 20 years, about two feet, visited the valley during the past 24 hours. There is now three feet and a half on the level and about five feet in drifts, with no sign of the storm abating. With the storm during the last two months, the pioneers say there are at least 30 to 40 feet in the surrounding hills, which will assure an abundance of water for the falls and river during the summer, probably destroying several buildings, including Ranger Gaylor's home and the studio of Artist Jorgensen. Snow plows are in service and no interruption of traffic is anticipated.

MULES TO TAFT INAUGURAL

Adjutant General Would Have Battery A Mounted

F. M. Rumbold, who will be Missouri's adjutant general under Governor Hadley, has a plan for advertising Missouri at the inauguration of President Taft, says a Jefferson City dispatch.

General Rumbold proposes to take Light Battery A to Washington to the presidential inauguration, get a good place for Missouri in the parade and have the men mounted on Missouri mules and the cannon drawn by Missouri mules. Two dealers, one of Calloway county and one of Pike county, have offered to furnish seventy large mules—sugar mules, as they are classed by mule dealers—to go to Washington for the parade. They will sell the mules in the east.

"We must raise some money for the scheme," Rumbold said, "but I don't think that will be hard to do. I am going to ask for it in five dollar subscriptions. I would like to know what would be a better advertisement for Missouri than to have at President Taft's inauguration the Republican governor mounted on a big black horse and his staff and the battery mounted with fine specimens of Missouri's most famous product."

Agreeable Theatrical Innovation.

Maxine Elliott's theater is the first New York playhouse to furnish programs that are destitute of advertising. Moreover, they are chastely printed and pleasing to the eye; also the musicians do their work in a pit under the apron of the stage, and their harmonies percolate to the auditorium through a screen of bay leaves. Nor is there in that orchestra any trombone nor yet any cornet nor cymbals nor anything to smite the ear rudely. There are only strings—harps and violins.

The Kaiser's New Hobby.

The latest hobby of the kaiser is Norwegian furniture and domestic decoration. He has ordered furnishings in this style for the hall of one of his palaces and from a celebrated Norwegian artist has had plans for furnishing the new palace at Posen, which is nearing completion and is intended as a visible sign of German domination in the eastern provinces of Prussia.

Astoria?

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

TRAINING OF MOTHERS

Woman Plans School for Inteligent Girl Rearing

Dr. Edna D. Day assistant professor of home economics in the University of Missouri at Columbia, Mo., has a plan for a training school for mothers where the ills infants are heir to and the recondite problems of the parent will receive scientific consideration. She says the school ought to have a "laboratory" equipment, where infants from orphan asylums could be cared for by the students to give them practical experience.

Dr. Day talked about the plan, of which she is the originator and which has the approval of Dr. Elmer E. Brown, United States commissioner of education, at the recent session of the homemakers' conference held at Columbia in conjunction with farmers' week, which attracted 1,500 farmers and their wives to Columbia.

The primary purpose of the course, Dr. Day explained, would be to train university bred women to care for their own children. The secondary purpose would be to train nurses for other women's children.

"Children are more important to the home than food or shelter or clothes," Miss Day said. "Until recently it has been assumed that a mother knew by instinct how to bring up her children. Men are taught to feed calves. It is certainly more important that women be trained scientifically to care for their children.

"When the mothers' training school is established at Columbia a woman will be placed in charge who has the training of a nurse and who is an experienced kindergartner, so that neither the physical nor psychological phase of the child will be neglected. Babies will be obtained from some orphan asylum for the laboratory course, the number depending on the equipment. In connection with this there will be a day nursery, where the faculty members' wives and other women in Columbia can leave their children.

"Every mother needs a rest from her children part of the day, and the opportunity would thus be afforded for mothers to leave the babies in experienced hands. The babies kept here permanently would be the only ones for the purposes of experiment.

"In connection with this there would be certain medical courses, the principles of kindergarten work, studies in food selection in the home economics department. This would be only an extension of the teachers' training school idea, but it is, of course, much more important.

"Many girls who take this course will be reluctant to admit that they are being trained to be intelligent mothers, but it will prepare them also for intelligent settlement work or to go into the homes of the rich as children's nurses at high salaries, and they can offer that as their reason for taking the course if they choose."

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mme. Louise Briand and Mme. Jeannes Menard, both graduate doctors of medicine, act as ship physicians on two of the largest Mediterranean steamers.

Mrs. Mary E. Farrell, said to be the oldest active Methodist in America, celebrated her one hundred and fifth birthday at her home at Midland Park, N. J., on Dec. 19.

Speaking of the engagement of the Princess Maria zu Ysenburg und Budingen to Admor Robinson of Baltimore, the Vienna Neue Presse says, "This is the first time that a real German princess goes as a bride to the dollar land."

Among the successful women inventors of this country is Mrs. Anna I. Kyle, wife of former United States Senator Kyle of South Dakota. She has brought out a number of mechanical devices that are useful to the public and that have proved profitable to her.

Miss Laura A. Hecox has tended the light in the Santa Cruz (Cal.) lighthouse for the past twenty-seven years. During all that time the light has never gone out at night. Miss Hecox is quoted as declaring that she finds the life of lighthouse keeper neither lonely nor monotonous.

Miss Madeline Edison, daughter of Thomas A. Edison, is said to be following in her father's footsteps as an inventor. For several years she has been his comrade in working out experiments in electricity. As her own invention she has put on the market an automobile map.

Mme. Curie has been appointed chief professor of physics in the faculty of science, Paris university.

One of the most successful physicians in South Carolina is Dr. Matilda Evans, colored, of Columbia, where she has established and personally conducts a hospital for the penniless of her race.

Dr. Elizabeth Athman of Gotthelmer is the first woman to be elected teacher in a night school in the German empire. She entered upon her duties at the beginning of the present school season in Frankfort.

It seems to most theater goers to be but a few years since Mary Anderson, now Mme. de Navarro, in all her fresh youth and beauty, was one of the most prominent figures on the stage. But recently she celebrated her fiftieth birthday. She is now living on a pretty farm in Worcestershire, England.

HIGHEST BRIDGE IN THE WORLD

Structure to Span Snake River Canyon

The highest bridge in the world is soon to be built across the Snake River canyon, 800 feet west of Shoshone falls, in one of the most picturesque spots in the west, says a dispatch from Salt Lake City. The span of the bridge will be 1,140 feet from cliff to cliff and the roadbed will be 550 feet above the water. From the bridge one will be able to look down at the falls, which rank among the greatest natural wonders in the Pacific northwest. The work has been placed in the hands of a prominent firm of bridge builders.

The bridge across the Snake river at Shoshone falls is made necessary by the development of irrigation both north and south of the river. The large communities which have settled on the hitherto desert lands have reached a stage in their development where they require better communication and the bridge will be built at an early date. The electric railroad systems on both sides of the river will thus be connected, using the bridge for electric trains.

New Religious Order.

The First Fruit Harvesters is the title of a new religious order that seeks to abolish all denominations and unite the entire human family in one great church. The basis of their faith is the reference in the Bible to the one church. There are no chapters in the Bible that speak of denominations. All are intended to be in one church, and the creed should be the true word of God. The Harvesters are holding a series of meetings at Manchester, N. H., and are attracting considerable attention and getting some converts. Elder J. A. Wright, who is the leader in charge, says: "We do not believe in having a specified mode of procedure, and there is no set time in our church for prayer, singing or sermons. We speak, sing or pray when the spirit moves us. We believe in the one church and the ever present God and conduct our meetings accordingly."

British Soldiers' New Outfit.

An important change is now being made in the equipment of infantrymen in the British army. The old outfit is being superseded by the new "web equipment," which is sure to be heartily welcomed by the men. A great improvement has been effected in the distribution of weight. In marching order neither the bandolier nor the haversack straps [illegible] so the chest is left quite free and breathing is made easier. When in fighting kit nothing that is not essential to action will be carried, but the bandolier will have to be added.

SIRES AND SONS.

Sarasate, the violinist, had one peculiarity—he never wrote a letter. His autographs are scarce, as he carried on his correspondence almost entirely by telegraph.

Timothy Dwight, ex-president of Yale university, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary. It is ten years since he resigned from the presidency.

William Campbell, recently installed in Edinburgh as judge of the new Scottish court of session, is the first Roman Catholic appointed to the Scottish bench since the reformation.

P. M. Hubbell, said to be the wealthiest man in Iowa, has signed a note for $20,000 in favor of the Iowa Home For the Aged, payable "ten days after my death." Hubbell, at the age of seventy, is in excellent health.

[illegible], a drug clerk of Biddeford, Me., has collected a million and a half of canceled postage stamps of different varieties, all neatly arranged in uniform packages. He has been collecting these stamps for twenty years.

Former United States Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire has publicly declared that he believes that when people go from this world they take on new physical forms and live in other worlds—in the suns around us.

When W. W. Astor found that English law sustained the people of Hever in their right to travel on the footpath across the beautiful park of Hever castle, which he has lately bought, he built a high brick wall along each side of the footpath, surely for once justifying the ancient jest of calling him William Walled-Off Astor.

President Elect William H. Taft is six feet one inch in height.

James Gayley who has retired as first vice president of the United States Steel corporation, is said to be worth $15,000,000.

Balfour Browne, K. C., for the past fifteen years has, it is said, had the best income of any man at the English bar. He is credited with earning nearly $250,000 a year.

A well known resident of Hollis, N. H., is Robinson Crusoe. In his early life he followed the sea and his adventures are said to have been no less exciting than those of his great namesake.

J. Pierpont Morgan belongs to thirty five clubs and his membership dues figure over $7,000 annually. August Belmont is a member of thirty four and Chauncey M. Depew belongs to thirty-two.

A LITTLE FISHE'S TRICK

How the Puffer Saves Himself from His Enemy

All the little sea folk have their own clever way of protecting themselves from their enemies, but the spiny boxfish has about the cleverest way of all.

He belongs to the great family called puffer, and you will see in a moment how well the name fits him.

Just imagine the little puffer swimming around in the water looking like a small round box with a head on. A big fish comes along, sees the little puffer and thinks: "There's just a good mouthful for me!" But just as he darts toward him the little puffer blows himself up like a ball, turns over on his back and floats around with all his sharp prickers sticking out toward his enemy.

The big fish is dazed; he stares at the puffer and thinks, "Can that great prickly thing be the same little fish I tried to swallow?" He can't understand it, but he sees there is no use trying, so he goes sadly on his way, and when the little puffer is sure he is gone he just empties the water out of his skin and goes back to his usual size.

Now, isn't that a pretty clever trick for a little fish to play? But, you see, Mother Nature gave the little puffer just that kind of a body that he might escape from his enemies.—St. Nicholas.

Why She Stayed.

"Yes, she [illegible] in the same family for twenty-seven years."

"How do you explain that?"

"No other family could endure her."—Pittsburg Post.

The Portland papers appear to be vying with each other to see which can publish the most ridiculous figures concerning real estate deals. Sales involving from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 each are becoming so common there, on paper of course, that it is a dull day, when at least one such transaction is not reported. First it was Harriman, who was doing the buying, then it was Hill and now it is Rockefeller, but, then it pays to advertise.

The murder committed at Clifton on last Friday night was the most atrocious crime in the annals of Clatsop county, and it is to be hoped the murderer will soon be captured and made to pay the extreme penalty for his crime. Fortunately for the good name of the community, both the murderer and his victim, were transcient people who had been in this section for a few days only. Clatsop county has of late years been almost entirely free from crimes of this nature and in the two which preceded this one, both the victims and the assailants were non-residents.

A bill having for its object the reforestation of tracts of timber lands in Oregon has been introduced in the legislature by Representative Richardson of Union county at the request of George M. Cornwall, proprietor of The Timberman. The bill attempts the first actual step towards the conservation of the natural resoruces of Oregon. All that has gone before has been mostly talk.

Governor Chamberlain will leave Oregon for Washington the latter part of February, in the belief that there may be a special session of congress and if so that he may be sworn in on March 4. He has sent a letter to Washington to learn whether or not, when the senate meets in executive session immediately after Taft is inaugurated as president to confirm his appointments, there is any likelihood that newly appointed senators will be sworn in at that time. This information comes from an authoriative source. In the same connection it is stated that before leaving Oregon the governor will file his resignation with the secretary of state, to take effect when he is sworn in as United States senator. In the event that this takes place, he will then need only to wire Secretary of State Benson that he has assumed the office of United States senator, and the resignation will become effective. The statement is made as coming direct from Mr. Chamberlain that at no time has he ever considered the proposition of resigning the governorship until he was confirmed as senator. If he ever had such a notion, it is added, it vanished away when certain senators and representatives voted for him under protest, and the chance of meeting with resistance in attaining his ambition at Washington presented itself.

Mrs. Johnson says the secret of good coffee is very simple. buy Folger's Golden Gate whole roast and have it ground not too fine.

AS LINCOLN SPOKE

It [illegible] well to remind the generation which first hears of Lincoln through latter day eulogies that there is something in his career worthy of study besides his achievements as liberator. When he spoke words that can never die out of our language he was not talking for posterity nor delivering studied examples of style. Self trained he had no use for the niceties of speech, but a rare native gift of strength in speech. Forceful language was on his tongue as the result of much reading and careful thought. When he spoke it was to deliver a message from the heart.

It is said that eloquence is "logic on fire." Logic at white heat struck those Lincoln gems now on every tongue, like: "With malice toward none and with charity for all," "Both read the same Bible and pray to the same God." "That government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth." Other speeches, notably his second inaugural, the replies to Douglas and some of his messages, which were speeches reduced to writing, are as remarkable for loftiness of thought united with strength in utterance as [illegible] famous Gettysburg address. He appeared at his best under pressure, as whenever the cause he stood for was assailed or in danger. Short extracts do not reveal the greatness at its full. The reader, whether plowboy or blacksmith or man learned in books, should be in touch with the occasion, seeing and feeling with the orator as does the actor with the character he would first understand in order the better to portray. Approached in this way, Lincoln's literary remains constitute an imperishable monument within range of the millions

Very many lamentable accidents are due to some individual's violation of the rules of safety. On the other hand, individual aptitude and presence of mind may rescue hundreds in peril. The personal equation came in nobly to rescue work when the Republic was rammed by another ship. The wireless operator kept his nerve, although his cabin was crushed in. Nerve in the engine room prevented an explosion on the disabled ship, and nerve in the captain staved off a panic while the passengers were transferred to safety. Everywhere personality was alert to conceive and to achieve the right thing.

In many ways the Republic incident shows that the personal equation is the most important as science advances. The wireless operator must always be on the job; the water tight compartments must be kept closed; the complicated machinery must be held well in hand. Rescue is possible. The day of the hopelessly doomed ship is passed. Another step in advance, and the ship's navigator will have the lives of hundreds in his hand in a crisis like that which caught the Republic. The collision took place on a vexing sea highway crossing. The ships were due to cross each other's course within signaling, perhaps within speaking, distance. When the wireless and the submarine telephone are perfected it will be possible for operators of a vessel to "pick up" every vessel within the danger radius. All on board will then live in absolute confidence and display individual readiness when the hour strikes.

In view of the idea that he was trying to knock out, Senator Bailey may be excused for overlooking the ox team when he said that the law should compel people to use horses instead of machine motors for all vehicles.

If another quake comes while the homeless Messinians are living in those portable houses sent over by Uncle Sam, "Take up thy house and walk" may be added to Italian earthquake proverbs.

There being several kinds of gargoyle, the next man may give Congressman Willett that "you're another," which often clinches these incidents.

If we forego the $100,000 president we'll get one "just as good" for half the money.

Don't forget to come to Mrs. G. Ziegler's residence, 314 Seventeenth street, on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The Woman's Relief Corps will have a home cooking sale. All kinds of good things and everybody will be welcome. The Corps ladies will be grateful for the assistance of any of their friends. The funds will be used for a good cause, "charity." x

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

After the Honeymoon

Husband—My dear, are you not courting trouble by being so friendly to this young man?

Wife—No, my dear, I have already married it.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

His Shrewd Idea.

"Who is the sour looking girl with the heavy underjaw?"

"That's the only daughter of old De Milyuns."

"And who [illegible] the dainty bit of sweetness with the blue eyes and golden hair?"

"That's the chaperon."

"What's the explanation?"

"Why, it's old De Milyuns' clever idea. He thinks his Jane will be perfectly safe as long as Miss Blossom is around."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Equine Repartee.

"Those lovemaking couples always hire you to draw their cutter sleighs?" remarked the truck horse.

"Yes," laughed the old white nag, "but it seems to me instead of being attached to a sleigh I belong to an automobile."

"Automobile? Why so?"

"Well, when I draw those lovemaking couples ain't I a 'sparking plug?'"

And the horse laughs that echoed through the stable awakened the drowsy hostler.—Chicago News.

Friendly Advice.

"If I ever marry," said the bachelor who was beginning to be old, "I shall be careful to pick out a lady whom I can treat as my equal."

"Oh, say, old chap," answered the married man, "I wouldn't do that if I were you. I can tell you from experience that a woman who would submit to such treatment wouldn't be worth having around the house."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CURRENT CAUSED ADATO WRECK

Captain Lost Bearings During Exceptionally Thick Weather

Thick weather combined with a strong shore current are blamed for the wreck of the Weir liner Adato, which went aground in the Orient recently and became a total loss. Advices from Japan received in yesterday's mail tell of the loss of the steamer and advance this theory as the cause of the disaster.

According to the Japan Advertiser, the spot where the wreck occurred is swept by a strong current of at least five knots per hour, and it is supposed Captain Stewart lost his bearings by a miscalculation of this stream and went ashore during the dirty weather prevailing during the night.

Yokohama advices state that the wreck is now completely submerged. The location of the wreck is on Vries or Omshima island, which is on the northwest end, and not near Kobe, as first reported.

The steamer Craigvar, another Weir liner, which was damaged by striking a rock at Muroran, is being repaired at Yokohama.

The Japan Advertiser says the steamer sustained serious damage while on her way from Tacoma, which port she left bound for Hongkong and Manila. It appears that the vessel, loaded with a cargo of pine, flour, etc., met with heavy weather in crossing the Pacific, and put into Muroran for shelter on January 9. On entering the port, she struck a rock, and when coming to anchor she was fast making water forward, and settling by the head. In order to prevent her sinking, it was decided to beach her, which was accomplished satisfactorily. On examination it was found that she had a hole twenty feet long and about three feet wide on the starboard side. After discharging part of her cargo and having temporary repairs made, she proceeded to Yokohama, where repairs will be effected.

BILL TO WHIP TAX DODGERS

Unlisted Property Put Beyond Law's Protection

Salem Feb. 9--Three of the most drastic and far reaching revenue raising measure ever laid before the Oregon legislature are scheduld to make their appearance in the house during this week. One provides for a tax of $25 to be imposed upon all retail liquor dealers in the state. The second places a tax of $5 on every pool table operated and places other stricions about pool rooms. The third provides that all property wilfully left off the sworn statement made by property owners for assessment purposes shall be denied the protection of the courts if discovered to have been omitted from these lists.

In the first bill it is to be provided that every retail liquor dealer operating a saloon or bar room in the state shallpay during the first month of each year an annual tax of $25 to be turned into the general fund of the state and to be paid to the state treasurer. This is the same amount charged by the government for a government license and in the purposed measure various detail of collection and penalties for violation or neglect are provided.

The measure fixed a flat licenses of $5 a table for all pool tables operated, and also provides that no poolrooms shall admit minors. It provides penalties for violation of the provisions barring minors.

The third measure if enacted will perhaps raise more revenue than either of the other two, for it will force upon the assessment rolls thousands of dollars worth of property not now listed. It will provide in effect that any property not listed with the assessor will be outside the pale of the courts. For instance, should the owner of a note or a mortgage fail to place the intrument with the assessor and the borrower or the mortgage should fail to meet his obligation then the lender or the mortgage could not take his paper into court for collection.

Success In Raising a Zebra.

Dr. Alonzo Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry at Washington, has succeeded in breeding and raising a zebra. As the department of agriculture has been unsuccessful for years in attempting to raise the zebra, Dr. Melvin is proud of his accomplishment. Dr. Melvin explains that his young zebra is a cross between a Texas burro and a male zebra. The legs are well marked, but the stripes on the body are faint. He hopes, however, that as the zebra sheds off his coat the stripes will become more distinct.

ASTORIA LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

Makes Excellent Showing For Year Just Closed

At the annual meeting of the ladies of the Astoria Public Library Association held recently officers to serve during the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, Mrs. A. D. Garner; vice-president, Mrs. G. Wingate; secretary, Mrs. J. H. Smith; treasurer, Mrs. H. F. Prael. It was decided to continue the library free for another year. The fine on over-due books was raised from one cent to three cents per day, this action being deemed necessary owing to the carelessness of patrons in not returning books. The books taken out numbered 11,888. There were 161 new books added to the library. The report of Gertrude M. Finch treasurer for the last year, showed the total receipts of the past year to have been $1026.93, of which the city gave $895; in fines $61.09 was secured; from the cooking sale the sum of $62.21 was secured. After all disbursements were made there is still a balance of $28.-89 in the treasury. The report of the retiring president, Mrs. Marion B. Troyer, was as follows:

"In accordance with the usual custom I take pleasure in submitting the following report for the year ending Feb. 6, 1909: The year just closed has been unusual on account of reorganizing the library and making it free. It was entered upon as an experiment for one year, but as our secretary's and treasurer's reports will show it has been so successful that we may consider it an established institution. That the public has been benefitted and has taken a greater interest than heretorfore will be shown by the large number of cards taken out.

It is a source of great satisfaction that subscribers generally have been exceptionally careful in handling books; nevertheless the new order requires the rebinding of volumes more frequenly than formerly, also a greater number of books for circulation, and consequently will necessitate additional expenditure. Whereas the money received from the city will, with careful management, pay the ordinary running expenses of the library, it will be necessary to call upon the public occasionally for assistance.

The ready response at the time of the home cokery sale, last September, leads us to believe that our friends and patrons are willing to assist us when called upon.

One suggestion that I would like to offer is a revision of the fine system.

With the present rate of one cent per day, many patrons become careless of returning books, preferring to pay a nominal fine to bringing a book back when due. This works a hardship on other subscribers as it very often keeps the most sought after books out of circulation.

Special attention has been paid during the year, to the children, in the way of adding a table and chairs for their especial use together with an appropriation for the purpose of purchasing more juvenile books. We hope, in time, to make this a very interesting department.

We regret, very much, the resignation from the "Board" of three workers, Mesdames Trullinger, Taylor and George.

The different committees are deserving of special mention, as the work for the past year has exacted considerable time and thought. I wish to express my appreciation for the hearty way in which they have co operated with me in accomplishing the work assigned them. Respectfully submited

MARION B TROYER.

Things Theatrical.

Next season David Belasco will provide a new play for David Warfield.

Margaret Anglin has been the recipient of an urgent invitation to act in India before returning from Australia, but her plans for a vacation having been already made she has been compelled to decline at any rate for the present.

SUBMIT LAWS TO PEOPLE

Plan To Adjust Difficulty Over Fisheries

Olympia Feb. 9 -The question of the conservation of the Columbia river salmon is one of more than usual importance in the legislature this session. Both the fishermen and their empoyers are working for uniform laws in Washington and Oregon which will protect the fish against extinction.

The employers' plan is that a committee of seven Washington men meet with a like committee from Oregon, and the two committees draft laws which will lead to the perpetuation of the salmon in Washington and Oregon waters and more particularly on the Columbia river. The laws drafted by the committees are to be sent to the senate of the United States and there ratified for a number of years.

This plan is being fought by the fishermen. Ed Rosenberg, of Astoria, secretary of the United Fishermen of the Pacific, is working against the measures and thinks that fishing laws should be presented to the people of both states for their approval. Last year Mr. Rosenberg appeared before Oscar Straus, secretary of the department of commerce and labor, and with the aid of President Rosevelt laws protecting Alaskan salmon were drawn and are now in force.

Mr. Rosenberg believes that fishing should not be permitted above, "at head of tide," and that fish wheel owners should be compelled to leave their sluices open on Sunday, so that the salmon may reach the upper waters of the rivers to spawn. He thinks that the more destructive forms of fish traps, such as purse seins should be entirely prohibited in river waters, and that fish wheels should be made to close longer than twenty-four hours in each week.

Mr. Rosenberg says that the only means by which the fishermen may secure justice is by initiative fishing laws being presented to the people of Washington as in Oregon. To this end he is in Olympia working for the passing of the initiative and referendum bill, which was introduced in the house by Representativs Todd and Denman. Recently Mr. Rosenberg appeared before the members of the labor and labor statistics committee, to which the Todd-Denman bill has been referred, and reviewed the story of the fight for protective fishing laws in Oregon.

LARGE AUDIENCE FOR HANFORD

This city has always evinced a desire to patronize the best of theatrical performances. A large audience, therefore, is confidently expected to witness Charles B. Hanford's presentation of "The Taming of the Shrew" to be given at the Astoria theatre on Wednesday Feb. 17. Many flattering reports of this revival have arrived from other places where the play has been produced this season. Mr. Hanford, already a sterling favorite here, will no doubt add to his popularity by this performance of the swashbuckling Petruchio who resorted to such extreme methods to tame his shrewish wife.

All In the Mind.

On the opening day of one winter session the late Professor Tait of Edinburgh university entered the natural philosophy class room in the midst of the uproarious applause common to those occasions.

Presently he looked up at the tumultuous benches above him with the smile of one who had known the ways of students for a lifetime. At [illegible] when a momentary lull came he remarked, his gray eyes twinkling:

"Gentlemen, I must remind you that there is really no such thing as noise. It is merely a matter of subjective impression."

No Flies on Him.

Two Irishmen [illegible] landed, stopped at a private boarding house on one hot July night. [illegible] they left the window open and the [illegible] ing brightly. The mosquitoes swarmed into the room and began biting.

Mike, awakening, called to Pat to put out the light. Pat got up and put it out and crawled back to bed again.

Pat awok[illegible] an hour later and found the room full of fireflies and said: "It's no use, Mike. They are coming in with lanterns!"

Pleasure Trips

"Going to the north pole is no pleasure trip," said the sympathetic friend.

"Well," answered the [illegible] explorer, "it reminds me somewhat of the average pleasure trip. Everybody is so anxious to start and so glad to get home."—Washington Star.

TO ABOLISH LEGISLATURE

Object of Joint Resolution to be Introduced

Salem, Or., Feb. 9—Representative McKinney, after 30 days' experience, has come to the conclusion that the legislature is unnecessary. He thinks that with the initiative in full force and effect the biennial sessions are a needless expense. Therefore he has prepared and will introduce in the house the following joint resolution.

"Whereas, The initiative provides a popular method for the enactment of needed legislation; and

"Whereas, The legislature has become an instrument especially designed to further the victories of the Democrats and the Populists allies, and also to raise the salaries of the capitalists and frenzied financiers now holding the state and county offices; therefore, be it.

"Resovled, That the legislature is and shall be hereby abolished and the capitol building removed from Salem to some place to be used as a museum for political curiosities."

The body of the crippled Greek, who was murdered at Clifton, is still in the possession of Coroner Gilbaugh and will be held for a few days pending it being claimed by a relative or friends. It is reported by some that he has relatives in California and others say that the only members of his family are in Greece. Pending inquiries the body will be held.

Captain Abercrombie of the local military company has set next Tuesday evening as the time for holding the competitive examination among the corporals of the company for promotion to fifth sergeant. As the company has perfected arrangments with the Athletic Club for the use of its building as an armory, it is expected the quarters of the company will be changed in about another week.

An alarm of fire was turned in at four o'clock this morning from box 14, which is located at the mill of the Astoria Box Company. When the department arrived there it was found that some miscreant had wantonly turned in the alarm when there was no fire. This is the second time within a week the same thing has happened in the same vicinity. There is a severe penalty for such an offense but it is difficult to catch the prepetrators.

The cash collections on the 1908 tax roll yesterday amounted to $1780.41 and as the robates allowed amounted to $54.24, the total applied to the roll was $1834.65. Property owners who have secured statements of their taxes are urged to make their payments as early as possible as within a short time there will be a rush to those desiring to take advantage of the three per cent rebate.

Several of the prominent citizens of Drewsey and Juntura held a special meeting yesterday, at which time papers were drawn up and mailed to Representative William H. Brooke, of Harney and Malheur Counties, asking that portions of land be taken from Harney, Grant and Malheur Counties, making Drewsey the centrally located town, and thereby the one suggested as the county seat. The propsoed county would be known as Otis.

During Monday night the police arrested a negro, a new comer, on a charge of being a vagrant as he was found associating with the wrong kind of people in the lower end of the city. He is a distinguished figure as he is 6 feet 4 inches in his stocking feet and built symetrically. He will be given an opportunity to leave the city at once and should be a good walker, judging from his build.

A notice of the location of the water rights on Big Creek was filed in the county clerk's office last evening. The application is for the use of all the water, amounting to about 2500 cubic feet per minute in Big Creek, from what is known as Hay Stack Rock to a point 2000 feet above the Upper Cascades at the head of Big Creek canyon. The application says the location is made for the purpose of procuring energy for electric light, power, heating and irrigation purposes.

During the early hours this morning there was a row in the Horseshoe saloon on Astor street in which several people were mixed up. During the melee a fisherman, Peter Huttala, was thrown through a front window, having his head badly cut. He was taken to the police station and for a time it was feared that he would bleed to death from a broken artery but City Physician Reames was able to stop the flow of blood and this afternoon he is considered to be out of danger.

Hon, John C. McCue will loose his residence in Astoria after the present session of the legislature, in which he represents Clatsop county in the lower house. He has accepted a partnership in a Portland law firm that offords excellent prospects for his future and he deemed it best to take advantage of the opportunity. While Mr. McCue was born in New York he has lived in Astoria since childhood and there is not anyone of his generation in the city who does not know him personally and regret that his future field of work will be away from here.

At the regular meeting of the chamber of commerce on Monday evening Vice President Wingate presided and Gustat E. Hemple acted as secretary in the absence of the regular officials from the city. Little business was transacted except the endorsement of a resolution favoring the division of judicial district as at present there is too much work for one judicial officer to deliberately consider. A vote of thanks was past commending Hon. J. C. McCue for his efforts in the legislature in advancing and supporting measures suggested by the chamber.

F. Gustafson received notice from the war department today that he has been awarded the contract for the construction of [six buildings at Fort Stevens, bids on which were opened on January 13. Mr. Gustafson's bid was $40 600. The buildings include four double sets of non-commissioned officers quarters, one double set of firemen's quarters and one gymnasium and bowling alley.

The regular meeting of the state board of pilot commissioners was held [illegible] afternoon with chairman Pendleton, Commissioners Taylor and Inman and Clerk Ross in attendance. This was the first session for Mr. Inman who was appointed by Governor Chamberlain a few days ago as a commissioner to fill the vacancy on the board caused by the death of the late Sylvester Farrell. In addition to passing on routine matters, the only business transacted was to grant renewals of bar licenses to Captains Cann, Svensen, Nolan and Staples.

Ed. Joseph, manager of the Klevenhusen cold storage plant at Altoona, was in the city today and stated that he was contemplating installing a wireless station there, to connect with the Astoria and Kalama stations, for his personal use. He has the requisite dynamo power to generate the necessary electricity. and the plant would have to be only a small one with a radius of not over fifty miles. That he would save considerable money by being able to reach the outside world immediately he feels assured and can keep in touch with all points of the river during the fishing season and can facilitate the sending of cables to his house. The cost of installing will not be large and after a few weeks practice he can operate it sufficiently to answer all purposes.

Captain William Kern Moore, artillery corp, U. S. A. has establihed offices inthe Savings Bank building from which he will direct the work of installing a "Fire Control" system for the forts at the Puget sound. To complete the system entire will take a year and a half and an expenditure of nearly a hundred thousand dollars. In detail the work is to connect each fort, battery and gun with direct communication by telephones and bells so that the officers in charge of the forts will be able to instantly communicate with each detail of the defence of the post. In addition a wireless station will be erected at Fort Stevens and a similar plant wil l be on the new boat, now building at Portland for the post, and which will be able to act as a scout for the post in time of active hostilities and a servicable boat in time of peace.

The county court at its session today offered a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviciton of the murderer of Christ Konias, who was killed at Clifton on last Friday night. The members of the court decided after seeing the effect of the recent gales and high tides along the beach that to build the proposed bridge across the Necanicum river near its mouth will be impracticable. To construct such a bridge would cost nearly $6000 and the indications are that it would not stand for any length of time. According the court has decided in lieu of builidng the bridge to plank the road from the beach thru Gearhart Park to a connection with the main county highway leading to Seaside, so that it can be used by teams and automobiles, which travel the beach road. Bids on furnishing lumber for planking this road were received at the following rates per thousand feet: Westport Lumber Co, $10, at Westport; City Lumber & Box Co., $12 at Astoria or $13.50 at Gearhart Park; D. L. Kelly Lumber Co., $12.50 at Warrenton or $14 at Gearhart Park. The contract was awarded to the Westport Mill Company and as the freight rate from Westport to Gearhart is seven cents per hundred, the lumber will cost $12.80 per thousands feet delivered.

In the federal court at Portland, Monday afternoon, Judge Wolverton granted the petition of Elmer L. Hancock and 135 other residents of the state of Washington, to intervene and file cross-complaints in the railroad land grant suits. The petition is a voluminus document, embracing 162 pages of typewritten and printed matter, and in each instance recites the fact of the petitioner having made a tender of $2.50 an acre to the Oregon & California Railroad Company for 160 acres of land, and the refusal of the corporation to accept the money. It also sets up that the petitioner is ready to comply with the terms of the railroad grant relative to settlement, and prays for an order from the court compelling the railway company to accept the payment in question and give a deed for the paticular tract desired. Petitioners declare further that upon the refusal of the Oregon & California Railroad Company to accept the payment tendered, they caused evidence of said witten offer to be filed with the county recorder of the county wherein the land is situated, and in each case willingness is expressed to comply with every requirement of the grant to the railway corporation by settlement on the land and payment therefor at the rate of $2.50 an acre.

SENATOR NIXON AGAINST JAPS

Nevadan Explains they are not Necessary

Reno, Feb. 10—A lengthy interview was sent from Washington to the Reno Gazette, in which Senator Nixon, of Nevada, declares he agrees with California's anti-Japanese sentiment on the question of segregation in the schools and that state had a right to enact legislation enabling trustees to provide for segregation.

Nixon said: "Complying with your telegram there is no doubt that the sentiment in Nevada is almost unanimous in excluding Japanese from our commonwealth because, as is well known, they have in no manner assisted in developing our industries but on the other hand every dollar earned by them finds its way to the coffers of the land of their nativity. Even the purchase of supplies for their maintenance in our section is made through industrial corporations, wholly Japanese, and no beneficial results are obtained through their entrance into the state." The senator went on say that Japanese coolie labor is not necessary to the development of the Pacific Coast and that the cheapness of their service has excluded the white race from employment. He said he agreed with the movement and with the citizens of California on the question of the segregation of schools and says that in his opinion the legislature has power to enact legislation enabling school trustees to provide segregation. He added he had sent a telegram to the legislature a few days ago advising slow action on the information he had received from the president regarding the negotiations of the two governments, now pending.

BITTER FIGHT AT SACRAMENTO

No Compromise on the Anti-Japanese Legislation

Sacramento, Feb. 10—All the efforts of Governor Gillett and his supporters in the assembly to make a compromise agreement on anti-Japanese legislation have failed. The floor leaders met today in the office of Speaker Stanton to discuss the situation, which they consider desperate. Grove L. Johnson, author of the school segregation bill, today notified Governor Gillett, Speaker Stanton and J. P. Transue that he would make a fight against re-consideration of the vote by which the school bill was passed last week. The governor urged Johnson to withdraw from the fight, explaining the situation between Japan and the United States, as he had learned it from President Roosevelt, but Johnson "stood pat."

MABEL BARRISON, WHO HAS MADE ANOTHER COMEDY HIT.

Mabel Barrison has found in Clyde Fitch's [illegible] another vehicle that proves convulsingly funny. When the [illegible] opened in New York recently it received about the best notices that any Fitch play or adaptation had received in several years. That within itself speaks volumes, for Mr. Fitch has written and staged many Broadway successes. Miss Barrison also came in for a goodly share of the critics' praise

LOAD LUMBER FOR AFRICA

Lumber will be taken from here to Cape Town or Delagoa Bay, South Africa by the French bark Berengere, announcement of her charter for this purpose having been made this morning. She arrived at Iquique from Hobart, Tasmania, November —. She is en route up the coast but the exact date of her sailing from the South American port has not been learned. The vessel is expected to arrive for March loading. She will take out about 1,500,000 feet of fir. The French bark Desaix has been chartered by Kerr, Gifford & Co. to transport a cargo of wheat to the United Kingdom. Recently the owners placed 100 tons of ballast in her with the intention of sending the craft away in search of business.

It will now be necessary to remove the ballast. The Desaix will begin loading soon after the middle of the month, and may get away by the end of February. She is the first grain-carrier taken for several weeks.

MONMOUTH GETS THE ONE NORMAL

If Recommendation of Committee is Enacted

Salem, Or., Feb. 10—One normal school to be located at Monmouth, has been decided upon by the joint committees on ways and means and at the direction of the committees a bill is now being drafted. For carrying on the school and providing for its enlargement an appropriation of $50,000 for a dormitory and $65,000 for salaries and maintenance is recommended. This decision of the committees was reached at a meeting last night. The report will come into the house as soon as the necessary bill can be drafted. It will open the normal school fight, which promises to be perhaps the bitterest of the session. The Weston and the Ashland schools will be abolished by the terms of the bill, and this will be resented by the champions of these schools.

From appearances, the one school plan seems to have the better of it in the house and stands a good chance of passing in the senate.

ATTACKED BY MOUNTAIN CAT

Farmer Kills Ferocious Animal With an Ax

Dayton, Wash., Feb. 10—Beating off and finally killing his assailant a, huge mountain wild cat, with an ax, Frank Lotzen, a Tukanon farmer, saved his life after a desperate struggle one night last week. Lotzen lives in a cabin at the mouth of the Panjab. He was awakened in the night by a scratching noise, and arising he could hear some animal, supposedly a dog, seeking shelter and sniffing at the door. Suspecting nothing, Lotzen opened the door to confront a snarling wildcat of unusual size, crouched ready to spring. Turning quickly, Lotzen seized an ax just in time to deal the cat a terrible blow as it sprang. Wounded, the animal leaped a second time at the man's throat. This time the ax split its head. Struggling fiercely, the cat was killed only after being dealt several more blows. Except for a few scratches, Lotzen was not injured.

AND THEN THEY PARTED

And they were married and lived happily ever afterward? Well, hardly.

It wasn't two days after they had returned from the honeymoon when he dashed downstairs with a shirt in his hand and exclaimed:

"Queen of queens, light of my life, I love you as a woman was never loved before, but if you don't mend the buttonholes in my shirts when they come from the laundry a calamity is going to happen around here."

Two or three days later she met him at the front door when he returned from the office, and there was a savage gleam in her blue eyes as she said

"My king of kings, man whom I adore as man was never adored before, let me give you a little piece of advice. If you don't wipe your feet on the doormat hereafter you'll think you have been struck by lightning."

All went well for a time, but one morning he picked up one of the biscuits she had so proudly placed before him, and as he carefully looked it over and studied its size and shape he remarked:

"My beloved, my jewel of the first water, my princess that I would willingly lay down my life for, you are all the world to me, but hereafter when you put these English walnuts on the table I wish you wouldn't forget the nutcracker."

She awaited her opportunity and got back at him one night when he came home from the club in a hilarious condition.

"My prince of princes," she said as she led him around the bedroom by the ear, "I worship you every minute of the day, but right here and now I am going to take away your latchkey and teach you to stay home by your own fireside seven nights a week."

It was not two days later that he caught her using his best razor on her corns, and he took it away from her he said:

"Helpmeet of helpmeets, woman with eyes that the stars might envy, my very soul is yours, but if I ever catch you doing such a trick again I'll break all the furniture in the house and see that your poodle meets with a violent death."

She did not reply, but when he came home that night the kitchen fire was out, and he found a note reading:

"Apollo of Apollos, Beau Brummel of Beau Brummels, man whom a queen might fall down and worship, I have gone home to mother, and divorce proceedings will be started at once."

He lost no time in getting pen and paper and replied as follows:

"Angel of angels, sweetheart of sweethearts, woman whose charms no man can resist, bring your proceedings and make me the happiest man on earth."

And it was thus they parted

OVERSHOES FOR HORSES

Mrs. Westinghouse Invents Non-Slipping Device

At the urgent request of Mrs. Westinghouse, who is an enthusiastic horse woman, George Westinghouse, the inventor, has invested a large sum of money with others in a new overshoe for horses.

Mrs. Westinghouse believes that many animals are injured and placed on the retired list long before they should be by slipping on wet pavements, and she insisted that her husband interest himself in the matter.

Last summer, while at Erskine Park, near Pittsfield, Mass., Mrs. Westinghouse noticed a team of horses on a wet, rainy morning walking over the smooth asphalt with some sort of chains on their feet. She had them stopped and, investigating, liked the idea so well that she interested others in it.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

THE CASE OF GIUSEPPE VITTORI

A Story of the Italian Earthquakes.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

One December morning Giuseppe Vittori, a fruit merchant of Messina, Sicily, kissed his wife, Natalina, and children—Antonia and Varina, aged respectively six and four years, and, going to the dock, boarded a steamer bound for Naples. Having transacted some business there, he started on his return. The vessel just before daylight was nearing the spot where Messina was then located when Vittori, lying in his berth, felt the ship rise, sink, rise again, then steam on tranquilly as before.

Vittori, not conscious of the importance of this rising and falling of the ship, arose, dressed himself and went on deck. Oh, the horror of that sight! Where the city in which he had been born and passed his life had stood he saw a mass of ruins.

The ship came to anchor in the bay, and Vittori went with others in a boat to the shore. What he had left a populous city was now a gigantic sepulcher. He could not for a long time find the street on which he had lived, and when he did it was still longer before he could find the place where his home had stood, and then he was not certain of it. How could he tell the difference between ruins? He cried out in despair "Natalina!" "Antonio!" "Varina!" in succession, but the only reply was the groans of the wounded and dying emanating from beneath the piles of wood and stone. He set to work frantically to remove the ruins that covered his dear ones. But he soon realized that his efforts were useless. They had lived in the lower story of a high building, and the debris covering them was an immense pile. The scenes about him, too, were dispiriting. People half clothed, some naked, some covered with their own blood, were going about wailing or pulling at the debris to get at their loved ones.

The crowning horror was the breaking out of the fire which covered all with a pall of lurid smoke.

Vittori remained near the burial place of his wife and children till satisfied that they had perished, then in a starving condition sought to get away. He was too late to join the first survivors taken by the steamer Regina Margherita to Palermo, but later he succeeded by another ship in reaching Naples. There he was provided with what he most needed in the way of food and clothing and bethought himself what next to do. His dominant desire was to get as far as possible from the scene of carnage. Relief committees were forming, money was pouring in from all points, and above all came the immense stores from America. Vittori's wife's brother lived in New York, and there the stricken man determined to go. Learning that one of the principal objects of the relief committees was to remove the survivors of the earthquake to other ports, Vittori applied to be sent to America, and after considerable delay a passage ticket in the steerage was given him.

The journey through the Mediterranean and across the Atlantic was a melancholy one. Vittori was by no means one of the lower class of Italians, and his surroundings were not calculated to alleviate his grief. What was the world to him while his dear wife and children were lying under the ruins of their home! He was tortured by the thought that possibly they might have been, like others, days, if not weeks, dying.

At last the long voyage was ended, and the vessel which held Vittori and other of his countrymen sailed up the bay of New York. As she neared her pier many upturned Italian faces looked anxiously for friends or loved ones they hoped might have escaped the terrible earthquake and were coming to them. Vittori could not endure to look at them and went below till most of the steerage passengers had gone ashore, then joined the line moving over the gangway toward the crowd still waiting on the pier.

Suddenly he heard a cry, and a pair of arms were thrown around his neck. For a moment he was held so close that he could not see who embraced him, but knew that it was a woman. Unwinding her arms and holding her off, he stood staring at her as if she had been a ghost. He saw his wife.

But his wife was dead, buried with his little ones under the ruins of Messina. What was this vision that had come up to mock him? Laughing, crying, she still clung to him. A tiny hand clasped his. He looked down and saw the upturned face of Antonio. And standing by the boy was little Varina.

Still he stared and wondered. But gradually it came over him that these were flesh and blood. They were indeed his lost wife and children. His senses were leaving him, but by an effort he controlled them.

How did they get here? How did they escape the earthquake?

One after the other he embraced them, taking the children up in his arms and looking at them as if returned from the dead.

Then he was led away.

Natalina, after her husband's departure from Messina being lonely, had gone with the children to the home of a friend, a low frame dwelling on high ground, where the tidal wave did not reach them, and the house did not fall. They joined the first refugees and were sent on the first vessel that arrived from the stricken district to America.

HAROLD OTIS.

A WINNING HAND.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

While standing in a railroad coach looking over a game of poker one of the players invited a drummer standing beside me to take a hand. He declined, saying that he never played that or any other gambling game, averring that there was something in it excitive of avarice, dishonesty, anger and many other repulsive traits, ending with curiosity. I asked him why he included the last.

"Sit down here," he said, leading the way to a seat, "and I'll tell you."

We sat down together, and he told the following story:

"I once had two friends, John Rylance and Peter Nichols. They're both dead now, but at the period of which I'm going to tell you they were very much alive. One afternoon they were playing a friendly game of poker with a party, all of whom except themselves finally dropped out. They agreed to deal one hand for $10. Each seemed confident of the hand dealt him and kept raising the other till there was $500 in the pot, when Nichols bet $1,000 more. Rylance said that was above what he had on hand. Nichols retorted that he would give him all the time he wanted to go and get more, and Rylance agreed to go after funds and 'see' him.

"Of course he couldn't go off and leave his cards, and he couldn't take them with him. It was agreed that both hands should be placed on the table face down, the four corners of each card sealed with wax. This was done, each man using a private seal. Then they both went off after money, agreeing to return in an hour.

"Rylance went to his bank and drew what funds he wanted and was getting on a trolley car to go back when an automobile came along and knocked him down. He didn't seem to be much hurt, but when he tried to get up he couldn't and had to call a carriage, be lifted into it and driven home. Nichols went to his house, where he had a lot of money in a tin box, and found doctors and nurses flying around. His wife had been taken suddenly ill, and they had been hunting and telephoning for him all over town.

"When the hour was up and neither returned, Evans, the man at whose house they had been playing, locked the door of the room the cards were in and went off about something needing his attention. When he got back, learning that neither of them had been there, he called up both on the telephone, learned the cause of their failure to return and received a request from each to let the table and the cards stand as they were. From time to time Evans inquired as to when they would finish the game, but Rylance got worse instead of better, and Mrs. Nichols lay a long while at the point of death."

The story teller talked so loud that others besides myself could hear. Several passengers near by were listening.

"Do you know that Rylance never got out again? The damage done by the automobile was internal and produced complications. The surgeons operated on him, and he died under the operation. At the same time Mrs. Nichols was at the point of death, but she suddenly took a turn for the better, giving her husband an opportunity to get away on a journey to a matter that had been needing his attention for some time. Coming back he was caught in a railroad accident and killed."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed an impatient passenger. "Aren't you ever going to tell us who won that hand?"

"And spoil my story? Not much. It's just here where the trouble comes in—that is, in settling the two men's estates. You see, there was no precedent in law to decide whether the money should be divided equally or whether the estate inheriting the winning hand should have it all. Rylance's heirs said that he had claimed that he was sure to win. Nichols' widow declared that often during her illness her husband had encouraged her by saying that he had won some $1,200 with which he proposed to buy her a diamond ring to commemorate her recovery. On no condition would she consent to a division."

"Come," interrupted one of the listeners; "I'm dying for a smoke and want to go into the smoker. Which won?"

"I'm coming to the end right off. They finally found a judge who found a law—there are laws for anything if you can only find them—by which the winning estate might come by its honest gains. The court issued a lot of papers with big seals on them empowering the clerk or the master in chancery or the surrogate, or whoever it was, to go to Evans' house and in presence of witnesses break the seals, turn over the cards and make affidavit as to the hands and which hand belonged to which player."

"Same old red tape," cried a listener. "Cut it short."

"Well, the clerk of the court, taking his witnesses, went to Evans' house, the door was unlocked and the cards were discovered just as the two men had left them nearly a year before. The clerk separated the cards from the table with his knife and turned them over."

"Chattahoon!" shouted a trainman, throwing open the car door.

"Sorry to leave you, gentlemen," said the drummer, "but this is my station." And rising, he made a dive for the door.

"The winning hand?" cried every voice at once.

"Curiosity." OSCAR COX.

LONG TRIP FOR LIBERTY BELL

Councils Ask to Send it to the Pacific Coast

Should [illegible] request of the city council of Portland, Ore., be granted [illegible] the Philadelphia councils the Liberty bell will begin one of the longest journeys in its history next spring.

The Portland councils and the Portland rose festival have asked that the bell be brought to the Pacific coast to be present at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition at Seattle in June [illegible] communications containing the request were read the other day in select council and referred to the committee on city property.

Quite Immediately.

"Who was it that said, 'Oh, this is so sudden?'"

"I believe it was the young lady when her steady proposed after ten years of unproductive courtship."

"Oh, I thought it was some one else."

"Who did you think it was?"

"The fellow who fell off the water wagon the second day."

In a Class by Himself.

"Yes, Jones is a model man."

"Doesn't smoke or drink or do anything of that sort?"

"Not a thing."

"How lonely he must be on New Year's day."

A Real Substitute.

"After all, the weather comes in handy as a subject for conversation."

"Yes, unless you happen to meet a man who owns a safety razor."

TWIN LEVIATHANS

Two vessels will soon be under construction in Belfast, Ire., on what might be termed a carte blanche order from the White Star company, which are to suprass any ships afloat in size and some other particulars. Between the Belfast and the White Star companies, it seems, such an argeeable understanding as existed since 1870 that although more than a score of vessels have been built by one and accepted and paid for by the other, there never has been a serious disagreement.

In the present instance, as on previous occasions, the construction of the ships will be entered upon without contract and without specifications, the shipbuilding company undertaking simply to outdo all its previous efforts, the steamship company undertaking to be satisfied with the result.

This will explain why there are available no details with relation to the cost of the vessels now in hand. It is known, however, that the two ships are to be alike, each having a displacement of 60,000 tons, with length between 950 and 1000 feet. draft of 37 feet, and with engines of 50,000 horsepower to propel them at a speed of not less than twenty-one knots an hour. Some idea of the ennormous size of these ships may be formed by consideration of the fact that the Great Eastern, which a generation ago was regarded as a marvel in the shipbuilding line, had a displacement of only 25,000 tons. was only 600 feet in length, and drew only 30 feet of water.

The new ships are to be known as the Olympic and Titanic, and when completed they will exceed in size the Lusitania and the Mauretania as much as the latter do the ocean liners of two decades ago. They will not, however, be as fast as the Cunarders.

As an incident to the construction of these great vessels, a preliminary expense of $1,000,000 was necessary in the matter of providing berths for them. These are of steel girders nearly 600 feet high, 300 feet wide and nearly 1000 feet long. The Olympic and Titanic are designed especially as freight carriers, but each will have a dining room capable of seating 600 persons.

They will have a margin of only three feet in the channel of New York harbor at low water; they would have to wait for high water before entering the ports of Boston or Philadelphia.

The enactment of anti-Japanese legislation by any other authority than congress is disapproved by a majority of the members of the Oregon legislature, as disclosed by a poll taken. Sentiment against any legislative disturbance of the Japs is especially strong in the senate where 23 of the 30 members are opposed either to taking the initiative or encouraging agitation of the subject of memorializing congress. The 60 members of the house are more equally divided on the subject. Of 50 members questioned today, 31 expressed themselves against Japanese exclusion, while 19 contended that the little brown men should be excluded from this country by congressional act. Only one measure touching on the subject of foreign immigration to this country has appeared at this session of the legislature. It is a memorial to congress, introduced in the senate by Senator Bailey, urging the enactment of a law that will exclude all Asiatics from this country This memorial will be reported back without recommendation, and it will be overwhelmingly defeated, a poll showing that probably 27 of the 30 senators will oppose the memorial. Included among those who will so vote are several senators, who, while they believe the Jap should not be admitted to the United States, wish to avoid any participation in the pending anti-Jap agitation and leave the problem for the solution of congress.

POETRY AND MODERN POETS

The noise of the Poe centennial celebration reverberates. The tributes were higher than had been expected. As the event approached warm admirers of Poe were crying out against the indifference or listlessness of the American public. After the event they began marshaling encomiums and studying their significance. It is even believed that the requisite ten votes to place Poe in the Hall of Fame will be forthcoming at the election next year. The same respect might have been given to Poe's memory had he never written a line of verse, but the general interest in the man would have been immeasurably less but for half a dozen, perhaps two, of his pieces. If "The Raven," as is often said, clings to the mind, "The Bells" rings in the ears. A glance at any of Poe's pieces shows that there is something unusual in them from the modern point of view.

Poe said that poetry with him had been "not a purpose, but a passion." He wrote stories and reviews, and he lectured to keep the pot boiling. He did not even deliver messages in verse, because, as he said, "the passions should be held in reverence; they must not, they cannot at will be excited with an eye to results." This flies in the face of the idea so often expressed as to the "mission of poetry." In Poe's sense it has no definite mission. It is the song or the shout or the wail of the soul. We know little of this view of poetry today. What demand there is for poetry impels the poet to go about it with a purpose. It springs from the intellect and appeals to the intellect or to sensation. Poe wrote to express his feeling. Modern poets write to stir the feelings of others. Poe said that Tennyson was the world's noblest poet, yet it is a far cry from "The Raven" to "Locksley Hall" as the wail of a tortured soul.

The promoters of the George Junior republics are hopeful that three new states—viz. Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New Jersey—will be annexed to the so called nation during the current year. New York, California, Connecticut and Maryland may from this time on lay claim to having been the "original states" in the movement to make citizens out of wayward youngsters who want to throw off the yoke of bad habits. There is nothing in a name, but it would add picturesqueness to this new American revolution if there should be a federation formed by thirteen "colonies" and annexation of commonwealths from time to time results in a nation as broad as the republic which serves for the model.

It is pioneer work which these boys and girls of the George Junior colonies and republics engage in. They are striving for the future of the organization and also for the future of themselves as individuals. The workers in this movement have no native wilderness to conquer. But they do have to battle against their own ill starred fortunes—bad conditions and bad habits, for which they, as a rule, are not responsible. Born out of the pale or cast out by their own conduct, they must reclaim themselves. This is a warfare to build up individual character, and with character for capital the redeemed boy or girl may compete with the more fortunate youth of society. Here is a field where charity cannot pauperize. Charity may whitewash poverty and reputation, but it cannot whitewash character.

Probably not a tear was shed as course after course at the Chicago onion banquet disappeared save the one where everything on the bill of fare was served raw.

MAKE USE OF FOREST SERVICE

hows Great Increase During Past Fiscal Year

The actual use of the varied resour es of the government's 168,000,000 eres of national forest land is on the nerease, according to the report of ne work for the fiscal year 1908. The eport says that from an administra ive standpoint the most striking fact f the year was the remarkable in rase which took place in the volume of usiness transacted.

This growth in business done by the nited States forest service last year ver the previous year is partly rought out in the following statement howing precentages of increase: in he number of timber sales, 236 per ent; in the amount of timber cut un er sales, 102 per cent; in the num er of free timber permits, 76 per ent; in the number of grazing per its, 11 per cent, and in the number f special use permits, 67 per cent. hat the additions to existing national orests and now creations caused this nerease only to a small extent is hown by the fact that the real in reased is only 11 per cent. In speak ng of this feature of the work of the orest service in his annual report, the ecretary of agriculture says in part:

"The growth in the volume of busi ess arising from use of the forests as created a very serious administra ive problem. Last year 78 per cent f the time of the administrative and rotective force was taken up by the emands of National forest business. he average forest area to each officer upposedly available for patrol duty vas about 120,000 acres; but with nore than there-fourths of the time of hese officers occupied with timber-sale, razing, and other business, the force ctually available for patrol was equi alent to about one man to each 500, 00 acres. That under these circum tances the fire losses in a year of ex eptional danger were kept to a very mall figure in comparison with the alue of the timber exposed and the amage from forest fires elsewhere is matter of congratulation."

CLEVER WORK ON REPAIRS

Feat Performed by Engineers on Hesperus

To the list of clever repairs at sea may be made the patching of the rudder post of the oil tank steamer Hesperus, says an exchange. On her maiden voyage, with the rudder post brand new, a crack was discovered running along its length for ten feet. The crack was due to a flaw or some other impertfection in casting. The ship was in mid Atlantic when the unwelcome discovery was made and the condition of the weather, sea as well as wind made it imperative that repairs be effected before a threatening storm came up. The barometer had fallen steadily all morning.

Captain Dalldorf, master of the steamer, was skepetical as to the ability of the engineer force to save the rudder post from breaking in pieces carrot fashion when the ship began to labor in the added weight of increasing seas. Chief Engineer Helgesen said, however, that he would try to patch the crack. Helgesen put nautical "splints" and "bandags" around the fractured rudder post. The chief engineer and his assistants clamped the upper portion of the post with stout turns of steel and the huge metal casting was made secure lower down by semi-circles of steel that were in turn held together by stable bolts and nuts. The space in which the repairs were made being quite small and at the extreme after end of the ship, it was only possible for two men to work at one time Despite this and other handicaps, the repairs were effected in seven hours. About an hour later a fierce northeasterly gale struck the vessel and all hands were thankful the job had been accomplished. The Hesperus is a steel tank steamer of $6,500 tons gross, built on the Tyne lastyear and owned by the Anglo-American Oil company.

RAISE FUNDS FOR PARKS

La Grande Women are Assisting in Project

La Grande, Or., Feb. 10—Five hundred dollars have been collected by the women of La Grande, toward the purchase and improvement of 12 acres of land near this city, to be used for public park purposes. The project is to cost $5000 when completed and the park will be the biggest of its kind in the state. The Grand Ronde River flows by the tract, which lies a half mile from this city, and the park is to be built and maintained for sports as well as recreation purposes. A large natatorium will be built in the center of the place and several acres, where a heavy timber patch stands, will be provided and maintained.

The women promoting the project are securing "lifts" from benefit card parties, socials and the like; anothere fature bringing in some money is to have children make money bags and send in as many pennies as possible at a time, the object being to make a string of pennies one mile long. Several rods of this mile have already been secured. A tag day later in the spring is expected to fatten the fund materially.

When about half of the required sum is at hand, the work will be commenced and paid for as completion nears. The entire city has taken a deep interest in the project, for all realize that when completed the park will be without a peer in Eastern Oregon and Washington.

"HANFORD IN COMEDY"

Charles B. Hanford's third appearance in Astoria will afford an opportunity to see him in comedy, two previous engagements being of the tragic order. Two years ago he gave us Julius Caesar and last year Antony and Cleopatra both fine big productions. This year it is promised that The Taming of the Shrew will be up to the same high standard of the previous presentations. Mr Hanford has given nearly nine hundred performances of "Petruchi" in the Taming of the Shrew during the past eight years and by many of the ablest critics it is conceded to be his best characterization.

A notable feature of this year's performance will be the presenation of a one act play called "The Old Guard" a story of Waterloo which preceeds The Taming of the Shrwe and in which Mr. Hanford appares as "Haverstock" one of Napoleons old guards. In this play the late Henry Irving was often seen with distinguished success.

Mr. Hanford's engagement promises to be one of the real events of this theatre season and he will unquestionably play to a capacity audience at the Astoria theatre on the night of Wednesday Feb. 17th.

NECK AND NECK FOR ROAD BILLS

But Johnson Measure Has the First Chance

Salem, Or., Feb. 10—As circumstances have shaped themselves, the Crater lake road bill and the Johnson good roads measure seem to be approaching the mile post in the senate together. The Crater lake bill is resting in the committee on roads and highways and it is distined to stay there until the senate has acted on the good roads bill fathered by Johnson, the chairman of the committee. It is hinted that Johnson will follow the roll call on the good roads measure with more than usual interest, and the friends of that bill are expected to make particular note of the votes cast by Senator Mulit and other champions of the Crater lake bill. If the Crater lake people vote against the Johnson bill, their favorite measure is likely to get the ax from the senate committee.

The fate of both bills is uncertain. The good roads bill has been made a special order for this afternoon and its defeat would not be a surprise. Unexpected opposition has developed, some of the good roads associations themselves have sent in protests within the last few days. These protests come from eastern Oregon and from the timber counties in the west, the chief objection being that these counties expect no benefits from the bill for many years to come, but would be taxed to pay one third of the expenses carried on in other counties.

The bill came from the committee with a favorable report, by only a scratch, three of its members rising on the floor to announce that they reserved the right to oppose it on the final vote. Many senators are beginning to feel the sting of criticism on authorizing big expenditures, and the Johnson bill is one that would open the gates for a large outlay. Recognizing the need for some systematic road law, these members are between two fires.

The Crater lake advocates are preparing to amend their bill so that $25,000 will be appropriated each year for four years, instead of a flat $100,000. Senator Mulit says he is assured this will be acceptable to the United States and that the national government will cooperate at once when assured that the state has pledged the $100,000, even though only one fourth of it becomes immediately available. The $50,000 set aside by Jackson county, the like sum from Klamath county, the $50,000 from E. H. Harriman and $25,000 from the state, would make $[illegible] 000 immediately available and the government is said to be ready to do its share if the state gives $25,000, provided $75,000 more is pledged to follow.

Large Force of Men will be at Work Next Spring

Jewell, Oregon, Feb. 8, 1909.

Editor Budget:—Eli Foster and Ralph Wooden came from town Sunday evening with a load of supplies, but not without meeting with an accident. Their wagon broke down in a bad place on the road which delayed them about two hours, but they eventually reached Jewell with their goods intact.

Mr. Walker is still on the sick list, and unable to leave the house on account of his crippled condition, due to a bad attack of rheumatism.

Jas Jamieson went to Astoria Wednesday with a big load of fresh pork. Willie Wage and Frank Medly are attending to the stock, during his absence.

Mr. Walker had the misfortune to lose ten head of his best sheep recently through their dying from some cause unknown.

Mr. Treharn a contractor of Portland was a guest of your correspondent Thursday and Friday of last week, departing Saturday for Vernonia and Rock Creek where he has a timber claim. He came in on horseback via Tillamook, Seaside and Astoria to have a look at the country. Mr. Treharn had charge of the rock work on the Buxton tunnel for the Hillsboro-Tillamook road. In answer to a question, he said the tunnel near Buxton was 1390 feet long and had already cost seventy thousand dollars and still had to be timbered, which would require a further expenditure of about twelve thousand dollars. He also stated the company would have a thousand men at work on each end of the road this summer, and that there would be lots of work for teams. We could hardly look for the completion of the road into Jewell this year, he said but it would reach here eventually, which is something that Nehaemites can certainly look forward to with pleasure.

Four inches of fresh snow fell here during Thursday and Friday. This is certainly a record winter for Nehalem.

The bridges on the river road to Mist have been repaired and the first wagon to travel the road for weeks past, arrived today from Vesper, Mr. Enevaldsen, the driver of the wagon, went on down the river Elsie.

Ardie Alexander was to one day this week and shot a bear, which his dog had treed in the woods near his home on Banicke Creek. The bare was a small one. He also captured a large wildcat in a trap the same day.

C. D. Smith was down to Jewell on a business trip Saturday from his place near Mist, returning the same day.

Major Lamoreax, who has been in command at Fort Stevens for several month, leaves today for Presidio to take command of the forces there. Major Bartlett, who is to take charge at Fort Stevens, is expected to arrive from Fort Worden during the latter part of this week.

C. H. Woolfe, former sheriff of Tillamook county, is in the city visiting with his uncle R. M. Wooden. Mr. Woolfe states that the people of Tillamook are looking forward with great interest to the construction of the new road connecting Tillamook and Clatsop counties.

It is expected the lumber for planking the road in Gearhart Park from the beach to a connection with the main county highway will be delivered so that the court at its next session can make arrangements for laying the planking.

A compromise sailor boarding house bill will be introduced in the senate by the Multnomah delegation to take the place of the Selling and the Nottingham bills. The new bill reduces the fee for supplying sailors from $30 to $10 and takes that part of the business away from sailor boarding-house keepers and gives it to shipping masters.

The examinations for applicants for county and state teachers' certificates were commenced today before the board consisting of Miss Warren, county school superintendent, Mrs. Gearhart and Prof. Clark. Fourteen applicants are taking the examinations, 10 being for county certificates and four for state papers. The examinations will continue until next Saturday.

Representative C. A. Leinenweber writes from Salem that the opponents to the lower Columbia river fishing interests are canvassing a bill secretly for future introduction and will attempt to rush it through but as he is chairman of the fisheries of the house he is in a position to interfere with its passage and he proposes to keep his eye on the matter exclusively until the close of the session.

C. A. Anderson was over from Rosberg today and reports that the run of smelt near the mouth of Grays river has fallen off and but small hauls are being made now. Most of the smelt are now being caught farther inland near the regular spawning grounds at the head of tide water. The practice of fishing for smelt above tidewater will eventually destroy this desirable food fish the same as it is decreasing the run of salmon in the Columbia river.

As the launch Hulda I. was approaching Chinook on Tuesday a prominent cititzen of the city of traps fell overboard and with difficulty was saved from drowning. He was standing on the after part of the boat and was attempting to draw a cork out of a bottle and as it was released the bottle went overboard and without hesitating he jumped after it as it sank out of sight. He explained afterwards that he had drawn the cork out of another bottle before he left Astoria.

District Forecaster E. A. Beals has been apprised by headquarters at Washington, D. C., that North Yakima, Wash., will be added to the reporting stations in this district just as soon as instruments can be installed. Albert H. Bender has been appointed observer. Two daily telegraphic reports of weather conditions prevailing there will be sent for incorporation in the weather map issued every morning. Other meteorological stations of the same class recently established in this district are at Blaine, Wash., Marshfield and Siskiyou.

Sensational changes were expected this week in the prices paid by the local merchants to the farmers of this vicinity for their livestock and produce after the flurry of a few days ago but it has not materialized. Eggs have dropped and the real hen fruit is now retailing at 45 cents per dozen while for one day a couple of stores demanded 65 cents. The price of hogs has advanced a couple of cents per pound and potatoes show a slight advance, with a prospect of the latter going higher.

The body of Christ Konias, the Greek who was murdered at Clifton, has been buried by Coroner Gilbaugh at the expense of the county. No friends claimed the body and telegrams to different parts of the country, where he was supposed to have relatives, brought no response. Sheriff Pomeroy still has hope that he will locate and arrest the murderer and is using every effort to do so. He is being assisted by a number of prominent Greeks of this section, who are well acquainted with the man.

After a passage of over 200 days from Hamburg, the four-masted British bark Springbank has arrived at Santa Rosalia, Mexico. Agents of the owners have received word to this effect. The outward voyage from the Belgian port was a wild one. Mrs. Royal, wife of the master of the ship, Steward Lound and able Seaman Leslie succumbed to disease and were buried at sea. The nature of the malady which resulted in the three deaths is not known, as Captain Royal failed to state it in his cable to the owners. The voyage is one of the longest on record.

Mrs C. [illegible] Hess today received the sad intelligence of the death of her brother, Wm Gilmore at Yakima Wash, at the age of 60 years. His death was caused by pneumonia. Mr. Gilmore was well known here in the early years of Clatsop county.

President McGlaughlin, of the Grays Harbor Lumber Manufacturers' Association, has mailed a protest to the quartermaster' department for alleged discriminations against Grays Harbor in calling for bids on lumber for exclusive delivery on Puget Sound. The protest says that large vessels can enter and leave Grays Harbor in safety and that the mill men of that section should be allowed to bid on lumber purchased by the government.

The Oregon supreme court has handed down a decision affirming the ruling of Judge McBride in the case of Benj. Young et al vs the Columbia Land & Investment Company. The decision is a victory for the defendants, the ones directly interesting being A. B. Hammond and the Astoria Company. Some years ago a corporation known as the Columbia Land & Investment Company was formed and stock amounting to $90,000 was subscribed for by a number of local people. A large tract of land at Tongue Point was purchased, but as the financial depression occured shortly afterwards, some of the stockholders were unable to pay the assessments on their stock. Accordingly, about $20,000 was borrowed from the Brown estate, the delinquent stockholders giving their notes and a mortgage on their interest in the property as securites. Later, a few of the stockholders, who are the plaintiffs in this case, purchased the mortgage and the oustanding notes and began foreclosure proceedings. Hammond and the Astoria Company fought the foreclosure proceedings, aserting that the claims against the property were purchased without the defendants' knowledge; that the claims were purchased at a discount, namely about $5000, and contending that the plaintiffs could not recover the full amount of the claim, but merely the sum which these claims had cost them. Judge McBride decided that the defendants' contention was correct and the supreme court has now affirmed that decison.

Judge Bowlby returned at noon today from Spokane where he attended the convention of delegates from the county organizations in the various sections of the inland empire of the Farmers Educational & Co-operative Union of America. The members of the organization are all wheat growers and they are making preparations to market their own grain by eliminating the middlemen and will erect elevators and warehouses at some shipping port. The convention held at Spokane this week was for the purpose of securing data as to what point will be selected as the Union's shipping port. The meeting was attenned by delegations representing Astoria, Portland, Vancouver and St. Johns, each explaining to the convention the advantages of their respective points. There were also representatives of the railway companies present. Astoria was represented by Judge Bowlby and J. H. Whyte of the Chamber of Commerce and several other persons, not residents of Astoria, assisted in setting forth the advantages to be found here. At an open session of the convention on Monday morning the representatives of each place were allowed to make short addresses, but after that none of them were allowed to attend the meetings. Each delegation was, however, given a private hearing before a committee appointed by the convention. Later a committee, krown as the selling committee, was appointed to have charge of selling the grain belonging to the union members and this committee will probably make a further investigation of the warehouse question, before the organization actually decides upon what shall be done, which it is expected will be at its next session. While the organization transacts all its business in secret and little is given out, it is know that the members are favorably impressed with the idea of having their warehouses located near the mouth of the Columbia river and there is reason to believe that a start has been made which will bring results. A Spokane paper in publishing an account of the convention, says no action will be taken at the present session but in all probability terminal warehouses will be erected at Portland, Vancouver and Astoria. Judge Bowlby says the farmers are deeply in earnest in their movement for improving the marketing of their grain, are well organized and appear anxious to investigate all phases of the question before taking final action.

TAFT ARRIVES AT NEW ORLEANS

Great Welcome Has Been Accorded Him

New Orleans, Feb. 11—Balmy spring weather marked the opening of the first day of the visit of Taft to New Orleans. Bright sunshine followed a semi tropical rain of several days ago, with temperatuers considerably higher than prevailed on Tuesday, Wednesday, when the effects of a blizzard when the same thing was across the northwest and felt as far south as the gulf. There was a tinge of cold air however that served to inject life and to add to the activities of the committees making ready for the reception of the next president. The uncertainty of the hour of the arrival of the visitors was dispelled by the receipt of a wireless that the cruiser Birmingham with Taft on board had reached Chalmette, just below New Orleans early this afternoon The transfer of Taft from the North Carolina to the Birmingham occurred without incident.

The president-elect left the North Carolina on the tug Magnolia and arrived on the Birmingham at 8:50. As Taft boarded the Birmingham, the battleships fired salutes of 13 guns and headed for sea. By the time the Birmingham had crossed the bar at the mouth of the Mississippi, they were mere specks on the horizon.

The Birmingham passed Happy Jack, Plaquemine parish, about one o'clock traveling at a 15 knot clip.

SCHOONER BUHNE IN DISTRESS

Reaches Port Townsend After Trying Experience

Port Townsend, Wash., Feb. 11—Out 42 days from San Pedro to Coos Bay, the schooner Esther Buhne, put in here this morning, after a trying experience with storms and gales, which carried away all her sails. Captain Olsen after many attempts to gain Coos Bay, was driven northward and tried to make Umpqua river and Grays's Harbor. At the latter place, the last stitch of canvas was carried away and for several hours, it seemed almost hopeless to attempt to get temporary sail rigged in time to prevent being carried on the shore. Under practically bare poles, the craft was next driven further north, finally being able to make her way into this port.

STILL TALKING FOOLISHNESS

Claim will Oppose Seating of Senator Chamberlain

Salem, Or., Feb. 11—Active work has been carried on by the anti-statement members in both senate and house for two days looking to the prevention of Governor Chamberlain taking his seat in the United States senate. Certified copies of the journals of both branches of the legislature have been prepared, incorporating the protest registered by all the statement men voting for Chamberlain, and it is said are to be signed by President Bowerman and Speaker McArthur. The records are then to be sent to Washington by special messenger.

"Governor Chamberlain may be sworn in," said a senator who is playing a leading part in the affair "but that does not mean that he will take his seat, by any means. The committee on elections and privileges and the credentials committee of the United States senate must report favorably before he can be seated, and it is to them that the certified copies of the journals of both branches of the Oregon legislature are to be carried.

"A great question is at issue—that of representative government, which is vitally affected by the primary, initiative and referendum laws. We are confident of defeating the plan to place a Democrat in the senate from this state."

Mr. Citicuss (home from the office)—Why, what's the matter with father-in-law? Mrs. Citicuss—Oh, pa went out for a walk today, his first since coming to New York, and he's got a bad sore throat from saying "Good morning" to every one he passed.—Puck.

ALIEN MEASURE IS DEFEATED

California Legislature Kills Anti Japanese Bill

Sacramento, Feb. 11—On reconsideration last evening, the Johnson anti-Japanese school bill was defeated by a vote of 11 to 17.

Late yesterday afternoon Transue withdrew his resolution, in order that the reconsideration matter might be taken up at once. Water Leeds of Los Angelles then moved that the vote whereby Johnson's school bill had been passed be reconsidered.

Grove L. Johnson then took up the defense of his bill.

"I do not see," said Johnson, "why this assembly should back down. Shall we accede to the orders of some one who is 3000 miles away from here, or shall we vote as we desire? I believe we should all vote as we see fit. I think this body is perfectly competent to decide this matter without the aid of telegrams from the president or messages from the govenror."

He warned the younger members of the house who voted for his measure last week that they would make a mistake if they changed their minds and stood for reconsideration. Johnson told of what had taken place two years ago, when anti-Japanese bills were pending before the legislature. He said that then he favored postponing action because of the promises made by Roosevelt.

CONSERVATION CONFERENCE

Representatives of Three Nations Will Meet

Washington, Feb. 11—Arrangements for the North American Conservation Conference between representatives of the United States, Canada and Mexico, at the white house, February 18, are going forward rapidly, following the cordial acceptance by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier, and Earl Grey, Governor General, of Canada, and President Diaz of Mexico, of President Roosevelt's invitation to send delegates. The conference will discuss the situation with regard to the natural resources of the respective countries and help prepare a general plan adapted to promote the welfare of the nations concerned in accordence with Prsident Roosevelt's suggestion.

The attendance will be limited to the representatives of Canada and Mexico and representatives of the state department of the United States government and of other executive departments which can render particular assistance to the conferees in their deliberations, and the national conservation commission.

Canada has already taken active steps in preparation for the conference and recently sent to the national conservation commission a number of carefully prepared maps which show the present status of the public lands of the Dominion as well as the distribution of the principal natural resources and the development of its transportation systems. The Canadian authorities have also gathered together and sent to the Chairman of the commission a comprehensive collection of government documents bearing on the natural resources of the country. These have been carefully indexed and bound together according to subjects. They will be used at the forthcoming conference.

President Roosevelt feels that the connection between the United States and the two nations which lie to the north and south is so intimate that they can consider their mutual interests with regard to natural resources from the standpoint of the general welfare of the continent with small regard to the political boundary lines which separate them. Indeed, it is said that he considered inviting Canada and Mexico to the first conservation conference at the white house but that he refained from doing so because he was unwilling to run the remotest risk of asking these two nations to associate themselves with the conservation movement before it was certain that it was going to succeed. Now that success is assured he feels that since the two nations have identical interests and identical aspirations they can work together along conservation lines just as the representatives of the states work together without regard to state boundaries.

SAILOR GETS LARGE AMOUNT

Portion of English, Estate Awaits Him

San Francisco, Feb. 11—From third mate of an English ship beating about the world in search of cargo to a man of comparative wealth is a long step, but it is sometimes accomplished in a single day, as in the case of Frank P. Perry of the British ship Marlborough Hill, which arrived today from Rotterdam.

Perry received a letter from his English home announcing the death of his father and the fact that he had inherited $15,000 from the estate. The young sailor, who has climbed to his present position from an apprentice boy's berth, will stick to his ship until his time expires in May, and then return to England to wed the girl who has been waiting for him for two years in his home town Acton, near London.

OLD LAND CASES ARE CLEARED UP

Year's Accumulation Disposed of in Grant County

Canyon City, Or., Feb. 11—During the past three weeks many residents of Grant county have been summoned to the county seat to appear as witness in land contest cases instituted by the government. The testimony was taken before County Clerk William H. Schroeder. It was concluded today. Clinton P. Hartson of the department of the general land office, and assigned to special duty in the United States district attorney's office, appeared for the government.

About 15 cases were disposed of, most of them being cases where special agents of the land office had reported adversely to the issuance of patent on homestead entries where the final proof had been made, while other cases were hung up on account of the adverse report of forestry officials. So far as known no element of fraud appeared, but itwas alleged that the claimants did not live up to the provisions of the homestead laws.

The cases were the accumulation of several years it being the intention of the government to clear them all up at one time. The following is a list of the homestead entries contested: H. A. Murphy, Patrick McGinnis, Michael Douden, William Zirl Harris, Frank L. Senn, Ed. Turk, Miranda I. Purcell, Frederick Shaw, Mrs. N. H. Boley, H. M. Hansen, Ellen Hansen and Emma L. Gentry. The case of Arnold S. Rothwell was continued until next May.

A rigiid investigation, which lasted all night has disclosed no clew to the identity of her assailant.

EFFECT OF WEEPING

The Way Tears Act Upon the Human Organism

Professor Waynbaum, M. D., of Paris publishes some queer facts regarding the nature and purpose of tears, coming to the conclusion that tears act upon the human organism "like chloroform, ether or alcohol."

"When a human being gives way to sorrow," says Dr. Waynbaum, "the blood pressure in the brain decreases. The tear helps in this process, which benumbs the brain for the time being, causing passiveness of the soul almost approaching indifference.

"Tears are blood, changing color by their passage through the lachrymal glands. One can drown his sorrow in tears as one can benumb his senses by the use of alcohol or drugs. When a person cries the facial muscles contract and the appearance of the face changes, which action facilitates the white blood letting, driving the blood particles into the lachrymal gland, from which they issue in the shape of tears.

"Children whose nervous system is particularly tender derive great benefit from crying occasionally. The act of crying relieves their brains. The same may be said with respect to women."

The professor likewise explains why laughter sometimes produces tears, but the explanation is too technical for reproduction.

Without Horns.

A clergyman was an important witness in a horse dealing case. He gave a somewhat confused account of the transaction in dispute, and the cross examining counsel, after making several blustering but ineffective attempts to obtain a more satisfactory statement, said:

"Pray, sir, do you know the difference between a horse and a cow?"

"I acknowledge my ignorance," replied the reverend gentleman. "I hardly know the difference between a horse and a cow or between a bull and a bully—only a bull, I am told, has horns, and a bully"—here he made a respectful bow to the advocate—"luckily for me, has none."

Beans, Spanish Style.

Soak overnight two cupfuls of white or pink beans. In the morning boil with a pinch of soda fifteen minutes and drain. Fry one large sliced onion with a piece of pork or bacon. Add these to the beans; also a cup of canned tomatoes, two shredded chili peppers, salt and sufficient hot water to cover well. Boil briskly for ten minutes on the stove before putting in the cooker. Leave in for five hours. —Good Housekeeping.

Dental Incubation.

"Tommy," said the visiting uncle, "seems to me that baby sister of yours is pretty slow. She hasn't any teeth yet, has she?"

"She's got plenty of teeth," replied the indignant Tommy. "She's got a whole mouthful of teeth, only they ain't hatched yet."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Old Fashioned Cream Candy.

Take two cupfuls of granulated sugar and two cupfuls of water; place in a saucepan to boil. Do not stir at all after the sugar has dissolved. While the sugar and water are boiling dissolve a little starch in cold water and set it aside ready for use later. Test the sugar and water mixture every few seconds, and when it grows hard at once upon dropping into water add the starch, stirring very rapidly, and boil a minute or two longer. Then pour into a buttered dish and let cool sufficiently to handle with comfort and pull it with the hands, just as one does old fashioned molasses candy. It will become as white as milk and be of a smooth, delicious consistency when done. Draw out long and cut with large shears into the desired size pieces.

Darning Carpets.

Rugs and carpets can be darned to manifest advantage.

Lay a bit of stout woolen cloth upon the wrong side of a rug, fasten down the frayed edges with casual stitches here and there, then darn thickly back and forth, using the largest size embroidery needles and either wool, silk or flax of a harmonious color.

Darn the threadbare spots in the carpet on the floor with ravelings in a fine upholsterer's needle.

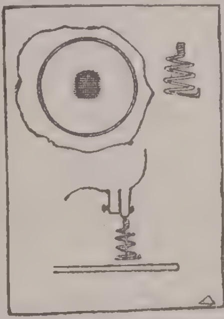
If there are any moth eaten spots, match the colors as nearly as possible in fine soft wool, cut into short lengths and sew the tufts to the carpet with fine twist or flax, drawing the stitches so tight that the wool stands up on either side.

When the spot is well covered with the tufting trim it level with very sharp shears.

Darning by Machine.

Among the latest improved household helps is a darning needle attachment which fits any sewing machine. It does the work in a remarkably neat and thorough fashion in a wonderfully short space of time. A hole in a garment which would require a half hour's time by hand work may be done in two minutes.

In attaching the darner the presser foot of the machine is removed and the article to be darned is stretched between two hoops, similar to embroidery hoops. It is especially valuable for darning lace curtains and table linen, as well as stockings, undergarments, etc. Darning can also be accomplished by those with poor eyesight, as there is nothing complicated about the little apparatus, and one threading of the needle enables one to darn continuously.—Philadelphia Record.



DARNING ATTACHMENT.

Hint For Wash Day.

On cold days, when the hands soon become numb hanging up the clothes, this plan for keeping the hands warm will be found to help greatly. Place the clothespins in the oven for a few minutes so that they will become thoroughly heated, and when you are ready to hang up the clothes put the pins in a bag and hang the bag around the waist. The warm pins will keep the hands from becoming as cold as formerly. Another plan is to have the bluing water warm, so that the clothes themselves will not be so cold. Anything that promotes physical comfort of this kind is well worth the time and effort.

Lyonnaise Tripe.

Cook honeycomb tripe in boiling water until tender, drain and cut into narrow strips about two inches long. Lay them on a plate in the oven to draw out the moisture. Cook a level tablespoonful of minced onion in a rounding tablespoonful of butter for five minutes, then turn in one heaping cup of the tripe strips and cook another five minutes. Dust with salt and pepper, stir, lay on a serving dish and sprinkle with a little finely minced parsley.

Egg Sandwiches.

Cook three eggs for twenty minutes in boiling water, then drop into cold water. When cold take off the shells and rub to a paste in a deep bowl with a wooden spoon, adding a rounding tablespoonful of butter and three teaspoonfuls of cream. Season with salt and pepper to the taste and when smooth spread between thin slices of buttered bread. Whole wheat or rye bread are preferred to the plain white bread.

Pictures.

They told us that the pretty ferns
And blue eyed grasses tall
Were dreaming all the winter through
Beside the meadow wall.

They must be walking in their sleep,
For in their gowns of white
Jack Frost upon the window pane
Has painted them tonight.
—Youth's Companion.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Subway Game.

The subway game is fun at a party where there are older boys and girls, and it is easy to play. Prepare slips of paper with questions written on them, questions that would start a conversation, like "What is your favorite book?" "Do you want to [illegible]?" "Where would you like to travel?" etc. Arrange the chairs in two lines by twos, leaving an aisle between the two rows, so that it is like a train, with double seats on each side of the aisle. Then the girls are told to enter and take the outside seats farthest from the aisle and the boys take the other seats. The questions are distributed, and the players are allowed three minutes' conversation on the subject mentioned on the paper. As usually happens in real subways, they have to leave in the middle of their talk, for the "conductor" informs them that time is up, and all the men move forward one place, while the girls hand their questions to the girls in back. Thus every one has a new partner and a new question at every change. This is a very good game for shy people who perhaps know how to talk very well if they can only begin. It is well to have the questions very varied, so that the frivolous, the learned, the travelers and the stay at homes may all have their turns.

Game of Farmyard.

If among your circle there is one person who makes himself extremely objectionable from his forwardness or bumptiousness, this is an excellent game for putting him in his right place.

The master of the ceremonies states that the present company must all imagine themselves to be the denizens of a farmyard. He says that he will whisper to each in turn the particular animal he wishes them to imitate. Then at a given signal—when he drops his handkerchief—they must all imitate together the noise of the animal they are supposed to be.

He then whispers to each in turn apparently the name of the animal they are to represent. In reality what he really whispers is, "Remain perfectly silent." When he comes to his real victim, however, he whispers, "The donkey; bray as loud as you can!"

The youth simpers and promises himself to attract general attention from the realism of his performance. The master of the ceremonies then cries out, "All ready; now then!" Every one remains perfectly silent except the bumptious youth, who covers himself with confusion and ridicule by the loudness of his solo.

Old Style Printing.

You all know, of course, that printers make the lines of type in newspapers and in books of equal length by means of metal "spaces" of varying degrees of thickness, says the Chicago News. This is what is technically called "justifying."

But you do not know, perhaps, that spaces were unknown in the early days of printing and that the printers were in the habit of shortening or lengthening words at pleasure to make the lines even.

An illustration of this arbitrary treatment of words may be found in an old black letter Bible, where the word "hot" is spelled "whot," "hote" and "hot," according to the space to be filled to even out the line. In the same book the words "we" and "ye" are spelled with a single "e," and a few lines lower on the page they are spelled "wee" and "yee." In another place the printer did not have room enough for the two words "shall be," and he made them "shalbe."

A Test of Culture.

Here is what a recognized authority says on the subject: "In spoken language pronunciation is the most striking element, and thus it happens that it is more than any other one thing the most obvious test of general culture. Even in a speaker of recognized ability his mispronunciations fall harshly upon the ear and cause the hearer to suspect that his early or not later education has been wanting in polish or that he has not been accustomed to the society of refined and cultivated people." Surely this writer does not overstate the case or exaggerate in any way the importance of correct pronunciation.

Polite Dogs.

A school for house dogs has been opened in Paris. The object of the school is to teach the dogs politeness. They are trained to welcome visitors by jumping up, wagging the tail and giving a low bark. When the visitor leaves the dog is taught to accompany him to the door, constantly wagging his tail and bowing his farewell by bending his head to the floor. He is also taught to pick up a handkerchief, glove or fan that has been dropped and return it to the owner.

Lizards' Tails.

Certain lizards are remarkable for the fragility of their tails. The diamond tailed gecko frequently owes its life to the ease with which its tail may be snapped off. This reptile, which will perch upon a rock, head downward, is liable to be preyed upon by hawks. One of these birds will swoop down upon a lizard and seize it by the tail. The brittle tail snaps off, and the reptile wiggles off and grows another.

A Letter Puzzle.

What word containing four letters can be expressed by two?

1. What Solomon was?
2. A prophet?
3. Repose and comfort?

Answers—1. Wise (y y). 2. Seer (c r). 3. Ease (e e).

REGULATING THE COOK

The Housewife's Experience and its Abrupt Ending

"Maggie," said Mrs. Hartford sharply, "this meat is not properly cooked. My husband says it is not fit for a pig."

"But, Mrs Hartford"—

"Now, do not answer back, Maggie. I do not care to argue with you. I went to the butcher myself yesterday and bought the steak, so I know it is all right."

"If you"

"Do not be impudent with me. I have warned you several times about trying to correct me. You have made a dismal failure of today's dinner. Mr. Hartford is thoroughly disgusted with your cooking and just left for the cafe to get something to quiet his appetite."

By this time poor Maggie was in tears.

"There is no use crying about it," continued Mrs. Hartford without the least display of sympathy. "I have remonstrated with you about your neglect of duty long enough. Remember, now, if this occurs again I shall certainly discharge you without a moment's notice."

But Mrs. Hartford awoke with a sudden start and, shaking her husband violently, said:

"George, I have just had the most impossible dream."—St. Louis Republic.

National Characteristics.

Why is it that we associate the Germans with qualities of soberness and stolidity, while we are quite ready to expect frivolity and flightiness from the French? I do not know, for in all matters of criticism the French are pre-eminently sane, while no theory is too fantastic to make the reputation of a professor in Germany.—London Saturday Review.

The Electoral College.

It would be very difficult to say what is the present purpose or function of the electoral college, since it is in no sense electoral. The college was intended by the framers of the constitution to elect the president without any regard to the popular vote. It was the intent originally to let the people pick out a certain number of men (the electoral college), and those men were to choose the president. But such idea has long been merely a governmental fiction, and the college is merely a "Me too" to the November vote preceding.—New York American.

A Delicate Dismissal.

"A certain theatrical manager," said an actor, "has to refuse many applications for free tickets, but his refusals are put delicately. They are as delicate as the young husband's dismissal of his wife's mother. This lady had been visiting at the man's house steadily for seven months. On toward Christmas time she said to him:

"'John, I am going to have my photograph taken as a Christmas gift for you and Minnie. What dress do you prefer me in?'

"'Your traveling gown, dear mother,' the son-in-law replied."

One of the most important, if not the most important, matter to come before the Oregon and Washington legislatures before the adjournment of the present sessions will be in relation to the regulation of the salmon fisheries, especially of the Columbia river. The fisheries are among the leading industries of the two states as they furnish employment to thousands of people and distribute hundreds of thousands of dollars among the residents of these state annually. For that reason the legislators should be carefully in enacting laws to govern this industry and should see that laws are passed which will tend to preserve the fisheries and not permit the ruining of the industry to fill the coffers of a few nabobs. As was to be expected bills have been prepared to provide for a Sunday closing law, as a panacea for all the evils, which confront the fisheries, and to do away with the regulations which we now have. A Sunday closing law would undoubtedly be a good thing, provided other restrictions go with it, but a close law by itself is a mere farce, as it merely permits more fish to reach the leads to the wheels in the upper river where they are held until the wheels start running when they are slaughtered by the thousands. The one way to build up the fisheries on the Columbia river is the way it was done on the Sacramento and the way it is beingdone at Nushagak river in Alaska, and that is to stop all fishing above tide water. Do this, then enforce your Sunday closing law and restrict the size of mesh on all classes of gear and you will be doing something to preserve the industry. Otherwise, it will be only a question of a very few years, when the fisheries will be a thing of the past. The people of the state of Oregon decreed by a majority of over 26,000 that fishing in the narrows of the upper river shall cease. The Oregon legislature will make a grave mistake if it attempts to repeal that law and the Washington legislature should pass one to conform with it.

Engineer Lockwood of the Port of Portland, who was in Astoria a few days ago, is quoted by the Portland papers as saying that the channel at the mouth of the river now has 27 feet at low tide, that within a few weeks the channel will be 30 feet deep and that vessels drawing 24 and 25 feet are crossing in and out at all stages of water. It is, indeed, surprising to learn that a man holding so responsible a position as Mr. Lockwood holds and one who has the ability which Mr. Lockwood is supposed to have should make any such ridiculous statements. Even grant for the sake of argument that his assertion of 27 feet of water at low tide is true, then his further statement that a vessel drawing 25 feet of water can cross in or out at any stage of the tide is silly, as it would be impossible. Such statements do not fool shipowners nor any one else who is posted on the handling of vessels in water where there is always an ocean swell. The true fact of the matter is that while the channel across the bar may be slightly better than it was a year ago, the depth of water at the shallow points is not over 22 feet and while if a dredge was put at work for a few months, 30 feet and more could easily be secured, the fact remains that the publishing of false reports about the deepening of the channel will never improve conditions nor will it mislead the owners of vessels. Perhaps the officers of the Port of Portland are not aware that while all the larger ocean craft are taken out at the top of high water, scarcely one of them crosses the bar without striking one or more times. The owners of the vessels know this as it is reported direct to them and if the port officials do not, would it no be well for them to make a few inquiries before they rush into print with their theories?

CONDITIONS IN CUBA

At the end of American provisional government the Cuban people have much to be thankful for at the hands of the stranger. That is to say, from the point of view held here grave evils have been done away with because they were intolerable to Americans. The curses of brigandage and yellow fever have been virtually wiped out. This could have been done before, but the Americans did it. Progress there was handicapped by execrable roads, and under American influence the mileage of good roads has been about doubled.

But there is another and a darker side to the picture, one for which this country is in no sense responsible. Economic conditions are almost as unpromising as they were under Spanish rule. A large element of the population goes roaming from place to place, living when they settle down as squatters, much like the Indians before they were put upon reservations or the emancipated negroes at the close of the civil war. Industrial employment it fitful, and there are long periods of idleness. The laborers should be tied to the land near the industrial plants. Then there need be no incentive to roam or to waste leisure at the mills in gaming and dissipation.

It is to be hoped that Judge Taft's attempt to "preach down the heart" of Uncle Sam's daughters is merely a lean "over backward in order to stand up straight." Washington has sent out endless sermons urging all good Americans to "increase and multiply." No doubt the White House is indirectly responsible for these anti-bachelorhood crusades which bring malefactors under the spot light. Coming as an antithesis to much preaching up of matrimony, and all that, the president elect's advice to girls to cease thinking "that unless they are married their lives are not a success" is a note of sanity.

But the administration, whether coming or going, needn't worry. Population is still regulated "by the price of corn," and, while Cupid may smile the more over every anti-bachelor law married to the statutes, lack of smiles has not so far caused the little god's face to resemble a funeral procession. Sometimes, alas, the chilled heart is born with men and women. Some acquire the chilled heart, and some have it thrust upon them. In the present state of science nothing can be done about the first class. The second class may be rounded up by anti-bachelor and anti-spinster laws perhaps, and the existence of many of the third class would tend to show that there is room here right now for one more "society for the prevention of cruelty."

The Cubans are harvesting the biggest sugar crop ever raised on the island, and the people do rule. If the Pearl of the Antilles can't prosper after that send-off, Cuba libre is an iridescent dream.

If the English join heartily in the coming centenary celebration of Perry's victory over them on Lake Erie, no further evidence will be needed that they, too, believe "blood is thicker than water."

"Petty local Hall of Fame" is the New York Herald's best word for that imaginary Valhalla which has no open door for one Edgar Allan Poe.

Mrs. E. H. Harris gave a dinner party last evening. The guests were delighted with the coffee. Mrs. Harris always uses Folger's Golden Gate whole roast, and grinds it herself, not too fine, pulverized coffee is bitter.

LOUR PRICES ADVANCE AGAIN

cord Quotations on Wheat Cause Breadstuffs to Rise

eattle, Feb. 11—Millers have ad- eed the price of flour again. Pat- flour will be 20 cents per barrel her. The advance on export grades amount to 10 cents per barrel. new list will make patents $5.40 export flour $4. These, according millers, are the highest prices ever ed for flour in the northwest. ces were put up 20 cents per barrel ut a month ago, owing, it was said, he sharp advance in wheat at that e. Since the last advance in flour, ever, wheat, particularly No. 1 ling bluestem, from which the pat- flours are manufactured, has ad- ced about 8 cents per bushel. Mill- have withdrawn standing quota- s for bluestem wheat, as very little eft in first hands. As high as $1.14 been offered for wheat delivered on get sound, and a Portland miller is orted to have paid $1.15. Even club eat was sold yesterday as high as $1 "There are ten buyers four every hel of No. 1 milling bluestem eat," said a prominent miller yes- day.

So scarce has bluestem wheat become t in many instances millers are nding a small qauntity of No. 1 club h their bluestem.

The demand for flour is fair. The ental market is in better shape than has been for months, and the high ces here are not taken seriously by yers in the far east. Were it not the fact that Australian flour is atively about as high as flour in the ited States, millers here say they uld be unable to sell flour at all. Seattle millers are confident that con- ss will not reimpose a duty on flour pments between the United States the Philippines. The present edule, which has been in effect rly ten years, expires April 1. llers here say there is practically opposition to free flour with the ands from flour men in this country, that the residents in the islands de- free trade. President-elect Taft is in favor of free flour to the Philip- es. The only opposition before the ys and amends committe comes, ac- ding to local flour men, principally m Astralian millers, who in the past e held almost a monopoly of the r business with the islands.

THREE SALARY BILLS VETOED

All Relating to Clatsop County Officers

Salem, Feb. 11—Governor Chamberlain has vetoed three more salary raising bills, but owing to the normal school and the insurance bill fights the house did not have time to override them during the morning session.

One of the bills raised the salary of the school superintendent of Clatsop county, another the salary of the treasurer of Clatsop county, and the third the salary of the assessor of Clatsop county.

H. B. 119, Leinenweber, authorizing a deputy Assessor for Clatsop County was passed over the veto of the governor with only six negative votes.

H. B. 50, increasing the salary of the county treasurer of Clatsop county, was passed over the veto with four negative votes.

H. B. 49, McCue—Increasing the salary of the school superintendent of Clatsop county, was passed over the governor's veto with three negative votes.

MADE AND LOST FOUR FORTUNES

Aged Man then Dies in Poverty

Bellingham., Wash., Feb. 11—Augustus Griffen, four times a millionare and four times a bankrupt, a pioneer of Whatcom county, here yesterday, aged 87 years. Griffen made a fortune in the early '50s in San Francisco and was rated as a millionaire. Taking his wealth to Chicago he erected the first of the great elevator systems of that city and was wiped out in the great fire of 1871. He turned his attention to the oil business in Western Pennsylvania, and in 1878 was one of Pittsburg's big oil magnates. Competition with the Rockefellers later forced him into bankruptcy and he came west in 1885, securing 400 acres of land on which Bellingham now stands. He also founded the city of Ferndale, this county. The panic of 1894 again wiped him out and he died today in comparative poverty.

LOGGING ROAD TO BE EXTENDED

Oregon Midland Co. Signs Freight Contracts

Portland, Feb. 11—Contracts are said to have been signed by the Oregon Midland, projected to build from Gaston, on the Southern Pacific, to Tillamook, to haul logs from points north of the Midland's power plant at Haines by next October To do this, construction work on the line west from Gaston would have to begin within the next few weeks.

It is believed that the owners of timber land west of Gaston are interested in the proposed line and have put up enough capital to construct at least a logging railway from the Southern Pacific at Gaston to the mountains. The line projected would go under the mountains—two tunnels being required to get through the divide—and follow the Trask river down to Tillamook.

The route is considerably shorter than that of the Pacific Railway & Navigation company's road to Tillamook, now under construction, and its engineers claim the grade will be not more than 1 per cent, with what is practically a water grade from the headwaters on the Trask river.

This same route was surveyed at the time the Lytle road was projected, but was abandoned at that time because of the cost of tunneling the mountains and the difficulties connected with following the Trask river to the sea.

The Midland is generally regarded by railroad men as being a logging proposition without any chance of being extended throught to Tillamook for many years to come. It is projected by Miller Murdoch, R. A. Caples, J. P. Van Orsdel, and Com Conry.

"Our right of way man has not reported as yet." said Mr. Murdoch today, "but we hope to get started on the actual construction out of a point near Gaston as soon as the weather becomes good enough."

NEW SAWMILL FOR TACOMA

North Shore Company will Rebuild Its Plant

Tacoma, Feb. 11—Providing a way can be obtained through which its logs can be brought from the waters of the Sound to its mill site in the gulch at North Alder street, just beyond Old Town, the North Shore Lumber company will at once commence the rebuilding of the big lumber plant which burned down a year or more ago. The plant will have a capacity of about 100,000 feet a day and will be thoroly modern and up to date in every respect and will employ about 100 men, according to a statement made by E. Walker Foster of the North Shore company and Foster Lumber company.

In the federal court recently the Northern Pacific Railway company condemned part of the mill site for the road's new water grade line out of Tacoma taking a strip which shut out the mill site entirely from the water, thus making the ground remaining to the North Shore company practically useless as a mill site. The railway was obliged to pay $99,000 for the strip of land it condemned and refuses to consider any plan of the mill site owners which look to the rehabilitating of the plant.

There is still one avenue left open by which the mill company can gain access to the water front, and this is on Alder street, which runs down over the bluff to the water. Alder street has never been opened or vacated and if a permit can be secured by the company from the city for a sluiceway over the street it can still get logs in from the water and will be able to again do business.

At the council meeting last week a franchise for this purpose was asked for, but City Attorney T. L. Stiles told the franchise committee yesterday it had no power to grant a franchise to a private corporation. He said, however, that a permit could be issued for a time, until further action could be taken by the council.

As most of the councilmen seem to be in favor of this and say they desire to see the mill rebuilt, such a permit will probably be granted tonight The Northern Pacific must itself have a franchise over Alder street before it can build its Point Defiance line.

"As soon as the permit is granted by the council for a sluiceway over Alder street, we will commence work on the erection of the big sawmill and we intend to build and equip at thoroly modern plant on the site,' said Mr. Foster.

RISDON WORKS GETS CONTRACT

For Repairing the Steamer Admiral Sampson

San Francisco, Feb. 11 Despite the fact that the Risdon Iron works put in the second bid for the repair job to the second bid for the repair job to the Alaska-Pacific steamship company's steamer Admiral Sampson, that company has been awarded the contract, it being stated that other conditions in the company's bid were more favorable for the owners. The Risdon company bid $64,850, as compared with [illegible] bid by the Moore & Scott Iron works. The next lowest bid was that of the Moran company of Seattle, which was about $10,000, above the bid of the Risdon Iron works.

The Sampson is already at the yards, work on her having commenced this morning.

The steam schooner Daisy reached port today from Willapa Harbor in tow of the tug Hercules. On the voyage down the coast the Daisy lost half of her propeller and coming down in tow lost the other half.

PROTECTION OF SAILORS

Measure Submitted to Washington Legislature

Olympia, Feb. 11—Ole Hanson will introduce a bill in the house authorizing the governor to appoint a commission of three men to license sailors' boarding houses.

The bill, approved by foreign consuls of the northwest in a meeting at Seattle recently, is for the purposes of protecting sailors against fraud and deciet by owners of sailors hotels.

The bill provides that any person who charges more than a fee of $10 for each sailor furnished a master of a sea-going vessel shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be liable to fine of $500 or imprisonment in a county jail for 90 days. Keepers of sailors' boarding houses are required to pay a yearly license fee of $25 per year. Their permit for doing business may be revoked at any time for cause. Runners and solicitors for sailors,' boarding houses must wear a badge prominently displayed showing their employer's name and the place where his hotel is situated.

The bill is to be presented at the instance of the foreign consuls of the northwest," said Mr. Hanson.

"HANFORD IN COMEDY"

Charles B. Hanford's third appearance in Astoria will afford an opportunity to see him in comedy, two previous engagements being of the tragic order. Two years ago he gave us Julius Caesar and last year Antony and Cleopatra both fine big productions. This year it is promised that The Taming of the Shrew will be up to the same high standard of the previous presentations. Mr Hanford has given nearly nine hundred performances of "Petruchi" in the Taming of the Shrew during the past eight years and by many of the ablest critics it is conceded to be his best characterization.

A notable feature of this year's performance will be the presenation of a one act play called "The Old Guard" a story of Waterloo which preceeds The Taming of the Shrwe and in which Mr. Hanford appares as "Haverstock" one of Napoleons old guards. In this play the late Henry Irving was often seen with distingiushed success.

Mr. Hanford's engagement promises to be one of the real events of this theatre season and he will unquestionably play to a capacity audience at the Astoria theatre on the night of Wednesday Feb. 17th.

HAIR trouble like many other diseases, have been wron diagnosed and altogether mis- unders it itself is not the thing to treated on that it is simply a product pendent upon its action n which the hair is pro- grown, and it alone should attention if results are to be expected would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

l hair is caused by the scalp drying up, supply of moisture or nutriment; when occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nent leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

An order was made in the probate court today setting the petition of the administrator of the estate of Frank Carr deceased, to sell real property belonging to the estate for hearing on March 15.

The hydrographic office announces that Captain Charles Austin of the American steamship Minnesota reports righting on Feb. 4 in latitude 48:53 north, longitude 125:56 west, a root of a tree, several logs and a pile floating end up.

O. R. Ball, manager of the American Type Founders Co. of Portland and one of the progressive citizens of the metropolis, arrived in the city today accompanied by Mrs. Ball. Before returning Mr. and Mrs. Ball will spend a few days on the west side.

Thomas Wilder Stanfield, the infant son of Captain and Mrs. T. E. Stanfield, and a grand son of Captain and Mrs. E. P. Parker, died on Wednesday evening after a life of a few days. The announcement of the funeral will be made later.

Ed. Joseph, manager of the Klevenhausen cold storage plant at Altoona took a party of friends up to the plant this afternoon on his launch, the Columbia, on a pleasure trip. The party consisted of Chas. L. Houston, Chris. Schmidt, Norris Staples and Giles B. Johnson.

Payments of taxes are being made a little more rapidly during the past day or so, but there is no rush at the sheriff's office yet. During yesterday the sum of $3295.14 was collected and $98.78 in rebates was allowed, making a total of $3393.92 that the roll was reduced.

The report of the condition of the Scandinavian-American Savings bank is published in another column and shows a creditable increase in business since its last report. The bank is little more than a year old and already caries deposits aggregating about $115,000.

A petition was filed in the city auditor's office this morning by the Astoria Amatueur Athletic Association, asking that an electric light be established at the corner of Eleventh and Exchange streets in fron of that association hall. The petition will be submitted to the council at its meeting on Monday evening.

Tomorrow evening the members of the Warrenton volunter fire company number one, will give a masquerade ball at Warrenton. A large crowd is expected from Astoria. The lauenh Teddy Roosevelt will leave Ross Higgins wharf at 7:45 p. m. to take all who desire to attend. The Pacific orchestra will supply the music.

The ways and means committee of the council and the city attorney will meet probably this evening to consider the ordinance granting the Oregon Coast Railway Company a franchise for an electric car line over certain streets in the city. The committee will prepare its report for submission to the council, so that the ordinance can be passed at the meeting to be held next Monday evening.

Captain Chas R Spencer arrived in the city today in the interest of re establishing the Spencer Line between Astoria and Portland Captain Spencer states that if sufficient business is guaranteed by the merchants the steamer will resume her regular trips as heretofore With the approach of spring and the consequent summer tourist buisness near at hand, there is a strong possiblity of the steamer being placed on the run

Captain Harper, chief officer of the British steamship Kumeric, now in Seattle, has arrived to assume command of the British steamship Boveric of the same line. He is succeeding Captain Mathie, who has been given command of the Kumeric. The Boveric has been in the river for more than a week loading lumber for the Far east. The craft is expected to get away in about a week. She will take out something like 2,800,000 feet of fir.

Representative McCue's bill authorizing the counties to levy a special tax for advertising and other general boosting purposes has passed the senate with several amendments. The amended bill reduces the tax levy from one mill to one half of one mill and requires 20 per cent instead of 10 per cent of the voters to petition the county court before the question of levying the special tax may be submitted to the voters.

Eniard Poukula, a 17 year old boy, was arrested on Wednesday evening on a charge of being drunk and the arresting officer says that he was in a pitable condition. He has informed the police of the saloon where he procured the liquor and the arrest of the proprietor is to be expected as there is corrobrative evidence of his statement. Several cases of this character have happened during the past few months and the Retail Liquor Dealers Association has promised to assist in a prosecution if such evidence could be produced.

At the regular weekly drill of the local military company last evening Lieutenant Cullen of Fort Stevens delivered an instructive lecture on the subject of "Projecties," explaning in detail the mechanism of all classes of shells and the mode of handling them. These weekly lectures by Mr. Cullen are proving a source of great benefit of the members of the company and they will probably be continued for some weeks. Captain Abercrombie announced today that if the pleasant weather continues until Sunday, the company will be assembled at that time for a practice march.

There are 146 civil cases on the docket for the session of the circuit court which will be convened on next Monday. Among the criminal cases to come up will be those against the men indicted at the last term of court for selling liquor without a license and also selling liquor in the "dry" precincts. There are a number of cases pending against fishermen for violating the fish law which prohibited fishing in the chanels or below Smith's point but these will probably never be brought to trial. As there will be a grand jury at this coming session, the rumor is current that complaints will be presented to it alleging violations of the Sunday closing law.

Street Superintendent Kearney began work today on the construction of a box drain on Thirty-fifth street from Irving avenue, a distance of about 600 feet, to a connection with the existing drain. It is expected this drain will carry off much of the surplus water that does a great amount of damage to property in that section. During yesterday the foundation of the street at the crossing of Ninth and Astor street was weakened by the posts being knocked down by logs and this damage was repaired today. A small land slide in Uniontown has broken the foundation of the roadway at the entrance to the Warren Packing Company's cold storage plant and the street superintendent has a force of men at work repairing the damage.

The British ship Glenalvon arrived last evening 141, days from Antwerp with a cargo of 16,934 casks of cement consigned to W. R. Grace & Co. Captain King reports an uneventful but slow trip. Fine weather was encountered off the Horn and in fact during the entire voyage excepting for a few days in the north Atlantic and off the Oregon coast. The Glenalvon was outside for 12 days during the recent gales and at one time was driven as far north as Destruction island. Only three vessels were spoken since leaving Antwerp. Two of them in the Atlantic and one, a schooner, off Valparaiso. Captain King has been here several times before and today was renewing acquaintances among his numerous friends.

Warrants were issued this afternoon for the arrest of T. Pittari, [illegible] Vahleing and Charles Neie for selling liquor to minors. Their trials will be held in the police court tomorrow afternoon.

The steamer Bowdoin cleard at the custom house today for San Pedro with a cargo of 753,446 feet of lumber, loaded at Stella. The steamer F. D. Inman cleared yesterday for San Francisco with a cargo of 150,000 feet of lumber, loaded at Knappton.

The regular monthly meeting of the Astoria water commission will be held tomorrow evening and at that time it is expected the appointment of a clerk and inspector will be made. Quite a number of applications for each of these positions have already been filed with the commission.

John Stephensen's saloon on Astor street was entered by burglars last night and $47.20 in cash stolen. Entrance was effected thru a window in the beer cellar. The robbery was evidently by some one familiar with the place as the money was taken from a drawer in which it had been secreted.

The financal statement showing the condition of the Astoria Savings Bank is published today and shows a creditable increase in the amount of business transacted since issuing its last statement. This bank carries over a half million dollars in deposits while its surplus and undivided profits amount to $127,563.33.

A suggestion has been made that will probably be taken up by the interested property owners with a view of checking the sliding ground in the hill section between Eighteenth street and the east Shively line. That district is heavily wooded and for that reason it is difficulty to trace the water, which causes the slides, to its source and it is also intended that the great weight increases the danger from the slides. The plan a suggested is to request the council to declare the timber and underbrush in that section a public nuisance and a menace to property and to order it removed by letting a contract for the work and assessing the cost to the property within the district. As there is a large amount of timber which is suitable for cord wood the assertion is made that it would pay the cost of the improvement. The plan is now being considred and probably the property owners will submit a petition to the council within a few weeks.

There are not many gillnetters, who have been keeping their web in the water but those who have had the courage to do so during the recent bad weather have had excellent luck for this time of the year. The steelheads and Chinooks are of the finest quality, coming into the cold fresh water of the river from the ocean. For this reason they are as firm and as full of oil as when caught on the bar. The demand for them is greater than the supply but the prices paid the fishermen are only fair considering the conditions under which they have been working. They receive at present 8 cents per pound for Chinooks and 5 cents per pound for steelheads. Those who are fortunate to receive them say that a kit of salmon bellies, put up at this time of they year has no resemblance to the same article put up at the end of the fishing season.

This afternoon deeds for rights-of-way for the proposed electric road to Seaside were received from Casper and Marie Drilling and from J. J. Kenney and associates thru their property. The directors of the Oregon Coast Railway Company held a meeting last evening and decided that as it is desired to have everything in readiness to begin construction work on the line as soon as the weather conditions will permit, not to delay matters any longer waiting for property owners to bring in their deeds for rights-of-way and the company's attorney was accordingly instructed to bring condemnation suits against all those whose deeds have not been placed in escrow. The complaints in the suits are now being prepared and will be filed within the coming few days so that the cases can be called for a trial during the coming session of the circuit court.

County Surveyor Parker and the viewers appointed by the court started a few days ago to resume work on laying out the route for the proposed road from Necanicum to the Tillamook county line. They found, however, that there were several inches of snow in that section and the survey had to be postponed. It will be completed as soon as the weather conditions will permit. While the court is arranging the preliminaries in connection with this proposed road, it is doubtful if any work on construction will be done this summer on account of the district thru which it runs having made no special tax levy. As the district has now been divided, a special levy is certain to be made there next year so that contracts on construction can be awarded.

WHEAT RAISERS OF INLAND EMPIRE FAVOR ASTORIA FOR SHIPPING

Spokane Farmers Uuion Adopt Resolution Urging Common Point Rates on Grain to Mouth of Columbia River

John H. Whyte of the chamber of commerce returned to the city on last night's train from the Spokane convention of the Farmers' Union representing all of the wheat states of the northwest.

A resolution was unanimously passed by the convention requesting all of the railroads interested to grant the common point rate for Astoria. Not only was it passed unanimously but with a great show of enthusiasm, the demonstration being such as the waving of hats and loud shouting for Astoria.

The resolution which was passed unanimously and which is attested by the officers of the association reads as follows:

"Resolved, that we, the Farmers' Union of the states of Washington, Oregon and Idaho, assembled in Spokane, this 9th day of February, 1909, representing 15,000 farmers in the wheat country of the northwest, and controlling twenty-five million bushels of wheat absolutely, do unanimously petition all of the railroads operating in said wheat country to grant a rate of freight on wheat and other grains to Astoria and the mouth of the Columbia river common with the rate to Puget sound.

"And it is further resolved that this organization gives its full and hearty cooperation to all efforts directed to this end."

The Spokesman-Review, the leading Spokane paper of issue, Wednesday morning, February 10th in its first column, first page article, after making it plain that Astoria had entirely captured the Farmers convention turning all of the delegates into rooters for Astoria, says: "It is asserted by officers of the union that no attempt will be made to fix an arbitrary price, but that the effort will be to compel buyers to meet in the open market to insure the growers highest prices. No action was taken in regard to establishing warehouses at any coast city through which the growers can sell to buyers, altho the matter was referred to the state executive board. No direct response was made to the appeals of the chambers of commerce. A resolution was passed petitioning the railroads to grant a rate of freight on wheat and other grains to Astoria and the mouth of the Columbia river common with the rate to Puget sound, and it is further resolved that the Farmers' Union gives its full and hearty cooperation in all efforts directed to this end."

MEMORIAL HALL FOR LINCOLN

Corner Stone of Structure Laid by Roosevelt

Hodgeville, Ky., Feb. 12—Americans to the number of several thousand today dedicated the little cabin in which liberty wrought her last great miracle. Those present included the head of the nation, the governor of Lincoln's native state and host of other prominent people and friends in his private life. The tent, which served as an auditorium, was roped off from the crowd that gathered around the hallowed spot In the center, beside the platform for the speakers and the machinery for the cornerstone laying, was the cabinet itself. its logs worn smooth by elements. Around the spot gathered farmers boys and grizzled old men, who have known the cabin since childhood. Hodgeville had with some trepidition taken the temporary position as the capital of the world. Five special trains from Louisville crowded with people kept the air vibrating with enthusiasm and at noon the president's train arrived, seeming to release the immense wave of pent up enthusiasm. The president, his wife and daughter and Secretary Loeb entered two closed carriages and with a band and Company "F" of the First Kentucky regiment headed the parade that moved onto the cabin site. Arriving at the scene, the president and other distinguished guests were escorted to places of honor. Following a very impressive invocation, Former Governor Folk of Missouri, who is president of the Lincoln Memorial Association, delivered an address telling of the purpose of the association.

Governor Folk was followed by Roosevelt, who laid the corner stone, putting into its receptacle appropriate papers which were sealed by Nicholas Koenegstien of Hodgenville, and the stone was raised to its place.

The president yielded to Governor Wilson, who spoke on behalf of Kentucky for her greatest son.

General Grant Wilson for the federal army and General Luke E. Wright for the Confederate army were then heard. The president and other dignitaries boarded the train at2:30, leaving the people to return to Louisville and ceremonies, until William H. Taft in April dedicates the completed memorial hall, were ended.

PRESIDENT DISTRUSTS JAPS

Such is Statement Made by Congressman McKinley

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 12—In an address before the Lincoln Club last night Congressman McKinley of California quoted President Roosevelt as being distrustful of the Japanese. He said the president told the California congressmen that we must preserve our lands for the whiteman, and that he was with us in our fight to bar Asiatic labor, but said the president; "Japan is a powerful nation and we don't know what attitude her statesmen will assume toward us.' The president paid a tribute to the attitude of England and Germany under similar circumstances and said, "but we cannot tell what this new nation will do.

You must be patient and I will endeavor to negotiate, a treaty with Japan, under which Japan will herself hold back her people from our continent.'

RESIST CLAIM FOR SALVAGE

Case Liable to Result in Some Litigation

Port Townsend Feb. 12—For the purpose of attempting to gather testimony supporting an effort to invalidate a claim of $25,000 by the Pacific Coast Steamship Company against the owners of the Norwegian steamer Cecil, Capt. Oscar Klocker, vice consul for Norway and representative of Det Norske Veritas is conducting an examination in Tacoma today. From the evidence obtained a protest will be made against any attempt to collect the amount claimed for salvage and services rendered in towing the steamship off the southern extremity of Margarita island, off Lower California.

The arrival of the Cecil at Tacoma a few days ago brought news that in grounding, January 12, the vessel lay in a dangerous position when relieved by the Pacific Coast Company's steamer Curacoa. Before aid was given Capt. Jacob Olsen, master of the Cecil, was compelled to sign a contract awarding the Curacao $25,000 for for her services.

The present action of the representative of the Norwegian government and the association with which the steamer was insured, is to substantiate a complaint by Capt. Olson that the sum demanded for relief was far in excess of a reasonable or fair amount that such was obtained by duress, and under conditions not justified by usual marine procedure and custom.

The sum involved and the unusual contention made by Capt. Olson gives much intertest to the case. Capt. Klocker is accompanied by a secretary, whose services will be required to transcribe and transmit the testimony to the Norwegian government.

Sickness and the fact that he was almost without funds are believed to have prompted the deed. Henderson spent all but 15 cents of a cash balance of 75 cents for the poison and for a room.

TO ABOLISH DEATH PENALTY

Taw Being Talked of In Russia

St. Petersburg, Feb. 12—The bill providing for the abolition of the death penalty in Russia which came up for discussion today has been indefinitely tabled. While the debate was still in progress, President Khomyakoff received a petition asking him to intercede for 15 men condemned to death for attempting to break from jail at Irkutsk, and he addressed a personal letter to Premire Stolypin on the subject.

Traveling Bill.

They were on their honeymoon and were climbing the Schnupfelgapfenspitzen peak, and she stood above him some twenty feet.

"What, ho!" he gasped. "What do you see?"

"Far, far below," she cried, "I see a long white streak stretching like a paper ribbon back almost to our hotel."

"Ha, ha!" he ejaculated. "I'll bet it's that blessed bill overtaking us."

And they proceeded onward and upward.—Tit-Bits.

Her Right?

"James," said the minister's wife, "why do you always kiss the bride after you have performed the marriage ceremony?"

"Why, my dear, it is a procedure which is sanctioned by custom and which would be conspicuous were it omitted."

"Well, hereafter I think I shall be present, and when you kiss the bride I shall kiss the groom."—Chicago Post.

LYNCH LAW IN MISSISSIPPI

Houston, Miss., Feb. 12—Roby Bagkin, murderer of Rev. W. T. Hudson, was lynched by a mob here this afternoon. A crowd of over 300 determined citizens took the negro from the jail and hanged him to a tree. Not a shot was fired, and the whole proceeding was conducted quietly.

Sheriff Deane, of Okolona arrived just as the negro breathed his last, and made a strong protest that he had not been treated right. Leaders of the mob said they had not been given a speedy trial of the negro as promised, and that they could not be blamed for taking things into their own hands.

MAY FORTIFY BELLINGHAM BAY

Weak Point in Defenses on the Sound

Washington, Feb 21—The bureau of ordnance, with which Representative Humphrey recently took up the matter of fortification in the vicinity of Bellingham, has informed M Humphrey that the proposed protection is not included in the own general plan of the fortifications of Puget sound upon which it is approved, but that such a showing has been made regarding the necessity of the proposed fortifications that the matter has been favorably referred to the secretary of war.

It was shown that under the system of fortifications now being worked out on the Sound a hostile warship might reach Bellingham bay without coming within twelve miles of any sort of fortification

Lincoln at Gettysburg

FOURSCORE and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

The Best
Way
To Advertise
Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Today is the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln the sixteenth president of the United States, who was assassinated at Washington on April 15, 1865. Lincoln was purely a man of the people. Humble born, he rose to the highest honors in the gift of the people and his memory will be revered so long as this nation shall stand. As one noted speaker has aptly said:

"It was a very full century tha htas gone by since Abraham Lincoln was born, a century crowded for all the world, but particularly for America, with significant events which men could never turn back from nor forget. And Lincoln seems for us the epitome to much that it contained. The nineteenth century hurried the world forward with giant strides, and that far year 1809, which lay almost at its beginning, saw many a man of genius born into the world who was to add luster to its annals: Alfred Tennyson, our own Poe, Chopin, Mendelssohn, Charles Darwin, Gladstone, Lincoln. Merely read the last in its singular variety and you will be conscious that the last name strikes upon the ear with a significance all its own, so unique and separate that it does not seem to belong in a list of names at all, but to embody some thing complete in itself, as the name of Shakespeare does. Every other man on that great roll had some characteristic gift of his own the music and interpretation of perfect speech, or of the perfect harmonies of voice or instrument, or insight into the great processes of nature, akin to Newton's; or the eloquence that stirs and guides a nation and determines the policies of the world. But the man Lincoln had no special gift. He was of general use. He was like some great instrument of humanity. Wherever life touched him, he spoke back its meaning, gave forth fire to kindle its life. Each power slumbered in him and waited to be awakened. He seemed slow of development, waited upon circumstances to quicken him, but always responded upon whatever scale the challenge came, seemed a great reservoir of living water which could be freely quaffed but not exhausted. There was something native, natural rather than singular, and wholly inexhaustible about him. His nature suggested always a richness that had only been partly drawn upon, and his life ended as if untouched, fuller of promise than when it began. His character stands colossal there amidst that troubled history of war and disunion, like one of Rodin's only half moulded figures, revealing less than it suggests, only in part disclosed, shrouded in lines that lead the imagination off into infinity and very great conjecture."

The fact that all sorts of trouble began among the Cuban government officials the day after the American occupation ended will strengthen the conviction of a good many persons that Cuba is not yet ready for self-government. Admitting that fact, however, the duty of the United States to evacuate the island, in accordance with its announced policy, was clear. It is to be hope that Cuba will not make a failure of its freedoom.

SPAIN'S NEW HOPES

Red blood never shows to better advantage than when it gets to work in the veins of an ancient and noble race that has fallen into sad estate. Spain is in for a new day of red blood. By tunneling the Pyrenees the dons have abolished the barrier which has shut out for centuries the swifter pulsations of life and activity in France. The young king has accomplished this, and it is but the beginning of an uplift for a land which none can look on but to admire, and contemplate but to mourn.

It is said of the Irishman that he is a good fighter for every flag but his own. The Spaniard has proved himself a bold and resourceful adventurer and empire builder in every land but his own. Hemmed in at last, the energies of Spain are at work upon home enterprise. Barcelona is said now to rival Marseilles as a shipping center, and it may become the capital of the realm. The new world owes much to the red blood of the Spanish race, and Americans will rejoice to know that Spain is in a fair way to overtake her brightest neighbors in the contest for advancement.

The colored people's organ, aptly and yet inaptly named the New York Age, declares that this is distinctly the negro's age and that the black man is the all around superior of the white. Evidently the race issue is in its infancy, and that little set-to at Sydney last December has a bearing not set down in prize ring bills.

Harriman says that simple arithmetic is the best equipment for a young man starting at railroading. Anyway, addition has done Harriman good service. Witness that $125,000,000 annexed by a five dollar a week office boy.

Nothing strange about the finding of the remains of Captain Kidd, of practical tendencies, in Wall street. It is search in that quarter for remains of another kind of wreckage which always ends like the rainbow chase.

A weekly printed in Italian is running Cooper's novels serially. A fine generation of Americans was built up on Cooper's stuff, and it is as virile now as it was fifty to eighty years ago.

Meanwhile why not investigate pauper labor on the operatic stage, making home talent salaries look like 30 cents?

The comic post card follows the sentimental one into oblivion. Anyway the last card was a bad card to play.

A prominent hygienist wants health discussed in the pulpit, the press and the schoolroom. But only recently a young woman of the people prayed to be delivered from everlasting advice in and out of season about what to eat and drink and what to let alone.

When the music composer, Felix Mendelssohn, was a prodigy of nine or ten his father declared: "I used to be spoken of as the son of Moses Mendelssohn. Now I am known as the father of Felix." Many American daddies of boys of that age earn local fame as the father of a "Peck's Bad Boy."

If that "love germ" recently discovered by science were allowed to settle down in Washington, this strenuous administration would stand some chance of going out "at peace with all the world" and no bluffing.

Safe bet that the first "My dear Bill" letter after March 4 will bear an African postmark unless Brother Charlie happens to miss the last inauguration train.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again" if newspapers crushed to a pulp print themselves again from the pulp.

About time the "psychological moment" hit the psychic cure, for it's bound to catch it either going or coming.

This Japanese immigration question may be of the sort where "put off" doesn't mean killed off.

CHARLES B. HANFORD

It is a high compliment in itself to y that Mr. Hanford did not disap- pint the high expectations, but on the ntrary, even surpassed them in his cellent and finished performance of e Shakespearean comedy. More than is it may be said in justice to Mr. anford that no other actor seen in ashington has so thoroughly realized e part of the adventurous and com- ending Petruchio. His conception and terpretation of the role bore the im- ess of individuality. He interpreted e character with refeshing spirit d dash. and entered into full apprecia- n of its every mood. Much applause is aroused during the performance, d at the close, in response to insist- t handclapping, Mr. Hanford appear- before the curtain and told the dience in an appropriate speech how ghly he valued their hearty expres- n of approval.

Not only was Mr. Hanford's work of excellent character, but that of ery prominent member of the cast as thoroughly acceptable, and the en- e performance proceeded with com- endable spirit and vim. As the shre- sh Katherine Miss Drofnah shread e honors with Mr. Hanford, giving an elligent delineation of the part and idencing proper appreciation of its quirements both in the violent out- rsts of temper and in her display of ntle, womanly qualities after the aming" proces had been completed Washington (D. C.) Evening Star.

The Taming of the Shrew will be Hanford's play at the Astoria eatre on Wednesday Feb. 17.

VOTE STRAIGHT OR NOT AT ALL

House Passes Bill to Abolish Voting Split Tickets

Salem, Or., Feb. 12—Voters of Oregon will have to vote her straight or else be cut out of the primary elections, according to the sense of the house as shown by the vote on Abbott's bill amending the registration law. The bill provides in brief that a man when he registers must swear he voted for everything bearing the party name from the governor up, or he shall not be allowed to cast his vote in the party primaries. In other words, if any man shall vote in the general election for a mixed ticket he will by that act cut himself out of opportunity to vote with his party at the primaries at the next election.

When the bill came up yesterday afternoon Campbell fought it. He said such a measure would not be operative. that it could not be enforced. Munkers, Bedilion, Brandon, Libby and others followed in the same strain, though Brandon threw a little humor into the discussion by declaring he did not want to embarrass the good Republicans in his county who voted for him, by passing such a law.

Bean, McCue, Conyers, Mahone and others argued that the bill was in the interest of party intergrity and should be passed. It was contended that no man had a right to vote for a man not of his party and then come into the party councils.

The roll was called and the bill passed, 42 to 16, with two absent, Libby, one of the absent members, took the lobby route to escape being put on record.

SMART PASSAGE BY SCHOONER

Vessels Have Strenuous Experience off Flattery

Port Townsend, Feb. 12—Bringing first news of the dangers and difficulties that have beset sailing vessels in the North Pacific during the past month, three arrivals here today have had experiences that taxed the strength and skill of ships and crews during voyages that will not soon be forgotten by reason of hardships and dirty weather. The arrivals were the British four-mast bark James Kerr, sixty-one days from Antofogatsa; American schooner Mindoro and American schooner C. S. Holmes. In the case of the schooners, all the winds that made their sailing dangerous were favorable for speed making. The C. S. Holmes made the passage from San Pedro in the remarkably smart time of twelve days, while the Mindoro required two days longer from the same port.

Sailing in from Cape Flattery, are the five-mast schooner Crescent and barkentine J. M. Griffith. Both are from Guayams; the Crescent twenty-four days and the Griffith forty-two days out.

Capt. Morris Jones' account of the passage of the bark James Kerr from Antofogasta is a recital of much rough weather and threatening dangers. A run to the trades was accomplished in remarkably quick time, but upon gaining a slant to bring in at Cape Flattery she met head winds, against which practically no progress could be made. In eight days, after a severe conflict with gales and high seas, the vessel had not gained a mile on her passage. Sighting Cape Flattery last Friday, the big windjammer was forced off shore by easterly winds and thick weather and for two days struggled before storms that threatened to prolong the voyage many days by forcing her to put to sea for safety.

The Kerr is chartered to load at Tacoma a cargo of lumber for South Africa. To make this possible bow ports will be cut, and orders sending the vessel to Seattle for the work are expected.

Capt. Jones is a venerable master in the British merchant marine coming to Puget sound. He was for many years in command of the ship Cambrian Chieftain.

SPECIAL AT THE GRAND

Manager Shortley of the Grand theatre announces a special program for this evening that will interest almost everyone who enjoys high class moving pictures and illustrated songs.

"Incriminating Evidence" is the title of a film over 16000 feet long depicting a wonderful scene in connection with a famous Paris murder trial that is exciting from start to finish.

"Choosing a Life Partner" is a specially comic film but not foolish.

"He Can Imitate Anyone" is another good film worth while seeing

Illustrated Songs—"Brother Noah Gave Checks for Rain" and "When You and I Were Young Maggie."

There will be a special matinee on Friday at 2:30 with performances every evening commencing at 7 o'clock. x

SALARIES FIXED BY COURTS

Petition Will be Presented to Oregon Legislature

The Dalles, Or., Feb. 12—Petitions to the legislators representing Wasco and Hood River counties are being circualted, asking Senator N. J. Sinnott and Representatives H. C. Dodds and J. L. Carter to introduce and endeavor to procure the passage of a bill providing that the fixing of salaries of county officers in Oregon be taken from the legislature and the power be legally given to the county courts, subject to the referendum. The papers are being circualted throughout Wasco and Hood River counties and are being readiy signed, the proposed measure meeting with general approval. The petitions will probably be sent to Salem tonight. The following is a copy:

To N. J. Sinnott, senator and H. C. Dodds and J. L. Carter, representatives, composing the legislative delegation from the counties of Waeso and Hood River: We, the undersigned, legal voters of (Wasco or Hood River) county respectfuly petition and request that you confer and prepare a necessary bill and introduce the same in the present session of the legislature and endeavor to procure its passage, to provide that the fixing of salaries of county officers in Oregon be taken from the legislature and the power be legally given to the county courts of the various counties, subject to referendum with the provison that salaries be fixed before the primaries in advance for the following elective term, subject to limitations that no officer's salary shall be either raised or lowered during the term for which he has been elected.

The contention is that the county court has a better knowledge of what the salary of an officer in its jurisdiction should be than the legislators as a whole, have.

Captain John Reed of the bar tug Wallula is probably as familiar with the Columbia river bar as anyone at the present time and should be a competent witness as to its depth. He says that he was the one who told Chief Engineer Lockwood of the Port of Portland that there was 27 feet of water on the bar at mean low tide and that he can prove it to anyone who is skeptical about it as he has made, recently, careful soundings on the bar.

A measure known as senate bill No 220 was introduced in the Oregon senate on last Monday by the "judiciary committee" to amend the state fishing laws. Its object is to establish a Sunday closing law and to repeal the law prohibiting purse sienes as well as to repeal the law, prohibiting fishing for salmon above tide water. This is the bill prepared by the interest which are endeavoring to do away with all gillnet fishing on the Columbia river and to place the industry in the hands of a few men.

It has been the costom of many boys and girls living in the east and west ends of the city to make play grounds out of private property and quite frequently destroy fences, window panes and commit other depredations. Complaint has been made to the police of this condition of affairs near the Adair property in Upper Astoria. The Adair family only occupy the premises a few months in the year while during their absence much vandalism is evident. No one objects to the boys playing and receiving good wholesome amusement, but when property is wontonly destroyed, it is time for the authorities to put a stop to it.

At the session of the Oregon senate Thursday afternoon, the senators from the Fifth judicial district, comprising Clatsop, Columbia, Washington and Clackamas counties, reported in favor of the passage of the proposed bill providing for an addititonal circuit judge in this district. Some comment was excited by the fact that the bill gives the new judge a salary of $3000, while Judge McBride is left at $4000, the additional $1000 being paid by the counties composing the district under a former act of the legislature. Senator Kay said the salary had been raised to $4000 because the incumbent had so much work and he intimated that it was not consistent to continue this salary while providing for another judge. Amendments to the bill were adopted but no test vote was taken. The bill promises to provoke a scrimmage when it comes up for final passage.

Rails have been laid on the entire North Bank line from Pasco to Marshall Junction, just outside of Spokane, and the track has been connected up for the entire distance from Vancouver to Marshall Junction. The Box Canyon bridge on the line between Marshall Junction and Pasco was completed so far as the placing of girders is concerned last Thursday. Some riveting still remains to be done on the bridge, and the line will then be turned over to the operating department for acceptance. It is not believed by the officials that the line will be in shape to operate fast trains over it until the first of next month, but as soon as it is through freight trains will be routed that way instead of over the Northern Pacific tracks from Pasco to Spokane.

In addition to acting upon the applications for appointment to the positions of clerk and inspector, the water commission at its regular monthly meeting this evening will probably take up the matter of rebuilding the pipeline from Bear Creek to Little Bear creek, where the stave pipe is in bad condition. Bids on replacing this pipe with steel and concrete pipe were opened by the former commission but the bids were not satisfactory and all were rejected. The commission also after an investigation decided that concrete pipe would not be satisfactory. Accordingly the clerk and chairman were instructed to secure prices on steel pipe from the manufacturers, the plan being to later call for bids on the work of laying it. It is understood that quotations have been received from a few manufacturers and these will probably be submittted to the commission this evening and steps taken to arrange for making the improvement during the coming summer.

United States Inspectors Edwards and Fuller handed down a decision Thursday afternoon in the case of the recent collision between the steamers T. J. Potter and No Wonder and the license of Captain Harry Haslam, pilot on the Potter, was suspended for 30 days because of alleged violation of the pilot rules. Captain Haslam was on the bridge of the Potter on the afternoon of January 26, when she collided with the Shaver Transportation company's towboat, No Wonder, sinking the latter near Gillihan's landing, Sauvies island, at the mouth of the Willamette. The collission occurred so near shore that the rammed craft was partly beached before filling. No lives were lost and the damage to the boat was not very serious. A dense fog hung over the river at the time, and at the investigation Haslam said he was running about a steamer's width off his course in order to pick up a point of departure. He also stated that while he had a lookout in the pilot house he had none at the bow of the boat, although the pilot house on the Potter is about 90 feet aft of the stem.

Four criminal cases are set for trial during the session of the circuit court, which will be convened on next Monday. On Tuesday the case against Charles Bertlesen, indicted on a charge of pointing a gun at Patrolman Houghton will come up. On Wednesday, February 17, the trial of the case against Antone Kuljis of Clifton, indicted on two charges of selling liquor without a license was called, and on the following day the case against W. Nyberg indicted on two charges of selling liquor in a "dry" precinct will be tried. There are two indictments pending against D. Falanges of Clifton, charging him with selling liquor without a license and his trial will probably be taken up on Friday. There are three persons held to await the action of the grand jury on criminal charges. They are A. Nissen, charged with stealing an accordion valued at $75, Henry Cappilla, charged with the larceny of about $54 from the Anchor saloon, and Arthur N. Hall, a soldier at Fort Stevens, charging with assault with a dangerous weapon. Hall is accused of pointing a loaded revolver at Charles Mekula, constable at Hammond. It is understood that Capila will plead guilty to the charge of larceny in a store, but the other two if indicted will, probably, stand trial.

TWO BANDITS HOLD UP TRAIN

Three Sacks of Registered Mail Were Stolen

Denver, Feb. 13 -While running at the rate of fifty miles an hour, the Denver and Rio Grande passenger train No. 4 from the west, was held up early this morning between Fort Logan and Denver by two bandits, who appeared from the coal tender and compelled the engineer and firemen to stop the train. They took the enginemen from the cab and fired shots to intimidate the passengers. The conductor, who started to investigate the cause of the trouble, was fired upon three times but not hit. The robbers compelled the mail clerks to open the mail car and stole three sacks of registered mail. They then compelled the train crew to march quite a distance ahead of the train and then escaped in the direction of Fort Logan but it is believed their real destination is Denver.

The value of the loot cannot be ascertained. Detectives and police are searching the surrounding country.

Estimates of the amount secured by the robbers vary but both clerks agree that only the registered mail was taken but they have no idea of its value. One package is said to be currency from the Salt Lake City bank, estimated at $1000 to $5000.

A CHERISHED MEMORY.

After the sun is lulled to sleep
On the bosom of the briny deep
After the curtain of night is drawn
The dreamy hour twixt twilight and dawn
Brings to me a memory of old
As dear to me as the miser's gold.

Yonder the form of one departed
Stealthily enters my den light-hearted
I grasp for the precious phantom fancy
The dainty laughter loving Nancy
I can see her eyes of azure blue
Gazing toward me so bright and true
Now she seems to breath a blessing
Leans toward me as if caressing.
Gone, she vanished ere the night

Leaving me to live the light
Sometimes I feel sad and lonely
Longing for her sweet voice only
Seems as tho from her I borrow Strength and courage for tomorrow.

Admission day, the day that made Oregon a state will be celebrated and properly observed by the local organization of the Native daughters. On account of admission day, the fourteenth coming on a Sunday, the Daughters have arranged to celebrate the same on Monday, evening, February 15, at the home of Mrs. Chas. W. Fulton. Mrs. Fulton has offered the Native daughters her home for this grand occasion and some excellent arrangements are being made for this splendid patriotic remembrance.

Foreheads.

Stand before a mirror and look at your forehead. Does it slope back? If so it denotes a fondness for art and a talent for music or painting—or both.

If your forehead is high it is a good sign, particularly if it is well developed about the eyebrows. Should these have a perceptible bulge you are a calm, cool, deliberate thinker.

You will probably be successful in business if, with bulging eyebrows, you have a short, narrow forehead.

Breadth of forehead indicates broad mindedness. Of course a broad forehead may be part of a weak face, and a weak face with a broad forehead is not so favorable as a strong face and a narrow forehead.

If your eyebrows bulge and your forehead slopes gradually back you are highly sensitive and—you are a poet.—London Answers.

Where the Heart Is

By GRANT OWEN

The hansom rolled slowly up the avenue through the mellow sunshine of the Indian summer afternoon. Its sole occupant, a very broad shouldered young man, leaned back on the cushions and smoked a contemplative cigarette, abstractedly watching through half closed eyes the stream of traffic whirling past.

He was a good natured, indolent looking young man, one of the kind who very evidently enjoyed being at ease. Yet in the dark eyes was a certain light of determination, a certain hint of latent power that made one quite inclined to forgive his apparent laziness.

Suddenly the young man sat erect. He leaned far forward, peering intently at a figure on the crowded sidewalk. He watched it steadfastly for a moment, while his indolence fell from him like a useless cloak, and his eyes opened wider and wider.

Impatiently he flicked the cigarette to the pavement and stood up to open the trap above his head.

"Hi!" he called to the cabby. "I say, there, pull up to the curb and set me down, will you? And be quick about it."

The hansom swerved sharply and drew up at the curb. The young man scrambled out, quite forgetful of his usual slow dignity in his haste. He thrust up a bill to the cabby, and without waiting for his change he went briskly up the avenue in pursuit of the figure he had just seen.

He elbowed his way along, now sidestepping some group which blocked his headlong progress, now all but breaking into a run in his eagerness.

Ahead of him he caught fleeting glimpses of a large hat with a blue feather that seemed to serve as a necessary incentive to his hurrying steps.

When he had almost reached it the blue feather turned a corner into a quiet side street, and the young man in hot pursuit followed after.

Here the sidewalks, being less crowded, gave him better opportunity for speed. In a moment he had overtaken the blue feather and touched its wearer lightly on the arm.

She turned, and her eyes rested on him with a sudden eager light in them.

"Ted!" cried the girl happily. "Ted, of all the people in the world!"

"You have led me a frightful chase, Patty," he panted, with mock severity.

"I?" she laughed. "How?"

"I was in a hansom on the avenue, and I saw you passing," he explained. "I pulled up and gave chase afoot."

"What are you doing here?" she demanded, although her eyes told plainly that she knew very well the answer to her question. "And why are you here, anyway? Surely you are not up here with horses this time of year. I didn't suppose there was any power on earth that could drag a Northcroft from Virginia at this season."

"A little clipping from a morning paper early in the week is responsible for my appearance," said he. "It stated that you and your mother had just returned from abroad."

"Oh, really!" she mocked. "I suppose I should feel vastly flattered to be able to bring you up here. Think of it! The wild turkey shooting must be something wonderful now, to say nothing of the Redfields hunt. They're riding just now, of course."

"Yes, they're riding," said he. "But somehow it's pretty tame sport when you're not along, Patty."

She looked at him suddenly, and a faint red crept into her cheeks. "Oh, pshaw!" she laughed. "You Virginians certainly know how to pay compliments, don't you?"

She said it lightly enough, but her voice was not altogether steady. The young man's sudden and unlooked for appearance seemed to have disconcerted her somewhat.

"We Virginians," he repeated thoughtfully. "Then you don't count yourself one of us any longer, Patty?"

"Well, I fear I'm a bit weaned from the old place," she confessed. "You see, since father died and we came back here to live with my mother's people I've been made to feel that I, or a part of me at least, belongs up here. Father was the Virginian, you know."

The young man stiffened. "You've changed, Patty," he said flatly and with something like disappointment in his voice. "You used to say that you were Virginian to the backbone—that there was no place on earth like it."

"That was before I had seen the other places," said she.

"I see," said he, with a certain odd constraint, "of course."

Bit by bit he drew out of her an account of her travels and experiences during the past three years. He listened thoughtfully, but with clouding brows.

"Of course," he observed at length, "you'd find it all very dull back there. The old life wouldn't appeal to you now. There'd be no fun for you to go turkey shooting as you used to do, or to ride to the hounds down the valley and over to Clark's.

"You wouldn't care about Tim Fairfield's geldings, nor would you be wondering where in the country we could find a hunter that could top a six rail fence and make a decent landing."

To his surprise, a look almost of pain came into the girl's eyes. She held out her hand to stop him.

"Don't!" she said. "Don't! I can't bear it."

Northcroft caught his breath sharply. "Eh? What's this?" he cried, rather dazed by this unexpected turn of things.

He looked at her more closely. He saw that her eyes were moist. She turned her head sharply from him and angrily brushed something from her cheek.

"I—I—suppose I'm ungrateful and unappreciative and all that sort of thing," she confessed lamely, "but, Ted, honestly, those very things you've just been saying I didn't care for are the very things I care for the most. I'm—I'm homesick, Ted; that's the trouble—just plain, honest, old fashioned homesick. I'm tired of all this. I was never fitted for it.

"This life up here—the life they say is eminently proper and fit for me—I simply can't stand. If you only knew how I longed to be back there—not for a day, as we go now and then occasionally—but forever, you'd never chide me again. You'd pity me instead. I try not to show it for mother's sake, but sometimes I can't help it. I suppose it is my father's blood in my veins. To him Virginia and paradise were synonyms."

Northcroft straightened himself. When he was thoroughly aroused he was a decidedly handsome man.

His brows were drawn together in a little frown; there were lines about the corners of his mouth. He was enjoying the unaccustomed luxury of thinking deeply.

Presently he turned to her. There was a great light in his eyes.

"Patty," he asked, "do you know why I came up here?"

She shook her head.

"I came," said he, "because ever since you left I have not had a moment's peace. You have dominated every thought, every action, every moment of my life. I couldn't stand it any longer. When I learned you were back from abroad I came up here to see you, to find you a changed and different Patty, and by so doing to quiet forever all the old uneasiness and unrest. I thought you'd laugh at the old life and make light of it—that probably you would have outgrown it and forgotten it. Do you mean what you have just said?" he ended suddenly.

"Every word of it," she said, with emphasis.

"Dearie," he said gently, "why don you come back to it? Why don't you marry me? We'll live on the old place where the Northcrofts have lived ever since Jamestown was built. We'll ride with the Redfield crowd, and we'll have a stableful of timber toppers that can't be equaled in seven counties. We'll"—

A light touch on his arm interrupted him. She was looking at him with radiant eyes.

"Ted, I will," she said firmly. "When can we go?"

"Tomorrow, the day after—any time," said he.

"Tomorrow? Oh, that's ages in the future. Today, Ted, today. We'll be married this afternoon and start back tonight. Call a cab. We must drive up to the house and tell mother."

The request from the farmers union that rates on grain be extended to Astoria is one which the transportation companies cannot overlook and there is every reason to believe that it will bring results. This union controls a total of over 20,000,000 bushels of grain annually which it proposes to market thru its own agencies and when an organization having in its hands so great an amount of business as this, asks rates from a transportation company it demands attention. The farmers have at last awakened to the fact that they have been deprived of a goodly portion of the profits from their crops by the middlemen and they are now determined to secure their rights. With the grain in its control and with plenty of money to handle it, as the union has, the desired result is easly attainable. This does not infer by any means that we of Astoria should lessen our efforts to obtain the rates from the railway companies, rather, it means that we should double our efforts in that line, but we should work in conjunction with the farmers as our interests in this are identical.

The building of the electric road to Seaside, which is expected to be under way within a very few weeks, will make available for small farming large tracts of fertile land thru which it will run. This land divided into small tracts can easily be made to support dozens of families and thus add materially to the business of the city in all lines. During the past few years dozens of electric roads have be built in various parts of the state and everywhere, they have been the forerunners of increased commercial prosperty. It will be no exception here and now that the start is being made, we may soon expect to see other lines building up Young's river, up the Lewis and Clark river and to other points where there is business to be had or where it can be created.

That the growing value of water-power rights has been recognized by far sighted men of business is well understood by the average man, but it may prove difficult to convince him that throughout the country where the possibility of developing this power exists, emissaries of a combination of capitalists have already bought up such rights, or are negotiating for them. There is a question as to whether the federal government exercises any jurisdiction over streams beyond that of protecting their navigability. Congress takes the position that the jurisdiction of national authority ends here. The president takes the position that it does not, and he is depending upon the federal authority which he claims exists to prevent the further growth of a monopoly which, in his message vetoing the bill granting to one William Stardish the right to construct a dam across the James river, in Stone county, Missouri, he declares already controls 34 per cent of the water-power of the country. The president's position on this question is a strong one, and one which it will be impossible for congress to successfully attack, since it is not only strong but must appear righteous in the eyes of the American people. "Our water-power alone," he says in his veto message, "if fully developed and wisely used, is probably sufficient for our present transportation, industrial, municipal and domestic needs. Most of it is undeveloped and is still in national or state control. To give away without conditions this, one of the greatest of our resources, would be an act of folly."

MISSION OF THE LIBERTY BELL.

Philadelphia's mayor wastes few words in explaining his reason for sanctioning the loan of the Liberty bell for the Portland festival and the Alaska-Yukon exposition. "It is a matter of education," he declares, and as nothing can happen to it it is only right to "allow the historic relic to be shown to people all over the country." The further drift of his argument is to the effect that since Mohammed cannot or will not come to the mountain the mountain must go to Mohammed.

Generations may pass before another world's fair on the banks of the Schuylkill attracts millions of American citizens to the cradle of liberty. In Portland and Seattle eyes that might never behold the relic but for this opportunity may be the road to the heart of millions for the story of liberty's struggles and triumphs on America's soil. We make citizens in this country faster than we make landmarks to awe the expanding mind. To millions of Americans, young and old, the bell probably now appears, if they have even heard of it, as only half a reality. To see is to apprehend and believe, and next to Old Glory, which is everywhere today, nothing can be featured at a great public gathering with greater gain to patriotic sentiment than that same old cracked Liberty bell.

Few will dispute the New York Press' view that "the nation which neglects the care of its forests and rivers falls into denudation and poverty." But the burning question sure to be rung in before the job can be completed is, Who shall foot the forest preservation bill?

As a rule the yellow reporter's story of the "remarkable young and surpassingly beautiful" girl's adventure makes one think that "and supremely silly" was omitted to spare the feelings of the family.

That official who retained fines collected from auto speeders is all right in jail. Still, it would be better if he never landed there than to let the speeders retain their money.

The way things drag with our home canal projects those Panama shovelers needn't nurse their job. There'll be plenty doing long after the zone is cleaned up.

The hobo puzzle "to work or not to work" was speedily solved when the snow man called out, "There's a shovel!"

If we let the Cubans raise the old Maine hulk and put their own price on the job, Uncle Sam will probably regret not having attended to it himself.

If Lincoln really took time to tell all the stories we hear credited to him, it must have been General Good Luck that engineered the war.

Although not in the earthquake zone, Washington somehow had many a shake and quiver while the Italian agitation was quieting down.

And now little Panama up and protests that the treaty making power of the United States doesn't go on the canal zone.

The stockholders of an English thread combine were recently called together to hear a report on the dullness of trade. Lest they might go out and forget it the directors declared an annual dividend of only 30 per cent.

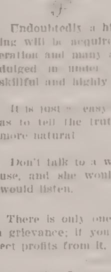
HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

Some people speak before they think, being naturally fond of talking.

Many a promising young man has been a specimen sample of the nothing doing sort.



Human nature is the thing that makes a man want to act like a brute when things do not go the way he thinks they should go.

Lots of people are sore just because some people are so awfully rich. S'pose they just like to be contrary?

Undoubtedly a high degree of learning will be acquired by the next generation and many a flight of fancy indulged in under the guidance of a skillful and highly developed aviator.

It is just as easy for some men to lie as to tell the truth and a whole lot more natural.

Don't talk to a woman. It isn't any use, and she would a lot rather you would listen.

There is only one excuse for having a grievance; if you capitalize and collect profits from it, all right.

The Conversation Route.

Some people when they tell a thing
In [illegible] garments dress it.
And other creatures know a lot,
But cannot quite express it.
The gift of gab is something great,
Assisting the possessor
To make his way around the world
Or I am no good guesser.

Palaver, properly applied
And to the case adjusted,
Assists a man though he is down
And for the moment busted.
It opens up the hearts of men
Who hear its liquid flowing,
And if they are inclined to balk
It straightway sets them going.

"Words, idle words," the poet said
When speaking of the gabble
That everywhere assailed his ears
When mixing with the rabble.
But let these words be caught and tamed
And broken to the bridle
So they may do the talker's will
And they are not so idle.

That talk is cheap we often hear,
But still that doesn't matter.
A very inexpensive toy,
If rightly used, may flatter,
And conversation conned with care,
Set skillfully in motion,
Will get a man most anything
To which he takes a notion.

Couldn't Surprise Him.

"The agent was showing old Bill Bartness from Wayback through a house with all modern improvements."

"Made Bill open his eyes some, I imagine."

"Not so any one could notice it. He never asked a question. Even pretended that he knew what the bathtub was for."

FOR RECOVERY OF TIDELANDS

Claims that Grantees Have Forfeited their Rights

Salem, Or., Feb. 13—To recover thousands of acres of tideland in Benton county, which the state gave away to the Willamette Valley & Coast Railroad, a bill was introduced in the house today by Representative B. F. Jones, of Lincoln and Polk. These lands are gradually becoming very valuable, and the state will make an attempt to regain possession of them.

These tidelands and marshes are in a peculiar position. They were freely given away by the legislature in 1874, on condition that the railroad have them surveyed. Once in its possession, the railroad did nothing with the lands, not even considering them a valuable asset, apparently. At any rate, it failed to keep its agreement to have them and the marshes surveyed and has paid no taxes on them.

Some time ago Railroad Commissioner Oswald West discovered the situation and concluded that there was a chance for the state of Oregon to recover them. As a result of West's investigation, Representative Jones has prepared a resolution, which says in part:

"Whereas, the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of the Illinois Central Railroad Company vs. Illinois, 146 United States 452, has held that all tidelands are held by the state in trust for the people, so that they may enjoy the navigation of the waters, carry on commerce, have the liberty of fishing therein freed from the obstruction or interference of private parties; that it is not within the power of a legislature to grant away the tidelands of an entire harbor, and that any such grant, if not absolutely void, is revocable. Therefore, it is.

"Resolved, That the act granting the lands to the railroad be repealed."

TAMING OF THE SHREW

No comedy, new or old has evoked more laughter than "The Taming of the Shrew" which Charles B. Hanford with a selected company including Miss Marie Drofnah, will present at the Astoria theatre Wednesday Feb. 17. Mr. Hanford has presented this comedy so many times and with such success that he can come nearer calling it his own than any other modern actor. The character of Petruchio is one to which he is distinctively adapted and Miss Drofnah is scarcely less notably equipped for the performance of Katherine. The play will have the benefit of a company of extraordinary strength. "The Taming of the Shrew" as presented by Mr. Hanford is one of the certainties of the dramatic season. It never disappoints. Don't fail to secure your seats early as there will certainly be a rush for them.

BRIX TENDERS RESIGNATION

As Member of Astoria Water Commissioner

The regular monthly meeting of the Astoria water commission last evening was attended by all the members excepting Commissioner Brix. One of the principal matters which came up was the resignation of Mr. Brix as a member of the board. He stated that in paying his taxes he found that he did not pay quite the $25 in city taxes as is required by the charter to qualify as a commissioner altho indirectly he pays between $300 and $400 in city taxes, as he is a member of several corporations. The city attorney has held, the resignation states, that such taxs cannot be taken into consideration and in order to avoid the danger of any complications arising, Mr. Brix decided to resign. The resignation was laid on the table pending a ruling by the courts and on motion the city attorney was instructed to take such action in the courts as will determine whether or not the present board is legally organized.

The report of the committee appointed to suggest a suitable man for appointment to the position of Inspector was read. It recommended that the positions of clerk and assistant clerk be combined and that John Nordstrom be appointed as such officer at a salary of $80 per month. The report was adopted. G. W. Lounsberry was retained as clerk and Albert Johnson was retained as superintendent.

The report of the clerk for the month of January showed the business transacted during the month to have been $3904.70 and the cash collections were $3,903. The report of the treasurer showed that on January 30, there was $36,649.78 in the general fund and the sinking fund, for the redemption of the outstanding bonds amounts to $50,343.89. The commission has been purchasing its own interest bearing bonds whenever possible and the sinking fund now includes $16,000 in six per cent bonds, $33,000 in five per cent bonds and the balance is in cash.

The regular monthly payroll in the sum of $905.75 was paid as were current bills amounting to $343.86. The committee reported that the fence around the small reservoir and the fence around the reservoir grounds have been put up in proper shape and recommended that the bill of the Portland Wire & Iron Works in the sum of $775.70 be paid. The report was adopted. Quotations from several manufacturers on riveted steel pipe were read but no action was taken.

MONTHS NEEDED FOR REPAIRS

Immense Amount of Work on Railway Lines

Pendleton, Or., Feb. 13—Some idea of the extent of the damage sustained by the O. R. & N. on its Washington division can be gained from the fact that J. W. Poe, the contractor who is to put the track in permanent repair, estimates he will be required to keep his outfits on the job for three months. Pope has just arrived from Moscow Idaho, where he spent the winter, and started work. The part of the line which he will repair is between this city and La Crosse, Wash. Trains will run throughout this period of course.

... HARD LUCK STORY ...

BY E. F.

I was picked up by a young boy and roughly thrust into his pocket. I did not like the stuffy air of my new abode and hoped it would soon change. The boy hurried on and with a fling of his coat, he sat down at a long table. I was wondering what would happen next when he suddenly pulled me out of the darkness right under the glare of an arc light. A smile stole over his features as he quickly wrapped me around a small brown article.

With a light toss I found myself among a great many relations. I noticed the various stamps and felt quiet indignant to be there with such common trash. While this thought was occupying my brain, I was jerked up and packed away in a wooden box with the rest of this poor trash. A hand slipped over me and the owner said, "why, this is a mistake," so I was put into a much finer box with my own equal. I rested very comfortably until the cover was opened and I was tossed across the glass case to a man. This creature eyed me with a great satisfaction and cut the end of the little article I was in care of. I felt quite hurt at such cruel treatment.

Some other man approached and my master held me so tight in his hand I felt as if I should choke and longed to be released. Without a moment's notice he crushed the poor little body between his great teeth and worse than this lit a match to end it all. I squirmed as the fire came nearer and nearer, finally with a quick rip I found myself, all alone scorched and bruised on the cold stone floor.

A little bootblack passed by me once or twice. I tried to move and attract his attention but to no avail. After all hope had been abandoned, and the janitor already preparing for his evening duty, a little newsboy chanced to see me after pleading with a surly old man ran in and picked me up and much to my luck carried me safely home.

Now altho I have a few scars and tears, I feel perfectly at [illegible] the most highly adorned of "Havana Cigar Wrappers" on the little Mexican vase.

To illustrate the fertility of logged off lands in this vicinity D. B. Howater brought to the Budget office this morning a rutabaga that has been grown on such land at his farm on the Lewis and Clark, near Fort Clatsop. It weighed over 30 pounds and was of excellent quality and never received any cultivation.

Members of the Astoria high school football team are organizing a basket ball team with the intention of playing a series of games with the different high school teams of the state. Basket ball has not appealed to the local boys as they only knew it from seeing the girls play and they considered it a game of tag. They have discovered that the boys and girls rules for the game are different and that the rules for the boys part permit rougher work than does football so they are for it.

Among the matters that will be acted upon by the council at its meeting on next Monday evening will be the passage of the ordinance granting a franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company for an electric railway over certain streets in the city. The ordinance is now in the hands of the ways and means committee, which will submit its report at that time. It is understood that about the only change that will be made in the ordinance as passed by the former council will be to reduce the time in which the proposed lines must be built to the east end of the city from five to three years.

The steamer Flyer is fast becoming a vessel with a history. She has been on the Seattle-Tacoma run steadily for seventeen years. The statistics of the phenomenal run are as follows: The Flyer has operated without cessation between Seattle and Tacoma for 5,402½ days. In that time it has covered 1,322,848 miles, and carried more than 3,000,000 passengers. In all that time it has not had a passenger injured—this fact certainly speaks well for the service. The Flyer also has the distinition of running a greater number of miles in a year than any other vessel in the world.

A suit was filed in the circuit court this morning by the Oregon Coast Railway Company against Josiah West and Lamira B. West to condemn a right-of-way 60 feet in width for a line of railway thru the defendants' property on Clatsop plains. The complaint says the total amount of land sought to be acquired is 18 acres and asks that this land be appropriated to be used by the plaintiff for the construction and operation of a railroad. It adds that the plaintiff has been unable to reach and agreement with the defendants as to the compensation for the land and requests the court to fix the amount. This suit is the first of a series which are to be filed against persons who have refused to grant rights-of-way for the proposed line.

A marriage license was issued at the county clerk's office this afternoon to August Annala and Hilda Aurora Laurial.

A dispatch from Tillamook says that the launch Rosa inbound from Astoria went ashore on Tillamook bar on Thursday morning and that all the passengers were rescued by the life saving crew. No such vessel is known here and no launch has cleared from here for Tillamook recently. The launch Rose, belonging to Peter Johns, left here some months ago for Newport and went ashore near Tillamook, but was floated latter and there is a possibility that the same craft is in trouble again.

The Chamber of Commerce has just received a letter from Mr. Hugh Battarbee, 122, 12th and Washington, Sts, Portland, Oregon, asking for an opportunity to rent a dairy farm fully equipped with not less than 20 cows. Mr. Battarbee is recently from Canada but could not stand the cold weather and wishes a location in the milder climate of Oregon. Any one who desires to communicate with Mr. Battarbee may do so direct or get further information from the Chamber of Commerce.

C. S. Dow, Clatsop county's fruit inspector, returned Friday from Seattle, where he had been looking up space for an exhibit of fruits, timber, fish and dairy products of Clatsop county at the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition which opens June 1. Mr. Dow states that the Oregon building is practically finished, but the other state buildings are in various stages of construction. The general management has abandoned the idea of a fisheries exhibit and turned over the building already built for that purpose to the Oriental exhibit. The only fish exhibit therefore will be from Clatsop county in the Oregon building.

Some curiosity has been expressed as to the meaning and origin ot the word Manheim, after which the Manheim Glee Club is named. Manager Nanthrup of the club says that several Scandinavian names were suggested when it was organized but most of them were found objectionable for one reason or another until the mytholigical name Manheim was brought up. In the early history of their country Thor was the god of storms and all violent convulsions of nature and to protect themselves from him they built the temple of Manheim, in which there was perfect peace and safety to which they went in time of danger.

Acting under instructions from the city attorney, Chief Oberg last evening closed both the "Owl" and "Hole in the Wall" saloons on Astor street, the conviction of the proprietors in the police court on a charge of selling liquor to a minor having under the city charter acted to revoke their licenses. Immediately afterwards Piittari & Manitso applied for a license to open the Owl saloon and deposited $400 with the city treasurer, but this application has not yet been passed upon by the conucil. Both the city charter and the ordinance on which the prosecution in the police court yesterday was based provide that a conviction of selling liquor to a minor shall revoke the license of the defendant.

Because he could not swim and the log he had fallen from was to large to crawl back upon. Guy Higgins, 25 years, an employe of the Lewis River Boom company, near Ridgefield, was drowned yesterday just before noon. He wore himself out before help could reach him, though he had been in the water but 10 minutes. He was not resuscitated as the men who rescued him did not know what to do to restore respiration. Higgins was working on some logs at the mouth of the Lewis river and was on a large log, which was separated from the others. His foot slipped and he fell into the river. The log he had fallen from was a big one and Higgins could not get his arms around it. Dr. Stryker was called, but could not revive the body. The dead man lived with his aunt, Mrs. Palmer, at the mouth fo the river.

Anniversary of their Death Elaborately Honored

Washington, Feb. 15- The memories of the men, plunged to sudden death when the battleship Maine went down in the waters of Havana harbor eleven years ago today, were honored with observance to day by military, religious and patriotic bodies.

Services were also conducted at Arlington cemetery, here a granite shaft towers above the 165 Maine victims. Rear Admiral Sigsbee, retired and commader of the ill-fated battleship, was the chief speaker and in stirring words depicted the story of the catastrophe which led this nation to war. Several others delivered brief addresses. Two troops mounted of men from Fort Myer fired salutes. A large floral tribute was sent by President Roosevelt and many wreaths were sent by individual and patriotic organizations.

UPLIFT THE RURAL SCHOOL

Senator Dolliver as chairman of the committee on education and labor is trying to work out a scheme of correlating the rural schools with the agricultural colleges to which the government now contributes a considerable sum for maintenance, says a Washington dispatch. He has in mind that the country schools ought to teach in addition to the regular courses practical and theoretical agriculture.

To carry out his idea Senator Dolliver hopes to introduce a bill soon. The plan probably will involve some sort of encouragement from the national government to induce states to organize their country schools in such manner as to bring about co-operation with the higher institutions.

LUMBER PRICES REMAIN STEADY

Advance in Price Slightly Stimulates Demand

Portland, Feb 15—Lumber prices are steady and the advance of a week ago by most mills of from 50 cents to $1 per thousand feet is said to have no effect on the demand, except, perhaps to stimulate it. Foreign business has been unusually active of late, no fewer than four cargoes having been placed here during the past couple of weeks.

The combined amount of lumber represented by these four cargoes is nearly 10,000,000 feet and the mills will be kept busy for some time getting this material ready for shipment. California business is keeping up well, lumbermen say, and they look for a healthy increase with the spring and summer.

Most of the mills in the country are now resuming operations after a long shutdown. Many would have resumed earlier, but the storm came on and it was impossible to work with two or three feet of snow on the ground and the log ponds frozen to the bottom. But from now on activity will be general. The railroads are buying quiet liberally now and this gives the interior mills a better opportunity. Many tie mills are now running exclusively for the Southern Paicfic which has been placing considerable business during the past month.

The shingle market has improved a great deal since the storm and prices are getting back to a level where it is possible for the manufacturer to make a small margin of profit. For a while shingles were selling as low as $1.85 delivered on the job, and they were first class shingles, too.

IMMENSE CUT ON GRAYS HARBOR

Output of Lumber Industry Shows Large Increase

Hoquiam, Feb. 15 Regardless of 1908 being an off year in the lumbering business, the mills of this city made a record in cutting a total of 261,000,000 feet of lumber during the twelve months. The best records made, and probably the banner cut of the coast, were by the National Lumber & Box company and the Hoquiam Lumber & Shingle company. The cut of the former was [illegible]21,119 feet and the cut of this same plant in 1907 was the 66,413,000. The cut of the Hoquiam Lumber & Shingle company includes both lath and shinges, which swell the figure. In addition to the Lumber & Shingle Company in total the year, exclusive of the Hoquiam Lumber & Shingle company, was 130,604,750 shingles.

Following is the cut of each mill: Grays Harbor Lbr. Co 26,686,[illegible] Hoquiam Lbr., & Shingle. Co 83,[illegible],000. National Lbr. & Box Co 83,[illegible],119. Northwestern Lbr. Co [illegible]6,465. E. K. Wood Lbr. Co [illegible]262,839 Total 261,026,775

This seems to have been a year of records, the Polson Logging Company cutting and putting in the waters of the harbor over 130,000,000 feet of logs. The value of this year's cut of lumber figured at $10 per thousand, which is a low figure, is placed at $2,610,000, while the value of the shingle output is about $250,000. This does not include the box business done, or the value of doors, which will reach another $100,000.

NO SMOKING ALLOWED IN PUBLIC

There is revolt in the air among the downtrodden freshmen of Cornell university at Ithaca, N. Y. The last straw has been piled on their backs by the upper class tyrants. Crushed for years, humbled more perhaps than at any other first class American university, they have been stunned by the announcement of the new rules for their guidance. These were recently promulgated by the all powerful general committee of the student organization.

The freshman must not smoke in public; he must not sit in a street car while an upper class man stands; he must not think of going downstairs at Zinck's, the favorite booze emporium; he must not think of sitting in the orchestra or the balcony at the best theater in Ithaca—the gallery for him; he must not hang around the Ithaca hotel. In fact, he must be more meek and lowly than ever before. If the freshman shows an indication of being fresh he will suffer.

The penalties are not named in these new rules, but every poor dog of a freshman knows only too well what they are. He will be hounded till life is a burden. Under these rules he will be permitted to breathe when the air is not needed by the upper class tyrant. That is all. It is said that an appeal is to be made to the faculty, and it is likely that some action will be taken or that the hundreds of freshmen will openly rebel.

The general committee held a secret meeting a few nights ago, and the next day the new rules were given out. It was mildly announced that some minor changes in them had been made. The freshmen were lulled by this explanation till they began to study the rules. Then the "minor changes" were seen to be most remarkable. When they picked up the Cornell Daily Sun they encountered this editorial paragraph:

> As there seems to be a spirit among certain members to regard themselves as outside the working of these rules, their enforcement from now on will be especially stringent.

There was a direct and official threat from the general committee which could not be overlooked. While the freshmen admit that in the past some of their number have been altogether too fresh, they insist that the new rules are tyrannical. Cornell has in the past been troubled with the "professional freshman"—the student of means anywhere from twenty-two to forty years of age who went to college just to be called a college man. He spent the nine months of the student year in a chair at Zinck's absorbing Pilsener, Wuertz and Culmbacher instead of logarithms.

There is a Cornell story that one of these "professional freshmen" who was something of a football player was temporarily and forcibly dragged from his chair in Zinck's long enough to join the eleven and help win a game. But the professors could never get him to enter a lecture room. Thus the new rule, though it seems harsh, has some reason behind it.

Now, in order that there may be no mistake in picking out a freshman among the 4,000 attendants at the university the general committee has added one stringent rule—the freshman must wear a "toque with a cord and tassel." Even the budding lawyers who go for a three year course are freshmen. Once on a time it was recognized, as at most other universities, that law students were old enough to be above the pretense and pose of the average freshman, but no longer at Cornell. Here are the rules in full:

No freshman shall smoke at all on the campus nor in the smoking rooms on the campus, nor shall he smoke a pipe on the streets of Ithaca.

No freshman shall be allowed downstairs in Zinck's, in the Alhambra or in the Dutch Kitchen under any circumstances, nor shall he be permitted to lounge about the lobby of the Ithaca hotel at any time, nor shall he be allowed to enter the Senate or the Office after 7 p. m. No freshman shall be allowed upstairs in Zinck's or the Senate unless accompanied by an upper class man.

Each and every freshman shall wear at all times except on Sundays a cap of the following description: An official gray cap with a small visor and a black button or an official gray toque with a black cord and tassel. He shall not at any time while in college wear a pin representing his preparatory school in any manner, nor shall he wear any emblem or insignia of that institution.

No freshman shall be allowed to go without a coat or a cap on the campus.

No freshman shall be allowed under any circumstances to sit in the first three rows or in boxes at the Lyceum.

No freshman shall be allowed on the floor at the junior promenade or at the sophomore cotillion. (This does not apply to freshmen engaged in decorating boxes.)

No freshman unaccompanied by a girl shall sit on the first floor or in the first balcony at the Lyceum during the junior week masque performance or glee club concert.

No freshman shall occupy a seat in a trolley car when by so doing an upper class man may be obliged to stand.

Zinck's, the Alhambra and the Dutch Kitchen are about the only refectories in Ithaca which a student wishes to enter. Barred from these, the freshman must keep sober. However, many of them are thankful for the privilege of entering Zinck's or the Senate in company with an upper class man.

"It will be a fine thing for the upper class man who has a thirst and no [illegible]," [illegible] freshman recently.

If she has two between the eyebrows she is forty-four.

This is what Mrs. Dr. Jennie de le M Lozier recently told the members of the Clio club in New York.

"The physicians," said Mrs. Lozier "say that a person is as old as his arteries, and metaphysicians declare that one is only as old as his mental attitude. But I can tell you that, no matter what one's state of mind, the hair will turn gray and the crow's feet gather around the eyes. A man says that he cannot tell a woman's age, but when she gets three transverse wrinkles across the forehead she is twenty seven. When she gets two or three perpendicular wrinkles between the eyebrows she is forty-four, and then she begins to put on glasses."

The club was discussing "Problems That Vex," and the chairman of the day, Mrs. J. Henry McKinley, having had the unique experience of having had a great-grandmother with whom in her childhood she learned to play "muggins" and "old maid," had asked Mrs. Lozier to talk about growing old gracefully, as one of the most vexing problems she knew. Her own grandmother had lived to a very old age, 105 having been born in Mulberry street in 1790, and she knew there was something to say about old age.

He Was Just Careful.

"I can't understand why my second husband is so fastidious. He scarcely eats anything. My first husband, who died, used to eat everything I cooked for him."

"Have you told your present husband that?"

"Yes."

"Perhaps that's the reason."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

TOO MUCH ANALYSIS.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

My Dear Mr. Gregory—I have considered the proposition with which you have honored me earnestly, thoughtfully, prayerfully. It behooves us who are past middle age to weigh well a step of such gigantic importance to us both. I acknowledge to forty-two, and you have told me that you are fifty-five. Are we not both too set in our ways to live together as husband and wife? I will admit that there are certain things about man in the abstract that I do not like. He has inherited from ages of acknowledged superiority dominating traits. Nevertheless man is like a great big good natured dog -unconscious of his power or, if conscious of it, loath to use it against our sex. He is unaware of the delicacy of a woman's feelings and often stalks through them in seven league boots. In this he is brutal, though without intending to be brutal.

I am going over in my mind some of these idiosyncrasies of man in the abstract with a view to determining whether I had better venture. I admit that I am undecided. I will try to arrive at a decision at an early date and inform you. Sincerely,

Elizabeth Montgomery.

My Dear Miss Montgomery.—You are not expected to marry an abstract man, but one Gregory. I do not look upon you simply as woman, but as one woman whom I love. Woman is a perpetual paradox, a chronic conundrum, an unknown quantity of unexpected possibilities and contradictions. She is man's greatest blessing and the ultimate cause of all his troubles. She is his chief inspiration to all that is good and noble and his greatest temptation to folly and sin.

You see by these few idiosyncrasies of your sex that a man who marries abstract woman is a fool. My love is all concentrated on an individual, and that individual is your own sweet self I am, with undying affection, yours,

Algernon Gregory.

Dear Mr. Gregory—If I was undecided before, your note has rendered me far more chary of linking my fate with one who has such peculiar ideas concerning my sex. Besides, since writing you other traits of men have come up before me for consideration, and I confess that many of them are not attractive. Man is a sensual creature, with no conception of a pure or holy love unalloyed with passion. He will roar like a lion at his wife before dinner and hand her his pocketbook after he has filled his stomach. He expects her to wear a smile when he comes home tired from his daily avocation, then proceeds at dinner to spill claret over her new tablecloth and after dinner to fill the curtains with the detestable odor of tobacco.

I am still thinking of your flattering proposition. Cordially,

Elizabeth Montgomery.

My Dear Miss Montgomery—I fear I did not make my meaning plain to you. If woman is a paradox, she is a very delightful paradox—that is, at times. If woman is the cause of man's trouble, it must be admitted to her credit that as soon as he shakes off a trouble with one woman he is crazy to walk into another trouble with another woman. Is it not his own fault if he complains when the woman he loves is silent, then wishes to bottle her when she talks him to death? And why will a man tire a woman with every form of devotion when there are so many examples of the clinging affection of women for their wife beating husbands? These are truths which invite our careful consideration. With the usual expressions of affection,

Algernon Gregory.

Mr. Gregory—I am thoroughly convinced that no man entertaining such notions of women in the abstract is fit to take a wife. The consequences of my acceptance of your offer, such consequences being derived from your letters, would be as follows: I should at once plunge you into trouble, tempt you to sin. You would wish to escape from your alliance with me to enter upon another alliance with another woman. I should tire of your devotion (or what you would doubtless call devotion) and encourage you to beat me.

Such being the case, I have decided to decline your very flattering offer with sincere thanks. Yours respectfully,

Elizabeth Montgomery.

Dear Miss Montgomery—If I were not "loath to use my power against your sex" I would be tempted to hold you to an accountability under the doctrine of categorical syllogisms for your logical deductions. On my part I began this series of notes by pronouncing your sex "an unknown quantity of unexpected possibilities." You have proved yourself a woman in the abstract as well as an individual. During this correspondence I have formed my conclusions as to what you would eventually do. I thought of what you might be expected to do, then assumed that you would do the opposite. My prognosis has been in every respect correct.

But enough of this. I pronounce you, woman as you are, the dearest object on earth, and I shall pass a lonely old age unless you make it immeasurably happy. Sweetheart, I am

Your Lover.

Dearest Algernon—Come and see me tomorrow evening. Bess.

GWENDOLIN ADAMS.

A DOUBLE ARISTOCRAT

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

During a winter that my husband and I spent in London we were presented at court and saw considerable of society. That season there were an unusual number of debutantes at the capital, among them Lady Gwendolen Fortesque. We met her at various functions and made her acquaintance, but I cannot say that between us there was anything more than an acquaintance. In the first place, she was a dozen years our junior, and, in the second, her position was far above the reach of untitled Americans. Nevertheless I should have liked to know her, for she impressed me as being a superior woman.

Several years after this winter in London while at my home in St. Louis I had occasion to visit a public school in which my daughter was studying. Entering a room where a class of girls were reciting, there on a raised dais standing beside a desk and speaking to her class with all the ease and dignity of an Oxford professor was the counterpart of the young lady I had met in London.

"What is the teacher's name?" I asked of one who was with me.

"Miss Grandon."

What an astonishing likeness! Was she or was she not Lady Gwendolen Fortesque? I have met many a person well known to me of whose identity I was not at some time sure, and it was natural that I did not feel certain of the identity of one whom I had seen but a few times. Besides, how could it be possible that a member of a select circle of the British aristocracy could be a teacher in a St. Louis public school? I was at the door when the class was dismissed and went to the desk to speak to Miss Grandon about my daughter.

Curiosity prompted me to inquire about Miss Grandon, but no one appeared to know anything about her, and the next autumn, when the school opened, she was not there. I wrote to friends in London asking of the whereabouts of Lady Gwendolen Fortesque and was told that she was traveling, supposedly in Egypt. This was puzzling, but I was obliged to be content, for I could learn nothing further from England. At home I asked where Miss Grandon had gone and was told that she had accepted a position in England. The Lady Gwendolen Fortesque, or Miss Grandon, whichever she might be, occupied a considerable portion of my thoughts for some time, then gradually dropped out.

When my daughter had finished her education I decided that she should make her debut in London. The introduction was successfully accomplished, and we were kindly treated by London society. One of the first questions I asked was what had become of Lady Gwendolen Fortesque. I was told that she was now Marchioness of Brocklebourne. All my confidence as to Miss Grandon and Lady Gwendolen Fortesque being one and the same person deserted me. Certainly I must have been mistaken in thinking I saw a momentary recognition in Miss Grandon's face.

The time came when at a reception we met the marchioness face to face. My daughter had been extremely fond of Miss Grandon and when she saw her double standing among a group of ladies was impelled to run toward her. She checked the impulse, however, or, rather, I did, and a few moments later the marchioness saw us. She looked away at once, but showed no especial embarrassment. We saw her no more that evening, but the next day whose card should be handed us but that of the Marchioness of Brocklebourne.

You may imagine that both my daughter and I lost no time in going down to greet her, and the moment Alice entered the room she rushed into her former teacher's arms.

Then, of course, we had the story. The marchioness' brother, oldest son and heir of the Earl of Herendeen, had become involved in speculation and had been proceeded against criminally and finally incarcerated. During this trouble her father spent every cent of unentailed property to assist his son. Lady Gwendolen Fortesque resolved to turn her education to advantage, secretly sailed for America, assumed the name of her mother's family and secured a position in the public schools of St. Louis. While there her father died, and under a British law that no peer of the realm can be arrested or imprisoned her brother, who became a peer at his father's death, was liberated. Almost at the same time the shares of a certain corporation in which the new earl was heavily interested advanced in value on the London Stock Exchange, and [illegible] cleared of debt. Lady Gwendolen returned to England, resumed her position without her friends knowing where she had been and married.

"Don't tell," she said. "As for me, I am not ashamed of my work, but my family have made every effort to conceal the knowledge that I have been a teacher in America."

The marchioness had not suffered from her experience in America. It had broadened her faculties and her character. She was a marked contrast to her sisters of the British nobility, whose notions had always been cramped by their position. We were invited to visit her and during our stay were made as much at home as in the house of any American. The marchioness is now one of the chief patrons and guides of education in England, though I believe it is still unknown where she derived her experience.

WORK FOR IDLE ACTORS

Speculative Theatre for Presenting Rejected Plays

Augustus Thomas, the guest of honor of the Actors' Society of America, the other night in New York suggested a plan by which actors now out of work might be benefited. Mr. Thomas was introduced by Thomas A. Wise the president of the society.

"I would suggest," said the playwright, "that a reading committee be appointed by the society for the purpose of reading plays that have been rejected. With the co-operation of the authors they might select plays that would seem to have a chance of success. Then they might secure a manager who would consent to take a chance, a theater that would be loaned to them for a performance or two and a staff who would work on spec.

"If the play was a success and the public showed a willingness to patronize it the rent of the theater could be paid, the manager could get his salary, the author his commissions and the actors proper pay. If it failed—why, nobody would be worse off than at present."

Mr. Thomas' suggestion brought out a good deal of applause. It was said afterward that the society would consider the proposition seriously and look around for a complaisant theater owner and manager.

Councilmen Schmidt and Fox of the health and police committee took the proper stand when they refused to sign an order permitting the two Astor street saloons, whose licenses were revoked by conviction of selling liquor to a minor, to reopen under an application for new licenses until after those applications have been passed upon by the council. It is not witin the province of the committee to grant or refuse licenses. Its duty is to investigate applications and report upon them with recommendations to the council, which may prove or disapprove those recommendations, as it sees fit. Under the law, no saloon can open for business until after its application for a license has been granted by the council in open session. This was the view taken of the matter by a majority of the health and police committee and it was the correct one. If these saloon men were so anxious to continue in business, they should have been careful not to break the law. Whether the council will grant them new licenses remains to be seen, but until the council acts upon the matter, the places should be kept closed.

A NEW ERA

It would seem as if the great industrial interests of the country—and the railroads are included in this statement—were now taking home to themselves the advice given John Pierpont Morgan by his father, when the former was about to enter upon his business career, and which, in substance, was: "Never entertain a doubt with regard to the future of the republic: have unlimited faith in the resources and possibiliites of the country, and govern yourself accordingly."

Well, to be brief upward of $10,000,000 will be expended, we are reliably informed, by the American Locomotive Company in the construction of its projected plant at Gary, Ind., plans for which are now in preparation. This plant, according to the officers of the company, will have a probable output of 1000 locomotives a year.

What is going to be done in the way of creating a market for this extraordinary production of locomotives? "The West," said President W. C. Brown of the New York Central railroad, at the annual dinner of the Albany Chamber of Commerce, "must have thousands of miles of new railroads to make possible the tremendous development of which that region is capable. Texas alone has fifty-five counties in which the whistle of the locomotive has never been heard, and the state of Texas can, with adequate railroad facilities, and proper cultivation, raise more cotton than is now produced in the United States, or could double the annual corn crops of the country. The East requires little in the way of new railroads, but it does need and must have, vast improvements in existing roads, especially in the Atlantic seaboard terminals. During the two decades from 1905 to 1925 the New York Central railroad will expend in such improvements an amount closely approximating, if it does not exceed, the original cost of the road."

Now the meaning of these two items of news, taken together and properly weighed, is that we are about to enter upon a period of agricultural and industrial development which will stand without a parallel in history. But this is not the best of it. He must be blind who does not see that, thanks to the moral forces recently liberated in this country, the fruit of the harvest about to be shall be shared not merely by the few but by the many. And as the years roll on we shall have more and more reason and greater and greater reward for having faith in the republic.

It has happened more than once that an army ride as far as from Washington to Warrenton might have changed history. Pope would have been glad to greet 5,000 or 6,000 horseback fighters coming up that way Aug. 28-30, 1862, and Lee would have been rattled by such a column in blue swooping down on his lines when he maneuvered in that vicinity in 1863. Good news doesn't depend upon horseback couriers as it did at the time of the celebrated ride from Ghent to Aix. Neither does the other kind, as when Paul Revere warned the Lexington farmers about the redcoats. But it was a blessed thing that Phil Sheridan could ride twenty miles and get in fresh. Had it been forty or even fifty that eventful morning of Cedar Creek he would have made it and perhaps saved the day just as he did.

Twenty-four hours before Sheridan drew rein on the battlefield at Cedar creek he was farther from the danger point than Warrenton is from Washington. Had he got the tip then which reached him twenty hours later he would have ridden thrice twenty miles, and there would have been no Cedar Creek, with its thrilling story of disaster held up—

Because
The sight of the master compelled it to pause.

Napoleon rode posthaste to the field of Marengo, reaching there at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, to be told "The battle is lost!" "But there's time to fight another one!" he exclaimed and made the great hit of his career. There was more to the Warrenton ride than the distance covered. It ended in a freezing rain, yet the president was good for another spurt if need be. Anyway, the official riding test is ninety miles in three days, and Stonewall Jackson's "foot cavalry" wouldn't have blinked at that. One good purpose of these tests is to knock out the notion that officers will ride to the battlefields of the future in "devil wagons." Test rides keep the horse where he belongs.

To Bore Iron.

The following method is said to be effective when one has not the proper tools for making a hole in an iron plate: Shape a stick of sulphur to the required dimensions of the hole, then heat the iron white hot at the place where it is to be bored and press the sulphur against it. Sulphuret of iron is formed, and the stick passes through the metal.

No Place Like Home.

A henpecked looking floorwalker in one of our large department stores was standing in the aisle with a pained and faraway look in his eyes. Suddenly a woman bustled up back of him and demanded, "Where are the children's dresses, sir?"

"In the bottom bureau drawer, Maria," said the floorwalker, hastily turning around. And then he fled.—Lippincott's Magazine.

One Sample Enough.

"Why do you keep your daughter practicing so incessantly on that piano piece?"

"I want to be sure she can play something when our friends ask to hear her."

"But suppose they want to hear her play something more?"

"Oh, there's no danger of that."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Friendly Advice.

"If I ever marry," said the bachelor who was beginning to be old, "I shall be careful to pick out a lady whom I can treat as my equal."

"Oh, say, old chap," answered the married man, "I wouldn't do that if I were you. I can tell you from experience that a woman who would submit to such treatment wouldn't be worth having around the house."—Chicago Record-Herald.

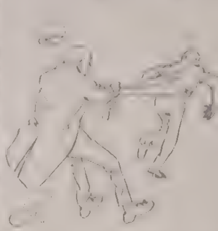
HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY



Too many people consider before they promise how they can best get out of keeping the promise.

Silence sounds awfully loud when the boss comes in unexpectedly.

The man who gets a cold reception sometimes turns to with so much vim and vigor that he makes a hot finish.

Alas
Good resolutions,
Like several Other things
Including birds
And money,
Are fitted out
With wings,
And they,
As you have noticed,
Are much inclined
To flit,
Although
In their existence
So brief
They made a hit.
As carefully
You signed them,
As though
They were a will
Or a receipt
Dictated
For some Forgotten bill,
And, very much
In earnest,
You took
The quill in hand
And said,
"By this same token
All habits
Bad are canned."
You were
A hopeful party
On that bright
New Year's morn
When these same
Resolutions
Right with the year
Were born,
And I could not
Reproach you
Because they were a bluff,
For man, you know,
Is mortal,
And that's excuse enough.

BATTLESHIPS COMING HOME

Fleet Halfway Across the Atlantic Ocean

Old Point Comfort, Va., Feb. 15—Half way across the Atlantic Ocean on the last long reach of their spectacular cruise around the world, the sixteen battleships of the "United States Atlantic Fleet" are steaming today in leisurely fashion towards the anchorage grounds of Hampton Roads from whence they sailed just fourteen months ago. During these months of record steaming the heavily armed fighting vessels have traveled approximately 45,000 miles and are returning in condition still fit for "a frolic or a fight." The cruise has been a veritable expedition of the seven seas and tasks heretofore deemed impossible for the modern ironclad have been accomplished with an ease bordering on the commonplace.

The stories of the cruise have been succeeding chapters of receptions, banquets, balls and merry making, but back of all this relaxation and entertaining in the hospitable ports of the two hemispheres has been a test of men and material which has placed the American navy in an enviable position before all the world.

The fleet will be met at sea, about 1000, miles from shore, by the third or "home" squadron of the Atlantic fleet, consisting of four battleships and five cruisers. Even the last leg of the famous journey is to be given over to work. There will be daily drills and maneuvers and inspection by the commander in chief of every vessel on the way over. President Roosevelt will greet the fleet on February 22, from the bridge of the Mayflower, at the point from which he bade farewell fourteen months ago.

There will be two strangers in the fleet when it reaches here the Nebraska and the Wisconsin, both Pacific-built, which replaced the Maine and Alabama, detached at San Francisco, and sent home in advance. The Maine will be the flagship of the welcoming squadron.

GRAND BALL AND RECEPTION

The Fort Stevens Social Club, will give a grand ball and reception in Astoria on the evening of Saturday, Feb. 20, in Logan Hall, to which a cordial invitation is extended to all friends and acquaintances. There will be excellent music. Admission $1.00. Ladies free. x

CLATSOP MILLS A MODEL PLANT

Sash and Door Factory Equipped with Latest Machinery

When the Clatsop Mill Company decided to engage in the manufactory of doors and sashes it had its architect visit the most successful plants of the kind on the Pacific coast and embody in its factory the most acceptable form of construction. As a result it probably has the most complete plant of the kind anywhere and there are only a very few with equal capacity. In addition to its compactness, which is a great saving in labor, it is excellently lighted by means of skylights and its ventilation is complete. On entering the factory the first impression is of its cleanliness for a place of that character as what particles of saw dust or shavings that escape the automatic suction pipes are constantly being swept up. The Clatsop Mill Company claims that it makes the best doors in the world and sashes of equal quality and at the same time more economically than any other factory on the Pacific coast. As a proof of this it is running to its full capacity, employing about 150 men and boys and it is unable to keep up with orders offered from all parts of the country but a larger proportion go to Mississippi valley points. The daily capacity of the factory is 500 doors and 1,200 windows and to do this 41,600 feet of spruce and fir lumber, the windows being make out of spruce and the doors out of spruce and fir. Notwithstanding the high class of material used and workmanship that finished product is sold, in some grades, cheaper than the scheduled prices of other factories. This fact must be attributed to a large extent to the superintendent, Mr. Tibbetts, who has invented several attachments to the machinery that are great labor savers, one in particular permitting one man to do the work that it prevously took three to do. Then he has also devised a new way of mortising the doors together that is simple strong and at the same time quickly adjustable. When the lumber enters the factory from the mill it passes through a continous process until it comes out the other end in the form of the finished product and the different machines are so compactly arranged that no operator is compelled to move from his position and lose time by having to go after material. During the early operation of the factory it did not prove as profitable as had been anticipated and its managerment was changed several times but now it has made up a considerable deficit and is a valable asset to the other operations of the company. Anyone interested in wood working or in intricate machinery would be well paid to visit the factory end and watch its operetions.

HINDUS SEEKS BIG DAMAGES

For Detention in Immigration Sheds at Vancouver

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 15—Barbari Singh and ten other Hindus are seeking to recover $20,000 from Dr. A. S. Monroe, medical inspector of immigration for the federal government at the port of Vancouver. The claim is for wrongful detention in the immigrant shed at the Canadian Pacific wharf in March of last year. Behind the legal action lies a story of the arrival of these Hindus in Canada.

They came here from Suva, Fiji Islands, but at the time they arrived there was in force an order delegating to the minister of the interior the power to deport at his discretion aliens who did not come direc to Canada from the land of their birth by continuous passage. The Hindus, having come from Suva, were detained, but subsequently the order was knocked out in the courts. Now the Hindus want substantial monetary balm from Dr. Monroe.

MRS. SHELTON AS GOVERNOR

Announces what Her Policy Will be

Salem, Or., Feb. 15—Mrs. C. B. Shelton, who, as private secretary to the governor, will be in charge of the executive office when the governor leaves for Washington to take his seat as senator, has no intention of making radical changes in official policy. As acting governor it is presumed she will be nonpartisan. When asked today regarding the policies she intends to pursue, she said:

"It will be my policy to treat everyone with the same courtesy that has been accorded visitors to the executive office in the past, and to perform all the duties that usually fall to the private secretary to the governor. I do not intend to issue any pardons. I should like, however, to be instrumental in creating a fund to aid discharged prisoners when they are turned out of the penitentiary after serving their terms. I shall try to show that a woman can conduct the affairs of a governor's office as well as a man can."

Speaking of Mrs. Shelton's qualifications, Governor Chamberlain said:

"Mrs. Shelton became stenographer for the law firm of Chamberlain & Thomas in 1895, and became stenographer in the executive office in 1902. In the law office she was as useful as a young lawyer would have been in preparing papers and looking after office business. Since coming to Salem she has not only performed a large part of the stenographic work, but has assisted the private secretary in his work. She has been not only a faithful woman in her work, but has been tactful in her intercourse with persons two have business in the executive office."

DASHING, ROYSTERING PETRUCHIO,

Manager Hanlin has given evidence of his desire to please the best class of theatre goers in this city by booking Charles B. Hanford in the scenic revival of "The Taming of the Shrew" which will be seen at the Astoria theatre Wednesday Feb. 17. This play is regarded by authorities as the most amusing of Shakespear's comedies. There is no modern farce which can equal it in respect to genuine fun. Nearly every line in the play conceals a laugh and every situation is a mine of merriment. As the dashing roystering Petruchio Mr. Hanford has scored, it is stated, the most conspicuous succes of his career. The role of Katherine will be portrayed by Miss Marie Drofnah.

LOST—Pocketbook, containing check for over eighty dollars and some cash, Finder will please return check to the Hammond lumber company.

Arrangements to provide for the overflow in the High school have been completed as the play room in the rear of the building will be fitted up a school room but has not been positivel decided which grade will occupy it.

On next Friday evening the Astoria school team will visit Newberg and hold a debate with the High school team of that city. The question for debate, a freak for children to discuss, is that the state school fund should be apportioned to the different counties in proportion to the number of teachers in each rather than in proportion to the number of pupils, as at present.

A resolution will be introduced at this evening's session of the city council directing the chief of police and other police officers to strictly enforce the state statutes on gambling and Sunday closing of saloons, notwithstanding the action of the police commission in the matter, and providing that the failure of any officer to enforce those laws shall cause the forfiecture of cash officer's salary.

Already the Astoria Amatuer Athletic Association has outgrown its new building and additional floor space is being considered by the directors. The plan under contemplation is to occupy the lot, immediately east of the present building and have an annex erected on it. This lot is owned by Judge J. Q. A. Bowlby and he is looking into the matter. The club is much more successful than anticipated as it has over 600 members and new applications are rapidly being received.

A suit was filed in the circuit court on Saturday evening by Joshua Tarkainen, administrator of the estate of Henry Tarkainen, deceased, against the Columbia Contract Company of Portland, owner of the steamer Daniel Kern. The suit is brought to recover damages in the sum of $7500 for the death of Henry Tarkainen, a fisher man, who was drowned some months ago as the result of a collision between his fishing boat and the steamer. His funeral will be held on Tuesday from the family residence and the interment will be in the Lewis and Clark cemetery.

Today the collections are coming in more rapidly and during the morning over $6000 was paid in. Only one of the timber land syndicates has paid thus far but the others are expected within the next week or ten days, and these will swell the receipts materially.

Judge McBride announced today that he will hear all the applications for admissions to citizenship set for the February trem of court at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon. He will also set several cases for trial tomorrow, as it is understood some of the defendants in certain criminal cases which have already been set for hearing, will plead guilty. The case against Charles Bertelsen charging with pointing a loaded gun at Patrolman Houghton was set for trial on Tuesday, but there is a possibility that it may be postponed on account of one of the principal witnesses being ill in the hospital.

The city council will meet in regular session this evening, but it is not expected that a great amount of business will come up at this meeting. Ordinances will be introduced to improve Eighteenth street, between Exchange and Grand, and to improve Hume avenue, between Commercial and Duane and there will be a resolution declaring the intention to redeck Commercial street between fourteenth and Seventeenth streets. The ordinance granting a franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company for an electric line over certain streets in the city and an ordinance to vacate a portion of a street in the Hinman tract will come up for third reading and final vote.

Negotiations are about to be closed for one of the largest timber deals ever made in the Pacific northwest, the purchase price being approximately $4,000,000. The sale pending includes the entire holdings on the Columbia river of the Benson Logging company. Besides some 40,000 acres of timber in Columbia county, the deal includes a system of logging railroads, logging camps and equipment to a vale of many thousand dollars in the vicinity of Clatskanie and the large log rafts in course of construction at that place for transportation to San Diego next summer. The camp in the Benson holdings is one of the largest on the coast, several hundred men being employed, the year round. The Crossett Timber company, of Iowa, is the intending purchaser and the deal is being negotiated through the large timber brokerage fim of J. D. Lacey & Co., of Chicago. While no official information has been given out concerning the transaction about to be closed, the Lacey people's local representative admitted yesterday that he has a large force of cruisers in the field estimating the stumpage. It will take possibly three months to complete the stupendous task of going over the entire holdings, but this is considered a brief period of time in veiw of the magnitude of the transaction.

Late Saturday evening what is know as the Kruse cottage at Gearhart Park was totally destroyed by fire as was its contents entailing a loss of $7500. The cottage was recently purchased by Mr. Kruse from his wife, the couple having separated, and the fire has been the cause of many rumors of incendiarism, but the indications are the blaze was caused by a fire started in the stoves in the house, when Mrs. Kruse went there to remove her personal belongings, and was purely accidental. Mrs. Kruse declares she was led into a trap by which the house was ignited. Her idea is that an attempt was made to fasten incendiarism upon her Chimneys in the cottage, she alleges, had been closed and blocked so as to cause a conflagration as soon as a fire was started in any of the rooms. And when the flames burst forth, half a dozen men stood by and watched them, refusing for a time to aid her in saving her own personal property or to extinguish the flames. Mr. Kruse said he could not understand who could have set fire to the cottage, if it was an incendiary fire, for he said he had no enemies at Gearhart. "The idea is ridiculous," said Mr. Kruse, "that I should have had any part in trying to burn the place, for it is my property and I should be the only one to lose by its destruction. I suppose it was an act of revenge, but it was against me and no one else."

HOLD UP MAN IS CAPTURED

Had Demanded Large Sum From Kansas City Merchant

Kansas City, Feb. 16—Armed with a revolver in one hand and a dynamite bomb in the other a man apparently about 40 years of age, today entered the home of Lawrence M. Jones, president of the Jones Brothers Drygoods Company, in this city and demanded $70,000. By a ruse Jones overpowered the man, who was arrested.

At the police station the bomb thrower gave his name as C. H. Garnett. He called at the Jones home and asked to be seated in the library. Jones entered the room and faced a revolver and was told to be seated. Garnett then took a dynamite bomb from under his coat and demanded $7,000 or be blown to pieces. In an endeavor to calm the man Jones talked for over half an hour. Mrs. Jones, feeling apprehensive on account of her husbands long interview entered the library. The inturder commanded her to be seated and the conversation was resumed. Chester L. Jones' son and secretary in his father's company, entered the room and was ordered to be seated. Jones Sr. then suggested he did not have the necessary funds in the house and for the man to accompany him from the house to his bank and this was agreed to and as they were passing through the lower hall Jones stepped sudderly back and placing a foot in front of the visitor hurled him to the floor. Jones and his son then overpowered the man, stripping him of his weapons and called the police. The bomb did not explode when the intruder fell. Jones is reputed as a millionaire. At the police station the man said he had planned after securing the money from Jones to take him to Independence, a suburb, where he would have chained him in a house fitted for the purpose. He had been planning the scheme for several months.

PARLIAMENT OPENED TODAY

King Speaks of Friendly Relations with America

London, Feb. 16—Great crowds gathered in the vicinity of the parliament building today, the occasion being the opening of parliament by the king, who was accompanied by the queen. The speech from the throne contained no surprises and the projected legislation forecasted by His Majesty was largely social in character. The king opened with a graceful allusion to his recent visit to Berlin as tending to strengthen the relations between the two countries.

The king referred to the water-ways and fisheries agreements with America and said: Satisfactory progress has been made in negotiations on outstanding questions with the United States.

A treaty to regulate the use of waterways adjacent to the international boundary between Canada and United States has been arranged and this question, being one of special Canadian interest, the advice of the dominion government was sought and followed throughtout. My ambasasdor at Washington has negotiated also, with the co-operation of the Canadian and Newfoundland ministers of justice, an agreement for reference to arbitration of the North American fisheries question and I trust this agreement will be the means of effecting a final friendly settlement of matters, which have been long under discussion between this country and the United States."

... PEOPLE OF THE DAY ...

New York Central's New Head

William C. Brown who succeeds W. H. Newman as head of the New York Central lines, has been vice president of that system since 1902. He is a practical railroad man, having commenced at the bottom and worked his way to the top. Before joining the New York Central he was vice president and general manager of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad. He is fifty-five years old, was born in Herkimer county, N. Y., and entered the railway service in 1869, his first employment being that of a section hand with the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road. He learned telegraphy and obtained a position with the Illinois Central road as train dispatcher.

WILLIAM C. BROWN.

He occupied similar positions with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy roads. The other positions he has held include general manager of the Hannibal and St. Joseph and Council Bluffs, Chicago, Burlington and Kansas City and St. Louis, Keokuk and Northwestern railways and vice president and general manager of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern. From the latter office he was called to that of vice-president and director of the New York Central.

Big Stick Versus Pitchfork

Benjamin Ryan Tillman senior senator from South Carolina who was recently called upon to defend himself from a personal attack made by the president long ago won the sobriquet of Pitchfork Ben. This was before he had been invested with the senatorial toga. In the course of a [illegible] in his native state referring to President Cleveland, he said "But [illegible] I go to the senate I promise that I will use a pitchfork in the president's fat old ribs."

Senator Tillman has been a persistent foe of the negro in politics and assails the race in and out of season. He passed a bill disfranchising them when he was governor. He held up the nomination of Crum for collector of Charleston for four years because Crum is a negro. Yet the superintendent of his plantation is Ben, a negro he has had with him for over twenty five years and in whose charge he leaves his family and all his interests when he goes to Washington alone.

BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN.

A farmer by occupation, he was twice the candidate of the farmers for gubernatorial honors, winning after a hot fight in 1890 and "walking in" two years later. He has been elected to the United States senate three times, his present term expiring in 1913.

..INTELLIGENCE OF POLLY..

The man with a sailor-like appearance murmured something about having got on the wrong street and tried to dodge when the lady ran down the steps and made for him.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" she exclaimed as she took her stand squarely in front of him to prevent escape.

"You ain't the lady I sold the parrot to, are you?" he asked, throwing back his head and looking at her with one eye.

"Yes, I am."

"An' how's the parrot treatin' you? Fine, I warrant."

"You're a swindler."

He dropped his head and shook it deprecatingly, still keeping one eye closed. "You told me," she went on, with increasing indignation, "that parrot was one of the most intelligent animals of its species and that it had a gift of language which you had never heard surpassed."

"Did I tell you all them things?" he inquired.

"You unquestionably did."

"Well, then I'll stand by 'em. You got a prize, an' you don't appreciate it. That bird has even more smartness than I give him credit fur. Talk about intelligence! He's a marvel. An' he kin talk, too, though I never pretended he had had the advantage of good society. He kin roll off observations of the most p'inted character without end, though I call on you to remember that there waren't nothin' said about politeness."

"But it doesn't say a word."

"That's jes' it, ma'am. That's what shows his intelligence. The minute he seen you he knowed you was a lady an' he holds his tongue."

Biograph Films . .

EDGAR ALLEN POE

A picture story founded on incidents in his career, which, while not pretended to be biographical, is intended to show him as a man of heart, in contradiction to the calumnies of his enemies. It portrays his devotion for his dying wife, and the writing of that wonderful masterpiece, "The Raven," for which he receives the paltry sum of ten dollars. The subject as a whole is indeed a work of art, and most timely, commemorating the seasons of his birthday centennial.

A WREATH IN TIME

Mr. Goodhusband goes out with the boys to make a night of it, and telegraphs his wife he left town on business. The evening paper recounts the wreck and killing of all on board of the train he was supposed to take. Mrs. Goodhusband at once gets ready for his interment, ordering the floral designs, etc. When he appears in the morning and finds he is supposed to be dead, he makes the bluff that he was the only one saved and tells how he tried to help the others, when the morning paper arrives and states the account of the wreck was a mistake—it never happened. On the recommendation of the health and police committee retail liquor licenses were granted to Johnson & Engstrom, August Danielson, D. J. Cummins and Wirkkala & Vanek.

Resolutions were adopted as follows: Accepting the bid of C. G. Palmberg for the improvement of the alleyway in Adairs; declaring the intention to redeck Commercial street between Fourteenth and Seventeenth, directing the board of assesors to make the assessment for the improvement of the alleyway in Adairs, appointing George A. TRADITIONAL SCOTCH RING

One of the Royal Jewels Had a Melancholy History

The traditional history of the [illegible] of the most tr[illegible] to [illegible] choly character. [illegible] lieved that it was the favorite ring of Mary Stuart and that after her judicial murder in Fotheringay castle it was transmitted to her son. From James it descended to Charles I [illegible] whose coronation at Scone in 1633 it played a distinct part. Once more did this ill fated ring [illegible] ure it an untimely and ill merited death, for with almost his last breath upon the scaffold at Whitehall Charles bequeathed it to Bishop Juxon in trust for his son.

In due course of time the ring came into the possession of James II and was carried away with him on his flight to the continent. When, however, he was detained by the fishermen at [illegible], the ring which had been secreted in the king's underclothing only escaped robbery by the luckiest of mistakes on the part of the sailor who searched him. Thus the ring was passed on uninjured to James' descendants till by bequest of Cardinal York it became the property of the reigning dynasty once more and was by them replaced among the royal jewels of Scotland, from which it had been separated for many a long year.

TEST FOR NAVY OFFICERS

May Show Physical Fitness by Walking or Riding

Fifty miles on foot, ninety miles on horseback or 100 miles astride a bicycle, all within three days, is the choice given the navy officers who will have to qualify each year hereafter as to their physical fitness for service. The order was recently issued by Secretary Newberry at Washington, and a hollow groan sounded down the corridors and reverberated in the halls of the navy department.

The order affects all officers on the active list of the navy below the rank of rear admiral and above the rank of lieutenant. None is to be required to take the physical test before July 1 unless he makes special request on the secretary of the navy. This will give the corpulent sea fighters who have long occupied swivel chairs an opportunity to get into fit condition for the ordeal.

The tests are to be made each year. The officers have their choice of any one of the following schedules:

To walk a distance of fifty miles during three consecutive days in a total of twenty hours, including rests, the walk in any one day to be during consecutive hours.

To ride on horseback a distance of ninety miles during three consecutive days, the ride on two days to be concluded within seven hours and thirty minutes each after starting and one within six hours, including proper rests.

To ride on a bicycle a distance of 100 miles during three consecutive days, in a total of seventeen hours, including rests, the ride on any two days to be during consecutive hours.

"The last one is bound to be the most popular," said a young naval officer. "Do you notice there isn't anything in the regulations that bars motor bicycles?"

When You Travel.

Don't wait until you reach the station, a few minutes before it is time for the train to start, before you find out the time for starting, arriving at your destination and the time of connection. Other passengers wish to take the same train and must buy tickets. And don't argue the question of the price of your ticket with the ticket seller. The price is settled by the managers and directors of the road. If the price is unjust, address a communication to them and stay at home till the price is satisfactory or pay it and keep still.—Exchange.

An Armed Crab.

"This crab," said the keeper of the aquarium, "goes armed in his native state. In his claws, which are too weak to fight with, he always carries sea anemones.

"The crab is of the genus Melia. He lives among beds of coral in tropical seas. The anemones he carries—one in each claw, like a nosegay—are stinging, poisonous ones.

"They are his defense against enemies, and when I see a soldier carrying a gun I think to myself that there is a little pink crab in the sea that is quite as wise as any soldier."

The Prolix Witness.

A little over twenty years ago a judge in New Zealand was obliged to issue an order to the effect that "in future singing would not be taken as evidence" in his court. It was the constant habit of the Maoris when pleading a cause to sing long and quite poetic sagas. As these generally began with legends of their remote ancestors, sometimes many hours, even days, would be spent before the point, possibly trivial, was reached. There is something Gilbertian in this idea, but any old New Zealander could vouch for the facts.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

∴ Seeing Bentley Off ∴

By ETHEL SEVERO

Amy Sheldon, leaning idly over the steamer's rail, watched the crowd on the pier and wished, just for a moment, that there had been an opportunity to get word to some of the people she could trust.

This was all so different from her last sailing, and it brought more sharply to her memory the scene of two days before when she had given Dick Nesbit his ring and had declared that she hated the very sight of his face.

She had last sailed in June, and the pier had been crowded, but until the very last she had seen Dick's smiling face framed in an indistinct blur of other faces. Now she would look in vain, if, indeed, she looked at all.

She had about decided to go to her stateroom until the boat should swing into the stream.

She half turned to suggest to her aunt that course of action when she caught sight of Dick making his way through the crowd about the gangway, and presently he came on board with a heavy suit case that seemed to argue his determination to take passage on the Aurania.

Amy half turned back to the rail; then she turned again and made her way to the lower deck, where she knew that the purser's office was located.

Passing rapidly through the gangway, she saw that it really was Dick, though he was in earnest conversation with a man in blue and brass, and he did not see her.

He had his pocketbook in his hand, and with flashing eyes Amy made her way back to the upper deck, where her aunt still sat in the winter sunshine enjoying the bustle that preceded the departure.

One of the most admirable things about Aunt Molly was her willingness to do what her tempestuous little niece wished to do, but even the usually placid Aunt Molly demurred when Amy stormed up and demanded that they leave the ship at once.

"But I've said goodby to the Brookes, and Mrs. Brooke is going to send all our mail in care of the London agent," protested the little old lady. "We can't go back home after telling the Brookes that we were to be gone until fall. She will tell all her friends and"—

"And that's just the trouble," interrupted Amy, with a stamp of her little foot. "Mrs. Brooke has been talking—already. She must have gone to the telephone the moment we left last night and told everybody she ever knew."

"But what will Dick think if you start and then turn back?" reminded Aunt Molly, determined not to give up a spring in the south of France without exhausting every argument.

"That's just the trouble," explained Amy. "That horrid Mrs. Brooke must have called him up last night after promising that she would not tell a soul. He's on board. I just saw him in the purser's office buying his ticket."

"I thought that they bought them at the dock," objected Aunt Molly, but Amy shook her head.

"You can buy tickets on board at the last moment. I suppose that Dick—I mean Mr. Nesbit—had to wait until he could settle about his practice being looked after—not that there is so much to the practice," she added spitefully. "I don't believe that he's been in court this month."

"Is he altogether to blame for that?" asked Aunt Molly, fencing for time in which to marshal other arguments.

"And suppose that I did let him waste a lot of time with me!" retorted Amy. "I've been telling him for the last month that I was tired of seeing him about and that our engagement was all a mistake."

"Then I don't think that he is following you," advanced Aunt Molly. "Dick is not the sort of man to follow when he is not wanted. If he is on board it is because he has to reach Europe by the first steamer, and he won't bother us in the least."

"Because I shan't give him a chance," explained Amy promptly. "I am going down to the stateroom to have the steward take our steamer trunks back to the dock. It is lucky that we arranged to have our other baggage follow."

"But what will people say?" demanded Aunt Molly as she rose and prepared to follow her energetic niece. It was plainly to be seen that the trip was off, or at least postponed and Aunt Molly knew the signs well enough to realize when resistance was useless.

Amy, by dint of liberal [illegible], managed to collect her things on the dock just as the final warning sounded. For the moment it was useless to try to leave the dock.

The port captain stood beside the remaining gangway ready to superintend the lowering of the last connection between ship and shore and a line was stretched to keep back those who had not gone to the end of the pier to wave a last farewell.

The sides of the ship were lined with eager faces, some smiling, some bedewed with tears. Aunt Molly stood guard over their belongings and looked wistfully at the fortunate ones on the decks.

Just as the signal was given to hoist, Dick Nesbit appeared at the head of the gangplank and dashed down, his feet not touching the dock before the upper end of the plank was hoisted clear of the ship's side.

He sprang lightly aside to escape the swaying edge of the chute and in doing so almost bumped into Aunt Molly, who was making a brave endeavor not to look disappointed.

The black bulk moved slowly past the open section of the shed, but Aunt Molly did not see it now. She was busy watching Amy and Dick.

Nesbit, after a single glance at the frowning girl, devoted his conversation to Aunt Molly, with whom he was a favorite.

"Did you get afraid of seasickness at the last moment?" he demanded gayly. "I didn't even know that you were thinking of going abroad or I should have sent some flowers."

Aunt Molly glanced triumphantly at Amy, but that crimson cheeked young woman gave no sign that she had heard the disclaimer.

"I came precious close to taking the trip myself," continued Dick. "You know what a pest Fred Bentley always is when there is a wedding. He always wants to decorate the trunk and do all those things that aggravate the bridal pair.

"When it came to getting married himself he was scared stiff, for he knew of a dozen chaps who had it in for him. He married Belle very quietly last night and came aboard this morning before daylight. Some reporter asked Ben Houghton about it, and we found that Fred was locked in his stateroom.

"Trimmins, the purser on this ship, is a jolly sort of chap. I've crossed with him three times, and I know him very well. The boys got me to bustle down here with a lot of junk in a suit case. I gave Trimmins some money to tip Fred's cabin and saloon stewards, and Fred's going to get a daily hint from his victims. I was so busy explaining that Trimmins had fairly to fire me down the gangplank."

"And you were not sailing yourself?" asked Aunt Molly.

"I only wish that I could—to see the fun," declared Dick, with twinkling eyes. "If it hadn't been that I caught a big case last night I think I should have done so. I bet Fred's sorry by this time tomorrow that he ever heard of white ribbons and old shoes as decorations for trunks and hacks."

Amy was watching the steamer swinging into midstream with the aid of two bustling little tugs, but from the corner of her eye Aunt Molly saw that the girl heard.

"And, speaking of hacks," ran on Dick, "shall I get you one?"

Without waiting for an answer he tore off up the dock to retain one of the few waiting hacks, then hurried back to escort Aunt Molly and the trunks.

It was not until he had helped Aunt Molly into the cab and had turned to show a similar courtesy to Amy that she spoke.

"I thought that Mrs. Brooke told you we were leaving on this steamer and that you were following me," she said hurriedly. "I am sorry that I was so silly, and yet I am glad, because I know now that it was just because I was tired and silly that I broke the engagement. Will you come over tonight, Dick—and bring back the ring?"

"Will I?" he echoed jubilantly. "I should say that I would. And, do you know, I am almost sorry that I put up that job on Fred."

"Don't be afraid," reassured Amy smilingly. "That case will be over and we'll be on our own honeymoon before he gets back to play tricks on us. If you had not played the trick I should have sailed, and you"—

"Would not be the happiest man in town," completed Dick. "I guess Fred was of some use, after all."

The Surprisers Surprised.

It was quite an informal little evening gathering—Mr. and Mrs. Candor, hosts, and Mr. and Mrs. Funniman, guests. The program consisted of a little chat, a little supper and a little whist, of which the little chat—Mr. Candor not yet back from the office—has just begun.

"There!" exclaimed delightful Mr. Funniman. "If that's not Candor's step in the passage I'm not Funniman! Let's play a trick on him. My wife and I will hide behind the curtains here and you must tell him that your expected guests have not arrived. Then we'll step out and surprise him. Ha, ha!"

No sooner said than done. The skittish pair hived behind the curtains just as old Candor entered the room.

"Where are the Funnimans?" he exclaimed.

"I'm afraid, John, they have disappointed us," pretended Mrs. Candor. "I had a wire not half an hour ago."

"Right-ho!" chimed Mr. Candor. "And jolly glad I am about it! I never did like 'em! Let's have some dinner!"—London Scraps.

FROW FRISCO TO NEW YORK

M. E. Howlett Expects to Cross Continent in Ninety Days

Morris E. Howlett, the professional four-in-hand whip, it was said the other day will about the middle of June probably make the attempt to drive the road coach Magnet from San Francisco to New York, a hitherto unattempted feat in road coach driving. The present intention is to start from the Palace hotel, in San Francisco, and finish at the Holland House, Fifth avenue and Thirtieth street, New York city.

The Magnet will be sent to San Francisco by rail. Mr Howlett's plan is to follow the old overland route used by the forty-niners between the Pacific coast and the Missouri river and then proceed through Iowa and Illinois into Chicago and from Chicago follow the lines of the New York Central and Lake Shore railroads into Albany, from which city an attempt will be made to drive to the Holland House in New York, in one day.

The distance by road will be nearly 4,000 miles, which is about 700 miles greater than the shortest railroad distance between New York and San Francisco. From San Francisco to Albany only green horses hired en route will be used, and the calculation is that about 1,500 animals will be required. Mr. Howlett will drive his own horses from Albany.

Ninety days is the time limit in which Mr. Howlett hopes to make the journey. It will be by nearly 2,000 miles the longest coach trip ever made, the longest similar American journey being from the Missouri river to San Francisco.

"Do you ever tell your wife that she is beautiful or take her a box of candy or a bouquet?"

"Nope; I don't have to."

"No one is compelled to, but it is well to do it."

"Not for me. I can't afford to arouse her suspicions."—Houston Post.

"Parduer," said the tall tramp at the water tank, "yer don't seem much worried about dem openings in the underpart of yer shoe."

"I guess not," chuckled the short tramp as he warmed his feet on the hot cinders. "Dey are de windows of me sole."—Chicago News.

"And you have made Jim Jackson a deacon in your church?"

"Yes, sah—dat is, he's a brevet deacon, sah."

"And what is a brevet deacon, George?"

"He's a deacon dat don't handle no money, sah."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"After a man has made millions you'd think his wife and daughters would let him rest."

"And don't they?"

"Naw, they don't. Then he usually has to buckle down to correct his grammer and table manners."—Kansas City Journal.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the unfortunate litigant, "that the whole property in dispute has been wasted in costs?"

"I said it had been absorbed, my friend, not wasted," replied the astute lawyer who got the most of it.—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Greene—Funny how mothers will believe that their own children are so much better than anybody else's children.

Mrs. Gray—I know it. If all children, now, were like my dear little Georgie, it would not be so strange.—Boston Transcript.

The Oregonian appears to be greatly disturbed over the fact the Astoria representatives told the farmers of the Inland Empire some truths about how a few people are retarding the improvement of the Columbia river bar, simply to enrich themselves and to the detriment of the residents of the balance of the state and of the inland empire. Ranting will do little good, as the farmers of the wheat growing section have become tired of being held up and robbed and are making investigations for themselves.

Oregon has one-sixth the standing timber of the United States, or more than any other state. The government estimate is three hundred billion feet. A vast undeveloped area now available to the homemaker and investor will go on the market in 1909. The state has arable land enough for twenty million people. The present population is 700,000. She does more than any other state to advance irrigation, being the largest contributor to the United States reclamation fund. Is a natural dairying state. The annual product is $17,000,000, an increase from $5,000,000 five years ago. The western portion has pasture every month in the year. Oregon apples, pears and cherries find their way to the tables of sovereigns and multimillionaires of every civilized land they are the best. Returns of from $300 to $1000 per acre on fruit lands are not exceptional. The poultry products are $5,000,000 annually The local market demands three times that amount at highest prices. Oregon has water powers, being rapidly developed, sufficient to turn all the machinery in the United States.

If Secretary Root and Ambassador Bryce have agreed on a Newfoundland fisheries treaty, as stated, it is not likely that Premier Bond of Newfoundland will place any barriers in the way of its ratification. Bond was co-author of the Bond-Blaine treaty of some fifteen years ago, which, however, never went into effect because of the opposition of Canada. Sir Robert Bond has always been favorable to the closest possible relations between Newfoundland and the United States.

That the Canadian loan of $30,000,000 has fallen flat in London, only about 50 per cent having been subscribed when it closed, last Friday, is not very surprising. Canada has been spending vast sums during the last few years in railroad building, canal development and in other public works, and the general opinion is that the expenditures have been on a much more elaborate scale than the population and present resources of the country warrant. Economy is often as necessary with nations as with individuals.

GRAND BALL AND RECEPTION

The Fort Stevens Social Club, will give a grand ball and reception in Astoria on the evening of Saturday, Feb. 20, in Logan Hall, to which a cordial invitation is extended to all friends and acquaintances. There will be excellent music. Admission $1.00. Ladies free. x

THE YOSEMITE RESERVOIR

The Scenic Preservation society enters the lists prepared to "fight fire with fire" in the matter of the Yosemite National park as the site of a municipal reservoir. Members of the society dispute the proposition of the petitioners for the grant that "the greatest good to the greatest number" will be secured if congress sanctions a huge retaining dam across Tuolumne river at the foot of Hetch-Hetchy valley, one of the finest gorges in the whole reservation. The water in the reservoir would of course be useless for drinking purposes unless a large area of the park drained by the river should be practically alienated from public use. Upon this point the New York Independent says:

> The issue involves more than the destruction of Hetch-Hetchy. The reservoir grant assumes a divided use of the Tuolumne watershed by the city as a source of supply and by the public as a recreation ground. The present state of sanitary progress holds these two uses to be incompatible without filtration or other purification process. The city advocates pass by nearer sources on the ground that they require filtration. Therefore the next move will be the restriction or exclusion of the public for camping and recreation from more than 500 square miles of the Yosemite National park. This includes the Tuolumne canyon and Tuolumne meadows. The former is the most remarkable canyon in the United States, the latter the finest and most spacious alpine valley for camping purposes in all the Sierra Nevada.

Half a billion is "a good deal o' money" for the Panama ditch, but then to think of all the water high finance can pour into a $500,000,000 proposition if ever Uncle Sam wants to "hock" the securities.

France also wants two cent letter postage. Now, if the people interested can be taught to write readable letters in the language foreign to them this cut won't put much of a hole in the net revenues.

The Workman and His Tools.

It is related in "Voice and Violin" that "a well known orchestral conductor was once much annoyed by the constant tuning of a violin, which continued long after the musicians were at their desks, whereupon he remarked rather sharply to a novice: 'My dear fellow, do please stop all that tuning! You ought to be able to play in tune when the strings are not exactly correct.' "

This calls to mind two occurrences in Washington. On one occasion a certain foreman of binding in the government printing office was compelled to call a bookbinder's attention to a poor piece of workmanship. The binder made some reference to his poor tools, whereupon the foreman made the epigrammatic remark that "a good workman can do good work with any kind of tools."

Not long ago the newspapers had a story of a certain old darky whose education was sadly neglected. He was employed in a cigar store on Pennsylvania avenue.

One day after finishing his chores the proprietor and several others saw him sitting on a box with a newspaper, apparently reading. The proprietor, knowing that he could not read, said to him:

"Why, Abe, where did you learn to read? I didn't know you could read, and, by the way, Abe, you've got the paper upside down."

"Dat's all right, boss, dat's all right. A good reader can read mos' anyways."

Terrible Disaster in a Mexican Theatre

Mexico City, Mexico, Feb. 16—Three hundred people were burned to death and many injured in a fire which destroyed the Flores theatre in Acapulco last night. News of the disaster reached here this afternoon, telegraph communications with Acapulco having been destroyed last night and today, owing to the fact that the telegraph office adjoining the theatre was burned and all wires were put out of commission. The theatre was a wooden structure and last night more than 10,000 people crowded into it to witness a special performace in honor of Governor Flores of the State of Guerreo.

NEW CALL PORT ON COOK INLET

Company to Build Wharf at Port Graham

Seattle, Feb. 16—W. J. Erskine, general manager of the Alaska Commercial Company, which has for thirty years maintained a string of trading posts on the southern coast of Alaska, is authority for the statement that Port Graham, on Cook inlet, fifteen miles north of Seldovia, will be the principal port of entry for the Alaska Commercial Company hereafter.

"We are sending the lumber north," said Mr. Erskine last evening, "to construct a wharf, warehouse, store and the other necessary buildings at Port Graham. It was surveyed last summer by Capt. Rhoades, of the steamer Patterson.

"Port Graham is a deep water harbor, affording the very best of shelter, and after sending what material is necessary to construct the wharf and warehouse we shall ship the material for the construction of a machine shop and the devices to equip it, for it will be at that point that all the repair work of the Alaska Commercial Company will be done. On the next trip of the Ohio the first consignment of material will be sent north

"After this, Port Graham will become a port of call for the vessels of the Alaska Coast Company and the Alaska Steamship Company. While Seldovia has been headquarters heretofore, that place will not be left off the map, and vessels will call there as usual. Port Graham, however, will be the headquarters for not only our company, but the Cook Inlet Transportation Company the name under which the several vessels plying in the local trade and to the Susitna river are operated. "On the next steamer sailing north, C. A. Fletcher will go to take charge of the work we have planned, so as to have it completed in time for the rush, for we know there will be a stampede into the Cook inlet country this spring. Our new steamer to ply on the Susitna is nearly ready, and will go north under tow of the tug Pioneer.

"Our latest advices from our agent at Susitna Station, C. D. Morgan, tell of the latest strikes that have been made on Seattle creek, in the Yentna district. Although prospectors have not reached bedrock in a 20-foot hole, they have got as high as 75 cents to the pan. The region is just coming into its own, and another year should give it the prominence it deserves."

SHAKESPEARE'S BEST COMEDY.

Since the first performance of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" which occurred during the latter part of the 16th century, down to the present day, the comedy has ranked as the best example of the immortal Bard's lighter plays. The action begins at the rising of the curtain and continues uninterruptedly to the close of the final act, introducing wholesome and pleasing comedy to which the most exacting critic could not object. To those who have read "The Taming of the Shrew" the coming revival at the Astoria theatre tomorrow night will be a welcome announcement. Mr. Charles B. Hanford, one of the most accomplished of Shakespearan artists will be seen as Petruchio and Miss Marie Drofnah as Katherine.

"I suppose you regard yourself as sure to win," said the friend

"Absolutely," was the answer. "I can't lose. If I'm elected I'll make no end of money, and I've bet enough on the other candidate to more than even up my expenses in case of my defeat."—Exchange.

"Young man, I was told today that you were the worst boy in the neighborhood."

"Gee! If I was a man and any one talked that way about my little boy, some one would get licked."

"Some one is going to get licked now Take off your coat."

Hard Work.

"What is your daughter doing now, Mrs. Dagney?"

"She's workin' downtown in an office."

"I suppose she must get pretty good wages."

"Yes, but it's awful hard work. When she come home last night she was all wore out, havin' copied more than 300 letters on a heliotrope."—Chicago Record Herald.

Copeland was excused from service as a juror for the balance of the term. A decree of divorce was granted the defendant in the case of Maude A. Wright vs Charles R. Wright.

A deed from Mrs. Sarah E. Leighton granting a right-of-way for the proposed electric railroad from Astoria to Seaside, thru her property, a distance of about 1000 feet, was received today. This completes the deeds from nearly all the holders of large tracts along the line and the attorney for the company has been directed to bring condemnation suits against the balance. One suit has already been filed and others will be filed within a day or two in order to have them tried during the present term of court.

Seven of the co-operative dairying associations in Tillamook county have made their annual reports for last year, viz., Fairview Dairy Association, Red Clover, South Prairie, East Beaver, Maple Leaf, Three Rivers and Clover Leaf. These factories received 14,326,111 pounds of milk and the factory which received the largest amount of milk was Maple Leaf Creamery Association, with 2,619,494 pounds. This asosciation carried the banner for the largest amount of milk in 1907, but it is reported that the Tillamook Creamery will out distance the Maple Leaf for 1908. The amount of cheese these seven associations manufactured amounted to 1,574,320 pounds and this was sold for $194,448.01.

In addition to the items heretofore enumerated, the river and harbor bill soon to be reported to the house of representatives will carry $500,000 for continuation of the work on the jetty at the mouth of the Columbia river, $200,000 for repairing and operating the dredge Chinook. The appropriation for the mouth of the Columbia river is far the largest single item in the bill and this engineering district will receive more than twice the amount carried for any other district in the country. This liberal treatment is due to the eneriges of the Oregon delegation and Representative Jones, who is on the river and harbor committee.

At this morning's session of the circuit court, a default and judgement was taken in the case of J.A. Gilbaugh & Co vs Thomas Brown, a suit to recover $592. The trial of Charles Bertlesen on a charge of pointing a gun at Patrolman Houghton, which had been set for hearing today, was continued until next Saturday on account of one of the witnesses being ill. A demurrer was argued and taken under advisement by the court in the case of G. M. Owen vs the Western Union Telegraph Company. This is an action brought to recovery damages in the sum of $1500 for delay in the delivery of a telegram sent to the plaintiff from Aberdeen announcing the death of his niece. The complaint alleges that the telegram was received in Astoria on October 20 and was not delivered to the plaintiff until October 22. This delay prevented the plaintiff from attending the funeral and caused him to suffer great humiliation and mental anguish.

A B Coe, formerly of this city, but of late years a resident of Portland, was found dead in his berth on board the steamer Vulcan at 12 o clock Monday night as the steamer was a short distance below Rainier. Mr Coe retired about 7 o'clock last evening as the Vulcan was leaving Portland with a tow for Clatskanie. He appeared in his usual good health and shortly after 11:30 was seen walking about the engine room. At midnight Chief Engineer Shay called Mr. Coe to stand his "watch". As he failed to appear a few minutes later, an investigation was made with the result that his dead body was found lying in his berth. Captain Watts was immediately notified and the steamer turned back to Rainier, where the remains were taken in charge by Coroner Sherwood. The funeral will be held at Rainier on Thursday afternoon with the interment at that place. The deceased was born and raised in Astoria, but during the past few years he has been employed on towboats running out of Portland, and he was well known in shipping circles and at the various points along the Columbia and Willamette rivers. He left four brothers and one sister, R. M., T. E., and Patsy Coe and Mrs. Eliza Cole of Rainier.

The resolution adopted by the city council last evening directing the police officers to enforce state laws under penalty of forfeiting their salaries is of little force in itself, excepting to express the sentiment of the council relative to the enforcement of the laws. The only way that the salaries could be reduced is by the passage of an ordinance, repealing or amending the ordinances now in force. When the resolution was read last evening, Curtis said that while he introduced the measure it did not represent his personal views, but he believed the majority of the people in his precinct favored the strict enforcement of the laws and for that reason he hoped it would be adopted. Belland called for the reading of the report of the police commission, which was published in the Budget some days ago. The auditor replied that the report was not addressed to any one, so was not presented to the council. "Then" said Belland, "we of course cannot consider it. I wish, however, Barnum, the showman was alive now. He always paid good money for freaks and I believe we could sell that document to him for sufficient to pay the entire city indebtedness. I doubt if you could find any other two men cute enough to draw up a communication like that." No one else spoke on the resolution, but it was adopted unanimously. The text of the resolution is as follows: "That the chief of police and all police officers of the city of Astoria are hereby directed and instructed to enforce all laws of the State of Oregon and the city of Astoria governing gambling and the closing of saloons on Sunday, irrespective of any and all orders or suggestions to the contrary emanating from the police commission of the city of Astoria, and a failure on the part of the said chief of police and police officers so to do will work a forfeiture of the salary of such chief of police and police officers."

SHAKESPEARE'S BEST COMEDY.

Since the first performance of Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" which occurred during the latter part of the 16th century, down to the present day, the comedy has ranked as the best example of the immortal Bard's lighter plays. The action begins at the rising of the curtain and continues uninterruptedly to the close of the final act, introducing wholesome and pleasing comedy to which the most exacting critic could not object. To those who have read "The Taming of the Shrew" the coming revival at the Astoria theatre tomorrow night will be a welcome announcement. Mr. Charles B. Hanford, one of the most accomplished of Shakespearan artists will be seen as Petruchio and Miss Marie Drofnah as Katherine.

LOCAL NEWS.

H. B. Hazard, an inspector connected with the United States district attorney's office at Seattle, who was assisting in the examination of applicants for admission to citizenship in the circuit court yesterday afternoon, will leave this evening for St. Helens and goes from there to Portland to conduct a similar examination there. Mr. Hazard is one of two inspectors who investigate all applications for admission to citizenship in the states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. In speaking of the new regulations governing these matters today, Mr. Hazard said it was not the intention of the department to keep any worthy person from becoming citizens, but the new regulations are for the purpose of keeping undesirables out. Before an application for admission is heard the department makes a thoro investigation of all the statesments thereon and if any of them are found to be false, the application is denied. For instace among the applications before the circuit court yesterday on which neither of the witnesses was an American citizen. The applicant himself has left the country, but whether legal proceedings will be commenced against the witnesses is not announced. Under the new law, those who took out their first papers since this law became effective must be able to speak the English language and write their names before being admitted.

Other films are interesting as well as amusing. The whole show is fully worth twice the admission charged. Ten cents to any seat, in the house.

GARNETT HAD ACCOMPLICES

Kansas City Holdup Case Still A Mystery

Kansas City, Feb. 17—That C. H. Garnett, the man who yesterday attempted to extort $7,000 from Lawrence M. Jones the milionaire drygoods merchant by the display of a revolver and dynamite bomb, had accomplices is positively asserted by the police today. Their theory is that two more men and possibly a woman were concerned in the plot. The house in Independence, which Garnett fitted up in which to imprison Jones was engaged by a elderly man who said he and his brother were stockmen from Omaha and that his brother's wife was an invalid. The next day a neighbor saw two men and a woman inspecting it. Garnett still refuses to tell his real name or anything of his past.

Garnett was arraigned today and bound over to a criminal court after pleading guilty to charges of robbery and attempt to rob. He still refuses to talk of his antecedents. He regretted the conection of Jones in the affair and said he was sorry he did not kill himself before he went to the house. He said he had no intention of killing any one, that he was out of work, out of money and suffering with tuberculosis. He said he had no accomplices and the police late today are inclined to give up the idea that Garnett was assisted by anyone.

RAILWAY CASE COMMENCED

Hearing of Controversy Between Hill and Harriman

Chicago, Feb. 17 The taking of testimony in the fight between the Hill and Harriman railroads in the Pacific Northwest was begun today by Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty. The contest is regarded as one of the most important that has come before the commission for years, and is to force the Northern Pacific to participate with the Harriman line in making a through rate from Missouri and Mississippi points into Portland, Oregon, as already ordered by the commission. General Traffic Manager Woodworth of the Northern Pacific testified that his company will shortly operate its trains on a new schedule and add a train between Kansas City and Seattle and another between St. Paul and Seattle.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE

The steamer Argo, with freight for Tillamook has arrived down the river and will go to sea when the first favorable opportunity offers.

The oil tank steamer Asuncion has sent a wireless message that she is off the mouth of the river and will be in as soon as the bar moderates.

Several vessels are bar bound at the mouth of the river on account of the rough bar but will probably be able to leave out on high water on Thursday as conditions are beginning to be more favorable

Biograph Films . .

EDGAR ALLEN POE

A picture story founded on incidents in his career, which, while not pretended to be biographical, is intended to show him as a man of heart, in contradiction to the calumnies of his enemies. It portrays his devotion for his dying wife, and the writing of that wonderful masterpiece, "The Raven," for which he receives the paltry sum of ten dollars. The subject as a whole is indeed a work of art, and most timely, commemorating the seasons of his birthday centennial.

BIG CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON

Will Discuss the Conservation of Forests

Washington, Feb 17—Keen interest is manifest as to what will be the program of subjects of the North American Conservation Conference between representatives of Canada, Mexico, and the United States, in this city, February [illegible].

Last summer's forest fires on both sides of the line between the United States are so recent in the minds of both countries that undoubtedly the possibility of some cooperative scheme of fire protection is likely to be touched on. There are other important international questions concerning natural resources which can hardly fail of consideration.

Conservation has not been limited to the United States. Early last year, for instance, every acre of the public timberlands in British Columbia, except what has been leased, was placed in forest reserves. This action was taken to check waste by bringing the care and cutting of timber resources more effectually under government control. The action affected 150,000,000 acres—as much land as was put into all National forests of this country up to 1907. In the Yukon all water power rights are granted for only twenty years and at the expiration of that time their control reverts to the public. The water power question is now one of the most important and far reaching before the United States today. President Diaz of Mexico has a comprehensive knowledge of forestry and understands fully the benefits to be gained by its application. He is also deeply interested in the improvement of agricultural methods and the farmers of the country are rapidly adopting scientific methods. Mexico has few large waterway but the nation has provided for the expenditure of several million dollars for the improvement of internal navigation.

ARRANGES TO SALVE CARGO

Japanese Company Makes Deal with Underwriters

Advices have been received from Yokohama stating a Japanese salvage company of that port has made arrangements with the underwriters for the salving of the flour cargo of the British steamer Adato, which recently went aground and became a total loss on Oshima or Vries island in Japan.

The Adato, which belonged to the Weir company's fleet, carried a cargo from Tacoma and Seattle. The vessel was valued at 31,000 pounds and extensive cargo risks had been taken by the underwriters, which included 2,400 bales of cotton, 99,000 bags of flour and 3,500 packages of general cargo.

The offer of the Japanese company to salve the flour was made on a bass of 30 per cent. of the landed value of the flour and 50 per cent of the proceeds of the other cargo. The value of the cargo was $275,000.

CLAIM STEAMERS LOSE MONEY

Boston Steamship Company Withdraws from Trade

Boston, Mass. Feb. 17—Two steamships which have been trading for several years on the Pacific at various Pacific coast ports will be withdrawn, according to a decision of the Boston steamship company today. The company declares that the vessels have been operating at a loss and that unless the government extends aid the vessels will be withdrawn.

The Boston Steamship company was organized eight years ago and has several vessels in its fleet. Two of them on the Pacific coast have been unable to pay their own expenses, the remainder have brought in only a slight profit.

TELEGRAPH BILL IS IN SENATE

Gives Control of Wires to Railroad Commission

Olympia, Feb 17—A bill introduced in the senate today by the committee on railroad proposes to enlarge the powers of the railroad commission.

The bill vests in the railroad commission authority to regulate and control telephone and telegraph lines in practically the same manner as it now exercises jurisdiction over railroads. It also authorizes the commission to compel physical connection between telephone lines, so that a subscriber on one telephone may have conversation with a subscriber on another and independent line. This is to apply to local as well as long distance conversations.

The same general penalties are provided is also made that the commission may provide for the safety of the operator and the public, and the commission is authorized to compel the company to have modern and up-to-date appliances and to compel efficient and sufficient service.

SELLING LIQUOR TO INDIANS

Steps Being Taken to Stop Practice

Chemawa, Or., Feb. 17—Secret service men have been detailed by the government to break up the practice of selling liquor to Indians. They are making a determined effort all over the West to do this, and have cleaned up the Lapwai country in Idaho, the Yakima country in Washington, and are now working in Oregon. Royal Stewart, bartender of the Council Saloon, one of the seven owned by the Standard Liquor Company of Salem, was arrested yesterday and bound over by Justice Weber, under $250 bond, for alleged sale of liquor to a minor. This is the third case within a week, all of them for selling to full blood Indian minors, wards of the government. In the two other cases the culprits pleaded guilty and were fined. Stewart has given bonds to appear next Monday at 10 a. m.

BEGGS ROCKS DISAPPEAR

Reported to Have Sunk in the Ocean

Los Angeles, Feb. 16—It is reported the Beggs Rocks, located in the outside channel between Santa Barbara and San Nichoals Islands, have recently sunk into the ocean, probably as the result of an earthquake, and so constitute a serious menace to navigation. Captain Keegan of the schooner Cecelia Sudden, arriving at San Pedro, reports that he came near the rocks, which are charted as showing forty feet above high tide, and found them but four feet above the water at almost low tide. The hydrographic office in San Francisco has been notified.

Senator Introduces Bill for Bureau of Children

There was amusement the other day in the senate when Senator Winthrop M. Crane of Massachusetts introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a bureau of children. The dignity of the senate could not stand the strain.

"Oho," said one dignified member "so Crane is coming to the assistance of the stork. The stork 'delivers the goods,' and Crane provides for their subsequent care."

Crane's bill provides that the president shall create a bureau under the department of the interior to look after the interests of children. Provision also is made for the employment of a chief of the bureau at $5,000 a year and a large number of employees.

Way
To Advertise
Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

THE ADOPTED BOY

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

You might have hunted Bliss county over and you could not have found a more even tempered couple than Deacon Tanner and his wife. They had come to be fifty years old and were childless.

The Rev. Mr. Peters had succeeded the parson who had had charge of the church at Bamfield to which the deacon and his wife belonged.

One day a calamity happened in the village. A gale blew down a barn in which a resident and wife had taken refuge, and they were killed, while a year-old baby in the mother's arms was miraculously spared. The victims had friends, but no relatives that could be heard of. Several good women came forward to take care of the little orphan, but Mr. Peters had his plans in regard to that matter. He didn't think it right for the child to be shifted from one to the other, but felt it must be provided with a permanent home and grow up in gratitude and goodness. He therefore called upon Deacon Tanner and his wife and suggested and argued and insisted that they legally adopt the little stranger. A great deal was said about hearth, home and the prattle of innocence; also about a staff to lean on in their declining years. In their goodness and innocence the couple agreed with him, and the necessary legal steps were taken and the kid turned over to them, and everybody was happy, particularly those who had got it off their hands after weeks of affliction. On the next Sunday most of the sermon was devoted to this tender incident, and the deacon went home feeling good. His wife had remained home to take care of the adopted, who had developed a beautiful case of rash that morning.

Only about a week had passed since the adoption when the neighbors began to whisper that they could see a change in Deacon Tanner and his wife. They were losing their smiles. There was something wrong somewhere, and when it was hinted to the minister he called in hopes to solve the problem. He wasn't kept waiting very long. With tears in her eyes Mrs. Tanner said:

"The deacon has called me a fool!"

"You can't mean it?"

"But I do. He has called me a fool a dozen times over."

"But why?"

"Because of the baby. The little thing hadn't had the colic over five nights running and kept us up most of each night when the deacon said I was a fool for wanting to adopt it, and he's keeping it up."

"It seems incredible. I will go out into the garden and speak to him about it."

Out he went and demanded an explanation and got it.

"But she has called me an old idiot," said the deacon in defense.

"Impossible! Why should she?"

"On account of that young 'un. Whenever he howls she says I was an old idiot to saddle us with him."

The good man administered soothing sirup to man and wife in liberal quantity, and when he took his departure they had almost forgiven each other. Nevertheless the end of another week saw more trouble. While standing at his back door in the afternoon the deacon was overheard to say to his wife in the kitchen:

"You think he's coming down with the measles now, do you, and that it will be four weeks before he is over it? Well, I want to say that if he comes down I'm going to leave this house. If you'd had the brains of a chickadee you'd never have got such a nuisance here."

And later on a neighbor could have sworn to the fact that she saw the deacon's wife out under the pear tree, with her apron to her face, and overheard her exclaim to herself:

"I can't stand it to live with an idiot and a howling baby much longer! I'm getting to be a desperate woman."

Neither the deacon nor his wife appeared at church next day, and toward evening the minister called. He found the baby howling, the adopted mother crying and the deacon hiding away up in the garret.

"What do you think,'" wailed the wife as she tried to clear her eyes of the tears, "neither one of us got a wink of sleep last night, and the deacon called baby a hyena and me a mutton headed scarecrow!"

"It can't be!"

"And what did she call me?" added the deacon as he came down from his roost. "I told her that the baby had mumps instead of measles, and she said I didn't know enough to feed hogs and that she wished she had never set eyes on me!"

"But this can't go on," protested the shocked minister.

"No; I'll leave him tomorrow!" exclaimed the wife.

"I'll leave her first!" added the deacon.

After an hour the good man went away. He talked his best and then left the matter in the hands of Providence. Providence took hold of things and, knowing far more than a minister about the results of introducing a howling baby into the home of a couple fifty years old, went at it and brought on colic, scarlet rash, whooping cough and pneumonia, and four days later the little one was with the angels, and a voice was saying to the deacon and wife:

"I am glad to find you kissing and shaking hands. Charity is a noble sentiment. It may next bring you some girl old enough to do all the housework and to milk the cow and feed the hogs besides."

M. QUAD.

A PRACTICAL VIEW OF IT.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"My dear," said Mrs Griffin to her niece, Cecilia, "I fear you are not taking this matter of fact world in the proper spirit. You are at an age when your life's status is to be determined. Having no income, you will either work or marry. On the one side are endless struggle and loneliness, on the other home, children and a strong arm to furnish the means."

"How awfully practical you are, aunt."

"Practical! Of course I'm practical. Where would I be now if I were not? When I was your age I had your prospect before me—the prospect of slave labor. That's what it is slavery—work all day and in the evening a 7 by 9 hall bedroom on the top floor; an office by day and the cheerless room by night; a never ending struggle till it is finished by death. My practical nature saved me."

"What can I do?"

"Marry Leonard Taylor."

"He has deserted me for Estelle Minor."

"Bring him back."

"How?"

"By the old method—another lover."

"There's not a single man at my disposal."

"You don't need a man. A dummy will do far better. A rival that one sees is not nearly so formidable as one in the dark. Invite Taylor to dinner."

"Too late. He is already in love with Estelle."

"He loves a good dinner better. He will accept, and you may then introduce his rival to him."

"But I thought you said his rival was to be kept in the dark."

"Certainly, but his exponent is to be made prominent. On the evening of Mr Taylor's appearance, while you are entertaining him before dinner—your pink silk will do very well—you will receive a box of cut flowers. It will be sent into the drawing room to you. You will open the box with manifest surprise and curiosity—flowers, a note on top. You run your eye over the note, blush slightly, place it hurriedly back in the box, put on the cover and resume your conversation with your guest."

"You don't really think, aunt, that Len Taylor will be caught by such an artifice?"

"He is at an age of emotion. Emotion wafts us about like the wind and lands us heaven knows where. Self control, and handling causes, give us what we require. Len is pliable to his feelings. You will excite pique. He will discover that he is about to lose something. That something will consequently become necessary to his comfort, happiness, possibly his very existence."

"But who is to send the flowers?"

"I will attend to that."

"Auntie," thoughtfully, "I can't do it. It's contemptible."

"Do as I say."

• • • • • • • •

"Well, dear, I suppose since he has gone so early you are convinced that your work is all for nothing."

"I certainly do, aunt, or, rather, it has been harmful. He hardly spoke to me after dinner, and when I turned the conversation without regarding his hint to tell him from whom the flowers came he made an excuse to leave me."

"And you call that harmful?"

"Certainly. My guilty conscience brought a blush to my cheek. He certainly saw through the ruse."

"Indeed! How fortunate! I did not count on your really blushing. Heaven helps those who help themselves."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, he supposed you were blushing at the thought of your absent lover, of course."

"Of you, auntie! Ha, ha! You my absent lover!"

"If any lover ever does as much for you as I am doing now you should feel under great obligation."

"Am I to invite him to dinner again? He will decline, I'm sure."

"Invite him again! By no means! He will come of his own sweet will, and very soon."

"Never."

"Wait."

• • • • • • • •

"Mr Taylor's call has been a very short one. Doubtless you have offended him, Cecilia."

"I fear I have, auntie. He came in somewhat agitated and flushed. I asked him to sit down. He declined and demanded to know if I was engaged, as he had heard it reported. Some busybody has been"—

"I am that busybody. Go on."

"Without waiting for me to reply he broke into a jumble about treating him badly, dishonorable conduct, and all that, ending by asking me point blank who sent the flowers. By dishonorable conduct he must mean using you as a foil."

"Nonsense! He has treated you the way he considers you have treated him gone off after another. He means that you have replaced him, and it maddens him."

• • • • • • • •

"Oh auntie!"

"What? Are you engaged?"

"How in the world did you ever guess it?"

"A little bird told me."

"I'm so happy, but"—

"But what?"

"I've such a sin on my conscience."

"My dear (kissing her), if that is sin every statesman, diplomat and 99 per cent of the rest of the world's population will go below."

AUTOMOBILES FOR POLICE

Chief Kohler Would Have No More Walking of Beats

Police Chief Fred Kohler of Cleveland, O., hero of Lincoln Steffens' "Best Chief," in his annual report to the board of public safety the other day said: "The day of patrolling the streets is past. You might as well send the fire engines out in the streets looking for fires. I urge that at least fifteen automobiles be purchased for use of the police department for use in patrolling."

Afterward Chief Kohler explained that he would do away with the walking of beats by policemen, substituting the use of automobiles, in which a squad of men could be carried over a great territory several times each night.

Memorial to Joel Chandler Harris

The Uncle Remus Memorial association has been organized to erect a suitable memorial to the late Joel Chandler Harris, the poet and author. The proposed form is the purchase of Snap Bean farm, at Atlanta, and the preservation of his home, the Sign of the Wren's Nest. It is further planned to convert the front yard into a park and erect on the lawn a memorial fountain with a frieze containing all of the Uncle Remus animals and a statue of Mr. Harris.

A Frank Philosopher.

Charles Eliot Norton in his Harvard lectures on the history of art used often to describe a meeting between Thomas Carlyle and the philosopher Mallock.

"Mallock was a wise man," he would say, "but his views differed from Carlyle's, and hence, though they were true views, Carlyle deemed them false and pernicious. We should all cultivate a broad outlook, so as to escape from the narrow intolerance of a Carlyle. When Mallock called on Carlyle he talked in his fluent way for two straight hours. Then he rose to go. At the door Carlyle, who had smoked the whole time in grim silence, took his pipe from his mouth and said mildly:

"'Weel, goodby, Mr. Mallock. I've received ye kindly because I knew yer mither, but I never want to set eyes on ye again.'"

Skinned Alive In Peace and Quiet.

"I hope and trust, muh po', underdone brudder," severely said good old Parson Bagster, addressing a bibulously inclined member of his flock, "dat de 'stressin' eppersode of night befo' last will be a lesson to yo'."

"Yassah," replied the erring one, wagging his head convincedly, "I sho'ly reggins 'twill. I been uh-packin' home too many drams now and a'gin yuh of late, as muh wife—fine a lady as dar is in the world—has been p'intedly tellin' me. But on de monumental 'casion yo' defers to I gits all lit up and drapped down by de wayside and slept all night on an ant hill, and de paltry varmints mighty nigh eit me up. Blame' near skinned me alive, sah, dem ants did, but dey didn't talk uh-whilst dey was doin' it. Nussah; dey never said a word 'bout de awful contamination o' muh heenyue conduct and dis and dat and de udder—dess eit me up in peace and quiet. And atter dis, if I keeps muh mind, whenever I gits too much o' dat 'ar balloon juice in muh pussonality I's gwine to lay out on an ant hill all night preference to goin' home to muh fam'bly. By de blessin' o' de Lawd, ants don't talk!"—Puck.

According to a dispatch from Washington, the river and harbor bill soon to be reported to the house will contain an appropriation of half a million dollars for continuing work on the jetty and $200,000 for the repair and operation of the dredge Chinook. This is indeed good news and it is sincerely hoped that both appropriations will carry. We want the jetty work continued and we want the dredge put at work to assist the jetty in deepening the channel. There is no reason why there should not be 40 feet or even more water across the bar and it can be easily secured with the jetty and the dredge.

The water commission should not delay in taking up the matter of rebuilding the pipeline from Bear creek, or at least the portion of it that is constructed of wooden staves. That something must be done to provide for a more adequate water supply especially during the summer months is certain. The former commission gave this matter lengthy considered and decided that the first thing to do done was to repair the pipeline and later to take up the construction of a high service reservoir inside the city limits. By the turning of water from several adjacent streams the supply at the headworks on Bear creek has been materially increased. The thing then to be done is to provide a more stable pipeline for bringing the water into the city and later provide a place for storing a large amount of it.

It might at first sight appear that the British Isles were too limited in extent to make the question of afforestation a serious one. And, judged from the standpoint of exporting timber, this is undoubtedly the case. The enormous forests of the United States, Canada, Russia and Scandinavia will no doubt go on supplying the world. But timber to the value of $160,000,000 is annually imported, and there seems no reason why steps should not be taken to make the country self-supporting in this particular. It is calculated that a reserve of forest land amounting to 9,000,000, acres would be requisite for the initiation of such a scheme, and it is found that such an area is at present available, without in any degree encroaching on the land under cultivation. The question of climate appears to offer no difficulty. For, although it is sometimes said the quaity of home-grown timber is not up to the standard of that which is imported, there would seem to be no reason no doubt that this is due to bad forestry rather than to anything else. There remain the questions of finance and of labor, and it is here that the real difficulties present themselves. It would, it is calculated, be forty years before the forests would become self supporting, and to plant 150,000 acres annually would involve a deficit of 90,000 pounds the first year, rising to 3,000,000 pounds in the fortieth year. Allowing compound interest for the capital sunk, it is calculated that, at the end of eighty years the project would be yielding a revenue of 7,000,000 pounds while the forests themselves would be worth at least 100,000,000 pounds more than the capital sunk in creating them. It is here, consequently, that the question of labor becomes a vital part of the scheme. The percentage of unemployed in the United Kingdom appears to be steadily increasing. The waste and the increased taxation caused by his are fast becoming a national problem of supreme importance. It is obvious, consequently, that if the men out of work can be employed to some extent, at any rate, in this way, the scheme will become in a manner self-supporting, or at least workable without loss from the first.

During one week recently while our cruising fleet was keeping dates with the cities along the Mediterranean the American flag floating over an American warship was receiving and delivering messages of good will in approximately a score of foreign ports. After entering the Mediterranean the Atlantic fleet was divided into sections and in this way became represented almost simultaneously in ports belonging to Great Britain, France, Greece, Turkey, Italy and Algeria. These ports included Athens, Smyrna, Constantinople, Malta, Nice and Marseilles.

While our homecoming sailors were enjoying the last stages of the "frolic" five of our ships were in foreign ports south of us and several were distributed in Asiatic waters. The time has been when this wide ranging of our flag would not have been noticeable, for it was common in every zone above and below the equator, flying from the masts of Yankee trading ships. Perhaps there was less sentiment at work among those who beheld and those who followed the flag as an index of commercial enterprise than this unique naval display aroused. In both cases the flag bore a message of peace and good will. And surely it has been none the less impressive in these last days floating from the flagpole of a man-of-war. The ranging warship has ceased to be the symbol of hostile feeling. The cruise now ending proves that it may go so far in the other direction as to be the harbinger of friendship.

Sir Thomas Lipton's flying machine fad is a sort of guarantee that we've heard that chestnut "going to build another Shamrock and capture the America's cup" for the last time.

If Taft tries to keep his end up in all the golf clubs which elect him an honorary member he can use that salary increase and then come out with a deficit in his bank account.

Germany imports eggs at the rate of about one a week for every inhabitant of the realm. Last year the average cost to the importer was 15 cents a dozen.

If congress should cast off those secret service shadows they'll be likely to figure on recovering caste somehow through coming events.

The relay horses used on that ninety-eight mile ride of the president are also unanimous for the shorter and uglier thing too.

That British judge who never used a telephone has one experience the less to regret and fewer short and uglies to repent.

DID YOU EVER NOTICE—

That your perturbation is taken to mean deep sympathy and only draws upon you further outpourings that are the direct result of insufferable egotism and of sublimated self conceit?

That your desire to express your true feelings become unbearable, quite intolerable, and you determine to unburden your soul of all that it has concealed and be free?

That you don't do anything of the kind—when the friend of your bosom is some fifty pounds heavier than you are—but just gulp down your resentment and get more credit for doing the sympathy act?

HARDWOODS TO BE GROWN HERE

Government Plans to Reforest the Pacific Norhwest

The foundation of a great hardwood industry on the Pacific coast will be laid by the national forestry service this summer, when several thousand of the best varieties of hardwood trees will be started in nurseres in Douglas county, Oregon, and on the Snoqualmie river in Washington. The trees will be grown from the seed in nurseries conducted by government employes, and it is expected that several hundred pounds of seeds will be planted during the summer.

According to observations made by the national forestry service, Oregon and the Pacific coast are especially fitted for the growing of hardwoods such as grow on the eastern slopes of the Appalachians. Chesnut, oak, yellow poplar and basswood are to be started first and after them may come other varieties.

It will be some time before the slips are large enough to be transplanted to forests, where it is expected they will flourish with but little care. Should the new trees come up to the expectations of the officials in charge of the work, Oregon will ultimately become one of the greatest wood manufacturing states in the union. Oregon fir already has a high reputation, but with the hardwcods growing in abundance here, the state would be given another great resource.

The discovery of the adaptability of the hardwood tees to the Oregon climate is but one of the many benefits which Oregon is deriving from the establishment of the northwest headquarters of the United States forestry service. Although the office has been here but a short time now, much business is being transacted which heretofore had to be sent to Washington for completion. Orders for nearly a sixth of a billion of feet of standing timber at figures much in advance of any price paid last year for similar property have been received and will be acted upon soon. One offer for cedar stumpage is at $3 a thousand feet for the next three years and 25 cents a year extra for each additional year on a five year contract.

Another offer for fir at $2.25 per 1000 feet and the same increase for each additional year above three years has also been received.

LEGISLATION TO SAVE SALMON

Washington May Resort to Initiative and Referendum

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 17—Before President Roosevelt began his crusade of preservation, the fishermen of the Columbia river were busy trying to secure legislation which would prevent the destruction of the salmon industry and in the legslature at this session a strong effort is again being made to secure close affiliation between Oregon and Washington to the end that the fishing industry of the great river may not be destroyed that a few wealthy fisherman may accumulate greater fortunes and the thousands of smaller workmen be thrown out of employment entirely.

In the Columbia river 30 years ago the salmon industry seemed inexhaustible. Nobody was interested in preserving it, the fish seemed to grow in numbers as the years passed. Fishwheels and fishtraps were permitted to be operated along the river for hundreds of miles and the industry flourished. Fortunes were made as if in a day. At the same time the salmon decreased in numbers and in size until the very life of the industry was threatened. Then it was that public sentiment crystalized and legislation was urged for the preservation of the king of fishes, the salmon. In Oregon, especially, the movement took firm hold, and the people demanded action finally getting it. In the Oregon legislature every tactic known in the election of United States senators was employed and for many years the will of the people was thwarted. The wheels remained, and the millions of fish caught every year were causing the industry to show signs of final dissolution.

The destruction of forests at the headwaters of streams caused floods and great damage to the country served by the streams, but the greatest damage lies in the ultimate destruction of the forests themselves. The catching of salmon with wheels is aptly compared to the destruction of the forests, but in immediate and ultimate results. Wheels catch the fish which try to ascend the streams to the spawning grounds, and the supply of young fish is thus cut off, practially entirely. In some cases nets with very small meshes are used, thus killing the small fish before they are of use in canning and preventing the number of large fish to increase as they should.

Oregon took the lead in stringent legislation. After years of fruitless efforts, last year a bill was presented through the initiative to the voters of the state to stop all commercial salmon fishing with wheels in the Columbia river from the Sandy river to The Dalles. This covers the river known as "the narrows" where the industry had flourished, and where the narrow channel almost requires the death of fish as they try to pass to the spawning grounds.

The result of the initiative system of voting alarmed the fishermen and they immediately organized to secure action in Washington looking to the repeal of the laws affecting their interests and if possible securing a treaty of at least 10 years covering the matters in controversy between the two states. This treaty is intended to circumvent the action of the people of Washington in case the initiative and referendum be offered to the people of this state by the present legislature. A strong lobby is now here looking to prevent the passage of the referendum bill, which is before the proper committee.

The interstate fisheries commission, which recently held a lengthy meeting at Seattle, agreed to ask for the repeal of the Oregon closing law passed by initiative. It also asked that the law prohibiting purse seining in the Columbia be repealed. Purse seines are known as the deadly enemy of salmon everywhere. For this reason they are not permitted anywhere save in Washington.

The Columbia river fishermen have introduced a bill in the legislature asking that Washington adopt the Oregon laws against wheels and also the law preventing purse seines from being operated. In case this be not possible at this session, it is likely that the initiative and referendum law will be passed, and the campaign carried on successfully in Oregon last year will be carried to Washington before the next general election. In an effort to secure the expression of the will of the people for the permanent settlement of the fishinig industry question of the state.

HOUSE REVOKES RAILROAD GRANT

Jones' Tide Land Bill Passed Unanimously

Salem, Feb. 17—The house has passed by a unanimous vote the tideland bill introduced by Jones of Lincoln county. This is the bill which revokes the grant of the Corvallis Eastern railroad to all of the tide and marsh lands of the Yaquina and Alsea bays

Jones, the author of the bill, explained the object of the measure, showing how the railroad company had juggled with the state, taking the vast reaches of tidlands and yet not living up to its contract had not surveyed it or paid taxes on it, the same act of 1874 also exempted the rolling stock from taxation.

Jones showed that the waterfronts in Yaquina and Alsea bay we bottled up, the fishing ground held by the company. This would be worth a millions to the state in the next 10 years. The United States supreme court had held that a state had no right to convey title to tide and marsh lands away by grant.

HANFORD TONIGHT

A host of hilarious memories is awakened by the mention of "The Taming of the Shrew'' for those who have seen the play and those who have not, will have an opportunity to do so at the Astoria theatre tonight. Mr. Charles B. Hanford whose previous presentations of plays in this city are a sufficent guarantee for the reliability of and those his manager Mr. F. Lawrence Walker announces for him, has arranged a special production of this favorite play for his present tour. Mr. Hanford will appear in the role of "Petruchio'' and the favorite actress Miss Marie Drofnah as "Katherine.'' The scenery and costumes have been designed on a most elaborate scale.

Under the laws now in force the securing of final papers is not so easy a matter as it was a few years ago, and an applicant is not only required to be able to speak the language, but he must know something about the form of government before he can be admitted to citizenship.

Another bad check man was doing business in Astoria this morning but the entire extent of his receipts has not been learned. He is known to have passed one check on the Mug saloon for $2.50 and one for $17.50 on the Chinook bar and others are expected to be heard from farther up the street as the man was taking the usual route. The man has some blank checks on the First National bank and draws them in the presence of his victim and signs the name of J. T. Jones, who has no account with the bank. He claims to be a logger and tries to dress and act the part.

The price of eggs has received another drop was shown by the prices paid by the local merchants to the farmers of this district and they will retail now at 35 cents per dozen for the best quality and others can be secured cheaper. It seems odd at first though that Alaska should dictate the price of eggs on the Pacific coast and it will do so more in the future. It has been found impossible to raise chickens in Alaska with success and with its increasing population the demand becomes greater and even in the coast towns they never sell for less than one dollar per dozen. Potatoes have made no advance locally but within a short time the price of them will increase, as the California crop has been absorbed.

When the case against Antone Kuljia of Clifton on a charge of selling liquor without a license was called for trial in the circuit court this morning, the defendant changed his plea to guilty and was fined $300. There is another indictment on a similar charge standing against Kuljis and Prosecuting Attorney Tongue announced in court that he will not dismiss that indictment unless the defendant immediately secures a license or quits business. The grand jury returned an indictment this morning against Henry Ernest Capello, charging him with larceny in a store. The defendant is accused of breaking into the Anchor saloon and stealing a sum of money. On being arraigned in court, he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to term of one and one half years in the penitentiary. Formal orders were handed down in a number of cases as follows: Geo. W. Higginbotten vs Mary C. Higginbotten, degree of divorce; Etta M. Durham vs Oscar Durham, decree of divorce; E. S. Snelling et al vs C. W. Flander, motion to set aside service of summons, argued and submitted; Emma Davis vs Alfred Davis, defendant allowed 10 days additional to pay alimony; John H. Bell vs Josephine Bell, order, for publication of summons.

Frank N. Clark, president of the Columbia Trust Company, is in the city accompanied by Mrs. Clark and they will remain here for several days. Mr. Clark says that the Swinnton property, which his company promoted, has been taken off the market as of the 1,500 lots in the tract all but 10 have been sold and many of them at an advance over the original prices. He is now directing his attention to promoting Columbia Beach. This property is located between Skipanon and Morrison with a frontage of a fine ocean beach. It has been on the market only a few days yet 150 lots have been sold. He proposes to erect there a hotel, auditorium, and construct roads as well as a recreation park, work on these to be commenced within the next 30 days.

According to the pilot chart for the North Pacific ocean issued by the Hydrographic office, March is a pleasant month at sea, with few heavy storms. Gales occur occasionally but are not frequent in that month judging from data gathered and compared for several years. Nor are typhoons much to be feared in oriental waters, as they are infrequent in both March and April. The pilot chart for March is just out and as usual is being distributed among mariners through the hydrographic service. In addition to the regular map, the reverse side of the chart this time contains articles entitled: "A Study of the Causes of Strandings Occurring in 1908." "The Avoidance of Excessive Rolling in Vessels Engaged in Oceanic Transportation," and a specimen form for reporting sea waves, with an accompanying explanatory article.

According to a decision by Judge McBride handed down in the circuit court this morning, the people of Astoria, inadvertently perhaps, did everything in their power to repeal the state local option law so far as it applies to this city when they adopted an amendment to the city charter known as article five of section 38 at the city election in December, 1907. That the state law was not repealed is due to the fact that the supreme court has held that the local option statute is a criminal law. The amendment to the charter in question is the one which gives the council the power to license, tax, regulate, restrain, restrict and prohibit barrooms and drinking shops and all places where liquor are sold. The matter was brought before the court on a demurrer to the indictment charging William Nyberg with violating the local option law by selling liquor in Astoria precinct No Six, which is a "dry" precinct. C. J. Curtis, who appeared for the defendant, contended that this amendment to the city charter, repealed the state law so far as its application to the city of Astoria is concerned and therefore the indictment is void. Prosecuting Attorney Tongue took the opposite view. In support of his contention, Mr. Curtis cited the Medford case, in which the supreme court held that the local option law was repealed by a similar charter provision in its application to that city. Judge McBride in rendering his decison on the demurrer, said the Medford charter repealed the application of the state local option law for the reason that the legislature passed that charter and the legislature had the authority to pass or amend both the criminal and civil laws of the state. Since that time, however, the state constitution had been amended taking the power to amend city charters away from the legislature and vesting that power in the people, but with the restriction that no charter or amendment thereto shall be adopted which shall violate either the state constitution or the criminal laws of the state. The Astoria charter amendment in question in this case, the court said, had been adopted by the voters of the city. They had, he said, adopted a charter, which to all intents and purposes suspends the local option law, but the question arises had they the right to suspend the operation of this law? Continuing the court said, "I always have believed that cities should have the right to control the sale of liquors within their respective boundaries, as the people of those cities ought to know what they want. However, the matter simmers down to the simple question of whether or not the local option statute is a criminal law. Personally I do not regard it as such, altho in one sense it may be considered so and in another not, but the supreme court has held in two different cases that it is a criminal law, so under those decisions, the charter of the city of Astoria is void in so far as repealing or suspending the local option law is concerned. Therefore, the demurrer is overruled." The case against Nyberg is set for trial tomorrow morning.

AILMENT FATAL FOR HORSES

Heavy loss due to Mysterious Malady

Pendleton, Or., Feb. 18 Ranchers in the Juniper country report the loss of several horses recently as the result of some mysterious malady. A veterinarian has been called, but so far he has been unable to diagnose the cause of death. William Mills, who was in the city yesterday, is one of the heaviest losers, six of his horses have died within a few days.

He says the symptoms of each of the diseased animals were very pronounced and very similar. The horse suddenly appears to be ill. Almost immediately thereafter he lies down and the hind leggs straighten out and remain in that position for four or five hours, at the expiration of which time the animal dies.

At first it was thought the disease was the result of eating hay which had been stacked out in the open and had become damp, but as some of the animals which have died were fed only barn hay, this theory has been discarded and the deaths remain a mystery.

STATE ROARDS MUST BE BUILT

Governor asks for Amendment to State Constitution

Salem, Or., Feb 18—Governor Chamberlain has sent a hot [illegible] message to the legislature calling upon them to put through the amendment to the constitution providing for state aided railroads. The amendment has already passed the house, but has been hung up in the senate. The message is generally looked upon as striking a hard blow at Harriman and emphasizing the state's determination to build her own railroads. Coming as it did with annurcement alleged to have been made through Harriman of a road up the Deschutes, it caused surprise.

Raikes' Ragged Regiment

"Bobby Wild Goose and his ragged regiment" was the name hooted after Robert Raikes, the first modern Sunday school advocate, and his scholars. The thoroughfare was Sooty alley, and the scholars were the ragged boys who toiled in the pin factories of Gloucester England. Robert Raikes paid Mrs Brandon, a poor woman, a shilling each Sunday to teach the boys the Bible. That was in 1780. Four years later there were 250,000 boys and girls attending Sunday school in the kingdom.—Delineator.

LAWYERS TRIED; BRIBERY CHARGE

Indicted on'Charge of Suborning a Witness

New York Feb 18 Carl Fischer Hansen and his law partner Alexander Michaelson against whom a joint indictment for bribing a witness was recently found were arraigned for trial today in the criminal branch of the supreme court. The case already has attraced much public attention and the trial will be followed with interest. Since their indictment both of the accused have been in the Tombs in default of bail. On the representation of District Attorney Jerome that the men intended to disappear before trial, the court recently increased their bail to $25,000 each. Neither could find sureties for such an amount, though Fischer Hansen's father-in-law, Isaac G. Brokaw, is classed among New York's wealthiest men. In making application for reduced bail the attorneys for Fisher-Hansen declared that the case was one of persecution on the part of the district attorney.

The indictment of Fischer-Hansen and Michaelson grew out of the recent trial of the first named for extorting $15,000 from Joseph E. O'Brien, a decorator of Philadelphia. The money was paid to prevent the publication of letters written by O'Brien to Antonio Macaluso, an Italian, 19 years old. This trial resulted in the lawyer's acquittal. Macaluso, one of the important witnesses for the prosecution, was living in the Broadway Central hotel under the guard of detectives. One of these was Arthur Kiesow. Macaluso's testimony, when called as a witness, was at variance with the story he had told previously, and was in favor of the defendant. The bribery indictments assert that Fischer-Hansen had frequently seen Macaluso when he was in charge of Kiesow, and that both he and Michaelson had sent money to him, by Kiesow and others.

Genius In the Kitchen.

"We've got a jewel of a kitchen maid now," remarked a broker, "only, like all jewels, she needs watching. She's a combination of colored girl and genius.

"Like most well regulated households, we keep the common or garden variety of one dollar alarm clock for the girl. The clock stopped the other day, and neither my wife nor I could persuade it to resume business. Next day when I got home it was ticking away in fine form. 'Ah fixed it, sah,' the girl told me. 'It were dirty, dat's all, an' I jus' give it a good washin' in de sink, with plenty o' soap an' water.'

"Of course if I had washed that clock's face and hands it never would have run again. How do I explain it? Genius, I guess—that's all. But I lock up my watch now when I go to bed, just the same."—New York Globe.

Pepys and the Hare's Foot.

Rheumatism is not the only ailment for which the possession of a hare's foot has been a specific. Mr. Pepys had one as a charm against the colic, but he was never quite sure whether he ought to be grateful to it. At the end of 1664, noting his abnormally good health for some months past, he remarked, "But I am at a great loss to know whether it be my hare's foot or taking every morning a pill of turpentine or my having left off the wearing of a gown." Three weeks later a friend showed him that his hare's foot was defective, not having "the joint to it"—"and it is a strange thing how fancy works, for I no sooner handled his foot but I became very well and so continue." Pepys got another hare's foot and thrived again, but in March we find him still wondering whether this was due to the charm or to the turpentine pill.

The Arniston Goblet.

The Arniston branch of the Dundas family possesses a curious Venetian goblet, and, like the famous "luck" of Eden Hall, they believe that their prosperity depends upon its preservation. It was given by his mother to Sir James Dundas in the reign of Queen Mary, with an injunction to preserve it carefully or misfortunes would attend the family. It once had a miraculous escape from destruction, for a very eccentric peeress, who for some unknown reason owed the family a grudge, concealing her sinister intentions, asked to be allowed to see it, and when it was handed to her she deliberately threw it on the ground. Every one present held his breath, expecting to see it shivered into fragments, but, strange to say, it did not break, and it is still preserved intact.—London Gentlewoman.

HARRIMAN BUYS RAILROAD

To form Portion of New Line to Seattle

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 18- Another link was forged in the Union Pacific's Seattle connection yesterday, when the Oregon & Washington purchased a half interest in the right of way of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railroad from Black River junction to where the latter line crosses the Puyallup river, three miles from Tacoma, a total distance of 26 miles. The consideration is placed at $200,000.

The right of way passes through lands in a high state of cultivation, and a number of thriving towns. Some of the lands through which the Milwaukee has built cost the road $10,000 for a quarter acre.

By its acquirement of this right of way the Union Pacific practically has closed the gap between here and Tacoma, where the Twohy Brothers, who have the tunnel contract, are preparing to rush their work as fast as possible.

The Erigo was jammed against a log boom belonging to the Weyerhaeusers and three other companies and her signals of distress brougth launches from Rainer, which took off her passengers. She got free without any damage.

HANFORD LAST NIGHT

To see Chas. B. Hanford in any of his Shakesperian plays is a treat for not only is he a great actor, but the foremost interpretor of Shakesperes works on the American stage. The "Taming of the Shrew" and "The Old Guard" gave Astorians the pleasure of seeing Mr. Hanford in a double roll. The first as Haversack, one of Napoleon's old guard, illustrated how thoro he could act the part of an old French soldier. The play is given in one act and carries with it a beautiful lesson of faith and devotion to ones country. Aftet the first act of "The Taming of the Shrew" Mr. Hanford and Miss Drofnah received an ovation that continued for several moments. As Petruchio Mr. Hanford showed his power of acting as well in a comedy roll as that of tragedy while Miss Drofnah as Katherine the shrew proved herself equally as capable of interpretating her part. Andrew H. Tombes, as Gruimo, Petruchio's serving man, together with the balance of the company gave the stars excellent support. The play was brilliantly staged and proved a source of great enjoyment to the audience on account of its high comedy. Mr. Hanford during the afternoon appeared before the high school students and gave them one of his interesting talks on Shakespere's works that also included a brief sketch of Lincoln. Mr. Hanford and his excellent company will always be welcome in Astoria.

AN ORANGE CUCUMBER

Latest Freak in Horticultural Combinations

An orange-cucumber, or cucumber-orange, as the name has not yet been decided, is a freak combination raised by Howard S. Hill, a cucumber grower of Gardner, Mass., which he is cultivating as a new dish to tickle the palates of the exacting diners.

The new fruit or vegetable resulted from an experiment made several weeks ago by Mr. Hill. At that time an orange tree was in full bloom in his cucumber hothouse, at the same time the blossom of the cucumber vines first appeared. Mr. Hill transferred the pollen from the orange blossoms to several cucumber flowers.

The first appearance of the fruit was the same as that of an ordinary infant cucumber, but as the fruit grew the result of the inoculation became apparent. The cucumber instead of lengthening out remained round, like an orange, with the orange bloom scar, but the skin was that of a cucumber with the same corruptions. When ripened the new product assumed a bright orange color and from a distance appeared the same as an orange.

With the seeds from the best specimens Mr. Hill is growing a number of vines and thinks that the new fruit will become established and prove a favorite, as the taste of the orange and cucumber blends in an excellent manner and makes a pleasing combination.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Feeding For Eggs.

Idleness on the part of the hen is a sure preventive against an abundant supply of eggs, although all other conditions may be perfect; hence to make profit from the hen she must be kept busy. The way to accomplish this is what all poultry keepers should understand. Grain may be fed before being thrashed and a fair result obtained, and if it hangs up a little above the fowls, so that they would have to jump to reach it, so much the better. The best results, however, are obtained by furnishing the fowls with a clean litter of chaff and straw of sufficient depth to insure hard work in hunting for the grain scattered therein. Feed vegetables and finely cut hay in large quantities, with warm mash and freshly cut bone in the mornings and later in the day grain well concealed in the litter.—Cor. American Agriculturist.

Alfalfa For Poultry.

In investigations made by the farmers' institute force of the Colorado Agricultural college it was found that, while the Colorado poultrymen who were making money from egg production fed various combinations of grains, all had similar methods in several particulars.

All the successful poultrymen consulted gave all feed dry. Not one was found who is feeding a wet mash at any time during the year. Grains, vegetables, alfalfa and meat are at all times fed dry.

All the successful poultrymen feed alfalfa, many of them every day in the year. Some feed alfalfa meal, some alfalfa leaves and others alfalfa hay, allowing the hens to pick off the leaves and reject the stems.

While alfalfa is growing the green plant is preferred for feed.

Cleanliness In the Dairy.

Cleanliness should be the watchword on every dairy farm, for it may well be regarded in the light of a good investment, and its presence should be as carefully fostered as land, buildings or personal honor, for it is not only a marketable stock in trade, but a passport to the good opinion of refined and cultured patrons, while the example may be far reaching in its beneficial influence on markets, cattle and elevation of the character of the man himself and the occupation in which we should all take an honest pride and pleasure in stamping with the impress of our earnest desire to make it the most beloved and honored calling in the world.—Mrs. Adda F. Howie in American Cultivator.

Indoor Work For Winter.

Setting glass is good work for stormy weather. Take measurements and have the glass ready to set at the first opportunity when the weather does not permit outdoor work. Most barns ought to have more windows put into them for light and air. Several small windows are better than one large one, as they can be arranged to be removed in summer, thus making the building cooler and more airy in summer as well as lighter in winter. The best plan is to use half of an old house window sash, setting it in a frame so that it can be moved back and forth. In summer slide it back and cover with netting and a curtain for fly time.

A New Sulphur Wash.

During the past season the department of agriculture has made an important discovery—that the self boiled lime sulphur wash is not injurious to peach foliage when properly made and will not produce russeting and other injurious effects on apples. Furthermore, it has been found to be about as effective as a fungicide as the standard bordeaux mixture. Extensive experiments have been carried on during the year by the department on nearly all of the common fruit diseases which are preventable by spraying, and it has been demonstrated that the above mixture is a very useful one.—American Cultivator.

Farm Notes.

Abundant bedding for all the stock is both humane and economical.

Do not throw away the wood ashes. They make a good fertilizer for orchard, lawn or garden.

This is the season when manure has a tendency to pile up against the side of the barn. Don't allow it.

You should be comfortable when working in the barn, but you will not be if the barn is not comfortable.

One trouble with manure spreaders is that they are not used enough. They should be in operation all the year.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Keep the Best Stock.

Many farmers are in the habit of selling their best animals, as they will bring the highest price, says American Agriculturist. A greater mistake cannot be made. A difference of 10 or even 25 per cent in the price of a single animal is a small affair as compared with this difference in a whole herd. By keeping the very best to propagate from the whole may be made of equal excellence, and in the course of a few years numerous animals might be produced having excellent properties that now distinguish some few of the best.

Concerning Alfalfa.

An acre of good alfalfa produces twice as much digestible nutrients as an acre of good clover, the digestible protein being three times as great. Farmers in our eastern states should make every reasonable effort to establish alfalfa fields.—Pennsylvania School of Agriculture.

SLIP OF IMAGINATION

The girl with the brown eyes and the happy face looked up slowly. A lot of the girls had been lunching together in the big storeroom at the top of the warehouse, and they had been regaling themselves and each other by telling love stories, real and imaginary. It had been particularly stipulated by the brown eyed maiden that all proposals mentioned should be wholly imaginary and such as could never possibly have come to pass. And now that it was her turn to tell a story she began in a way which promised a close adherence to this stipulation.

"Once upon a time," she commenced "so long ago that all the men were so gallant and all the women so lovely and so charming that girls never had to stand up in street cars and were always paid just as much money for doing the same work as men were, there lived a young man. He was so brave and so knightly that everybody admired and loved him—because they couldn't help it and I don't suppose he was called by his formal title more than once in a year or two. 'Sir Galahad' seemed to suit him so much better than plain Phil"

She stopped hurriedly, her cheeks red, and the other girls exchanged amused glances. But they were kind and considerate enough—and also wise enough—not to do so until after she had turned her happy eyes from their impassive faces up to the dingy old roof again, and so she went on innocently:

"Now, in the village where this chivalrous knight had been born and where he went back on a visit once in awhile there lived a young woman who loved him dearly and whom he loved just as much, although they neither of them knew it for a long, long time. A grim and ugly ogre, the ogre of dire necessity, had forced him away from the village to the great seething city when he was little more than a boy, long, long before he had proved his right to his knightly plume and spurs. The first time he went back on a visit—the ugly ogre wouldn't allow him to do this for ever so long, and he only let him stay just a week and a day when he did get back—the young woman found out that she loved him, although she wouldn't admit this even to herself for nearly seven years afterward—not until she was getting to be a sedate, middle aged woman of thirty and the chivalrous, lovely knight was nearly thirty-five.

"But she couldn't help owning up to herself that she wished she might see more of the handsome knight—you see, the knight had gone to school with her in her childhood and had been her own special and particular knight and protector in those days—and by and by the ugly ogre, without in the least meaning it, served her a good turn. He turned her out of the village and sent her hurrying off to the great city alone and lonely and with her own bread and butter to earn or go hungry. It was some time before the chivalrous knight found her, but after that the great city, which had seemed so dreary and gloomy and lonesome to her at first, didn't seem half so bad with a friend, and such a friend as the chivalrous knight, in it."

The other girls exchanged glances stealthily at this point, but the happy faced girl with the brown eyes never noticed it. With her eyes still fixed upon the dusty roof, she was intent upon her story. And the little smile which crept from these eyes to the happy mouth and back again was so sweet with happiness that it made her beautiful. One or two of the more imaginative girls were beginning to wonder if the chivalrous knight's fair maiden had looked like that. The brown eyed girl sighed a little, as happy children sigh in their play and their sleep, before she went on.

"So the young woman was happy in the friendship, and she never thought of anything else," she said, the soft voice a little tremulous now. "And then all suddenly the chivalrous knight sought her out one evening and asked her to be his wife."

"'I have longed to say this to you for months and months, darling,' he said, 'but I have not dared, and for two reasons. But now that I have been promoted and am to have money enough to make a home for you if you will only say yes I have plucked up courage to ask—nay, implore—you to say it.'

"And so"— But the brown eyed girl's face was so full of blissful joy and glory now that the other girls could be silent no longer.

"And so they were married and lived happily ever after!" they cried in chorus, rushing upon and covering her with caresses. "And we're all ever so glad for you both!"

"Why—why," exclaimed the girl with brown eyes amazedly, "what's the matter with you all? Oh"—and she broke off to blush so divinely that if Philip, the chivalrous knight, had only been present he would surely have insisted upon her marrying him then and there instead of waiting three weeks longer.

"I've given myself away, haven't I? And after all I said about not telling things that had actually happened! Well," laughing as only happy creatures can laugh, "no special harm has been done I suppose, after all. I'm going to leave the firm on Saturday, so I should have told you all this week anyway. And as I didn't quite know how to do it gracefully I'm not going to say anything cross about my little slip of the imagination."—Chicago Tribune.

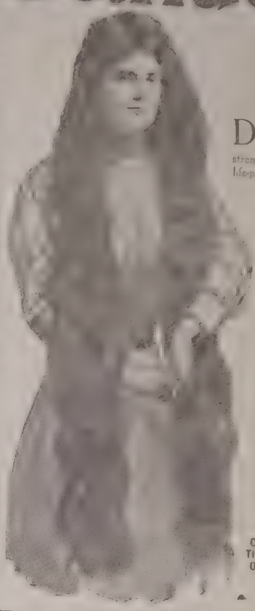
Sounded Suspicious.

"Treason, treason!" cried the speaker.

"What's the racket?" asked a man outside.

"Patrick Henry making a speech."

"What is he doing? Hammering the trusts?"



Danderine

PROVE IT!

DANDERINE is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

A lady from St. Paul writes in substance, as follows:
"When I began using Danderine my hair would not come to my shoulders and now it is way below my hips."

Another from Newark, N. J.
"I have been using Danderine regularly. When I first started to use it I had very little hair, now I have the most beautiful long and thick hair anyone would want to have."

ATROCIOUS AND HAUGHTY TURK

High Handed Methods of Seventeenth Century

Indignities to which foreign envoys were formerly subjected in China were mild in comparison with those occasionally meted out to them in Constantinople. M. Julian Klaczks in his "Etude de Diplomatie Contemporaine" relates that in 1673 the grand vizier, having intercepted some French dispatches, tried to force Del la Haye, first secretary to the French embassy and son of the ambassador, to give him the cipher of the embassy. The young diplomat indignantly refused and was in consequence bastinadoed, struck in the face with such force that his teeth were broken, and he was thrown into prison. No attempt was made by Louis XIV. to obtain redress for the wrongs inflicted on his representative.

Until the beginning of the eighteenth century Christian envoys to the porte were forbidden to visit one another or even to confer with one another on neutral ground. They were not allowed to drive in public with their wives, and at one time it was proposed to prevent them from importing wine for their own consumption. A compromise was effected on this point, on the understanding that the accursed liquor was to be conveyed from the harbor to the embassies at night and in great secrecy.

The Oregon legislature at the request of the Port of Portland commission has enacted a law abolishing compulsory pilotage at the mouth of the Columbia river and already some of the instigators of the law are wondering what will be the result, and well they may. About the first noticeable result will be an increase of insurance rates on vessels listed for the Columbia river. A few of the up-river men have for years been doing everything in their power to drive shipping to Puget Sound and that they are meeting with success in that regard is shown by an examination of the lists of craft en route to the two ports.

Judge McBride's decision yesterday in the local option case is one which will not only settle a much mooted question but it will also tend to make people investigate the meaning of amendments to the city charter before voting for or against them. Since the ruling in the case regarding the effect of the Medford charter on the local option law there has been a difference of opinion as to what the relation was between the charters of other cities and this state law. Judge McBride's ruling determines that question and leaves the local option law effective here the same as before the charter was amended.

Terrible punishment is dealt out to the law breakers and murderers in Georgia. A young man shot and killed his stepmother in 1904. He also became suspicious by his absence, but the event didn't excite much enthusiasm or curiosity with the authorities and they never made a move to apprehend the young man. A few days since the stepmother-shooter returned to his old home and walked into the sheriff's office, saying he would like to have a trial at once on the easiest plan that the law could produce. Somebody dug up a law or an alleged law that permitted him to plead guilty of "shooting at another," which in his case meant shooting at his step-mother to which he promptly plead guilty. The court became very chummy with the young man and said if he would pay in cash the sum of $150 he would be released. If he didn't the prison doors would swing open for him and it would be nine long months before he would be permitted to breathe the air of liberty. He accommodated the judge with the cash, all went out and took a drink together and now the young man is thinking of settling down in the old home and running for mayor.

Uncle Sam has decided to build a 14-inch gun, the largest in the world, at a cost of $100,000, and it is to be a part of the armament of one of the new leviathans. Improvements like this show how hard it is to keep track of the relative strength of navies.

"Good housekeepers don't buy ground coffee," says Mrs. Brown. "It loses it's strength—is not near as good as Folger's Golden Gate whole roast, ground just before using."

It might cut short disputes to let the conservation of our national resources committee have a say as to what happens to the constitution too

Horseless sleigh rides will draw a huge "best girl" vote as soon as chauffeurs learn to feed the power on without touching a hand to it.

Also let the secret service men peep into the home life of that official who is constantly predicting "another cold wave."

It is reported that African cannibals are stocking heavily in new cures for dyspepsia to meet a coming emergency.

It is said that the notorious suppressed kaiser interview was cooked up in Vienna. The merry city on the Danube seems to be humming as a storm center these days.

The harder Jeff shrinks from meeting the colored champion the sooner he'll get in shape to re-annex the black belt to white territory.

It will be useless to put the trusts into a corporation bureau, then give the lock combination to their hired man.

Easy for the winner to get votes and shouts, but when he asks the shouters for real work—why, "that's different."

Some day we may have a president who will make snow shoveling stunts the test for athletic ability.

The Prison Fit.

"Something always happens to a man's shape if he stays in jail long enough," said a warden. "Sometimes that change in figure is due to putting off or taking on flesh, but I have noticed that if a man leaves jail weighing to the very ounce what he weighed when he went in his clothes don't fit. No matter what the scales say, a man's figure seems to swell out here and shrink away there, to become elongated or sawed off during imprisonment. The clothes that he wore into jail may be first class as to quality and fit, but when the man gets ready for freedom they have a regular 'jail' set, and he never can feel right till he gets a new suit."—Exchange.

A Hiding Place For Money.

According to an insurance agent whose round is in a squalid locality of a large city, money is frequently kept in Bibles by poor people. A laundress blessed with an intemperate husband showed the collector her little treasury, which she kept between the leather of the back of a colossal volume. Access was gained to this savings bank by means of a slit cut near the edge of the cover, the coins resting safely between the board and its outer covering. She declared that this secret place had contained the hidden wealth of mother, grandmother and great-grandmother and that her eldest daughter was to possess the Bible and share the mystery as soon as she married.—New York Mail.

I'D LIKE TO DAIL IT BUT MY WIFE, YER KNOW-

Trust your friends and stand by them, but keep your property in your wife's name

If some men who earn their own living would be satisfied with just that a lot of idle loafers would have to get busy.

It doesn't take much to make a resolution, but the trouble comes in making it keep resolved.

Any one can make a prophecy, but it requires a good sidestepper to stand from under afterward.

There is no use regretting the past, and experience says there is little good taking heed for the future either.

Don't tell your troubles if you can help it and if you can't tell them to skiddoo.

There is nothing so hopeless as a bright young man. He is so self sufficient that there is no room on his horizon for anything but himself, and probably never will be.

FREIGHT MARKET CONTINUES QUIET

Few new Charters of Vessels Being Reported

C. Beyfuss Co., San Francisco ship and freight brokers report freights and charters for last week as follows:

"Coastwise Lumber—The lumber market is very dull, caused by the bad weather we have been having in San Francisco for the past thirty to forty days having stopped building operations, consequently there is no lumber moving from the yards. During the week chartering has been quiet; there are only one or two fixtures to report. The steamer Majestic will load at Columbia river for San Pedro at $4 and the steamer J. B. Stetson will take a full cargo from Willapa harbor to San Francisco. The Lottie Bennett was also chartered at $3.75 and will load on the Columbia river for San Francisco.

"Grain Coastwise—The demand reported last week for Southern California has resulted in the charter of one or two steamers with destinations at San Pedro. They will receive $2.50 for wheat and $3 for the barley that they carry. The steamer Nome City will return to Portland for a cargo of wheat and will receive $2 for freighting it to San Francisco

"Grain Offshore—The grain market still continues quiet and there is only one fixture to report: the French bark Desaix at 15s—spot loading to the United Kingdom, H. A. D.

"Offshore Lumber—It is reported that the French ship Berengere has been taken for South Africa, but the rate has not yet been disclosed. The schooner Admiral, now at Willapa harbor, received thirty-five shillings for loading lumber for Adelaide, Australia.

The James Kerr, now on Puget Sound, will load for the United Kingdom at 40 s 6d and the Loudon Hill has been fixed for similar business at 41s 3d one port, 48s, 9d two ports, while the Procyon has been reported at 42s 6d from Puget Sound to Valparaiso, for orders.

"The Norwegian steamer Rygja has been fixed on time charter for the Pacific trade for a period of three years at $1,000, and it is also reported that the Henrik Ibsen, Selja and Hercules have been fixed for the same period on a basis of 3s. This seems to confirm the rumor that one of the steamships companies, operating from Northern ports will substitute Norwegian vessels for those they are now operating under the German flag. All four vessels are very good sized—ranging from 2,300 to 3,000 tons register."

CHINESE FORM STEAMER LINE

Will Operate Between Pacific Coast Ports and the Orient

An independent steamship line across the Pacific is planned by a company known as the Chinese Merchants Steamship company. The proposition is to operate steamers between San Francisco, Astoria, Seattle and other northwest and Canadian ports and the China coast.

The company which is said to be backed by large capital, is being organized by Chinese merchants on the Pacific coast. The initiative was taken at San Francisco in order to carry still further and more effectively the boycott recently placed against the Japanese steamers in the Transpacific trade and to provide more satisfactory transportation facilities.

The company will start out with three large steamers, operating much along the same route as the steamers of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship company, which is part of the Pacific Mail Steamship company, or, in other words, a branch of the Harriman concern.

The company will operate independent of other transportation lines, and even of any Chinese government subsidy, but will have the benefit of being the favored line by its prominent backers, who to a large extent control the eastbound freight. It is held that they also have a great deal to say about the westbound shipments, should they care to swing it to any one particualr steamship line.

In connection with the launching of this concern comes the announcement that possibly the Hamburg-American liners now covering the route of the Portland & Asiatic steamship company will be chosen for a beginning, until steamers can be built or purchased. These boats have been in this service for four years, but are to be replaced this summer by a fleet of Norweigan steamers and will therefore be open for engagement. It is thought not very likely that the Chinese would put on craft larger than these liners, which have a capacity of about 7000 tons each.

SALMON OUTPUT FOR PAST YEAR

Great Gain Among the Alaska Plants

The total salmon pack of the Pacific coast during the season of 1908 was 3,852,592 cases, against 3,869,023 cases in 1907,' according to the annual review of the salmon industry which appeared yesterday in the Pacific Fisherman.

"The pack in Alaska is the largest in the history of the industry, exceeding the previous banner pack of 1902 by 54,686 cases, the figures being 2,619,019 in 1908, as compared with 2,554,423 in 1902", says the review.

"Of the 1908, pack, 1,651,191 cases are Red salmon, 707,516 cases Pinks, 168,067 cases Chums, 23,526 cases Kings and 68,719 cases Cohoes.

"Although the pack on Puget sound this year was comparatively small and was not as large in the aggregate as last year, the pack of Sockeye were better than was anticipated, considering the record of off years of late. The pack in 1907 was 721,326 cases, but this was the result of an abnormally large run of Pink salmon, which more than doubled the size of the pack. The pack of Sockeyes for 1908 was 165,038 cases, while in 1907 the pack of this grade, usually considered the chief commercial salmon of Puget sound, was only 90,419 cases. In 1907, however, 452,474 cases of Pink salmon were packed on Puget sound, while in 1908, there was no run of this salmon and none of this grade was packed. Thus, in Sockeyes, which most Puget sound canneries make a feature of, the season of 1908 was moresuccessful than that of 1907. The run of Cohoes, or Fall salmon, was light, and as most of the cannerymen exceeded their expectations in Sockeyes and had their cans pretty well filled, they did not attempt to make a heavy pack of Chooes or Chums.

"The aggregate pack for the Columbia river falls over 50,000 cases below what it was in 1907. This loss was occasioned through the fact that the fall fishing season was almost a failure, the run of fish being poor and the conflicting laws of Washington and Oregon causing complications that for a while brought fishing to a standstill.

"The pack on the outside rivers of Washington and Oregon falls about 25,000 cases blow last year, the pack last year being 125,591 cases.

"The total salmon pack of British Columbia for the season of 1908 amounted to 542,689 cases. This is 76,795 cases in excess of the total pack of the year 1904, the period corresponding in the four-year cycle with the season just closed. The increase in favor of the pack of 1908 is placed to the credit of greater propagation in the year 1904. Of the pack of 1908, the of Sockeye salmon amouned to 356,023 cases, and the remainder of the pack consisted of Red and White Springs, Chums, Pinks and Cohoes. Last season the Skeena river led all the salmon streams in the matter of Sockeye pack, putting up no less than 139,846 cases. The next best Sockeye district was Rivers Inlet, with 64,652 cases. The Fraser River Sockeye fisheries last season did not turn out more than 63,126 cases. Outlying districts supplied 59,815 cases of Sockeye, and the Nass 27,584 cases.

Ornithology.

"What's your son Bill doing these days?" asked the windmill salesman.

"Bill!" ejaculated the old farmer, with a broad grin. "Oh, Bill's court in'. Got a different gal for every night in the week, stranger."

"H'm! Bill's a bird."

"Waal, I should say so, a regular spoon-Bill."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

BOUNTY EARNER TAKES CHARTER

Accepts Freight at a Very low Rate

San Francisco, Feb. 18—It was reported today that one of the two French vessels in port had been chartered to carry a full cargo of barley to the United Kingdom for 15 shillings and that negotiations were under way for the charter of the other at an even cheaper rate.

The rate of 15 shillings for barley is equal to about 13 shillings 9 pence for wheat, or the lowest figure that has been accepted by any vessel on the coast this season. The record low price for barley from this port is 10 shillings, which was done several years ago.

An Iquique wire today states that the French bark Brizeux sailed from that port January 21 for Eureka. She is under charter to load redwood there for the United Kingdom account of Bowring & Co. W. Leslie Comyn., Pacific coast manager of Bowring Co., returns from Tacoma tomorrow, where he opened up another branch office.

Shipping has been exceedingly dull during the past few days, the only arrivals and departures being the usual coastwise vessels.

The steamer Pleiades, under charter to the American-Hawaiian company, was to depart Friday, but was detained by drydocking and will not get away for Honolulu until tonight. She will not go to the Sound on this trip.

The Japanese liner Tenyo Maru got in late today from the Orient, and the Pacific Mail liner Mongolia will get away for the Orient tomorrow. Owing to the washouts on the transcontinental roads the Mongolia's cargo will be very light.

TO REGULATE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Washington, Feb. 18—The most important legislation agreed to by the house in years was today incorporated in the penal code bill which was under consideration. The legislation seeks to regulate the interstate shipment of intoxicating liquors. Speaker Cannon took the floor and voted for the legislation.

Robert Wakefield, the contractor, has received instructions from the officers of the Harriman system to recommence work on the piers and abutments for the railroad bridge across the Willamette river at Oswego. The work on these piers was commenced in 1907 and was discontinued in October of that year, after about one-tenth of the labor had been completed. Mr. Wakefield states that it will now take about five months to finish these piers and abutments, and they will require about 9000 yards of concrete work and the labor of between 50 and 60 men. The building of this bridge will enable trains from the Willamette valley and southern Oregon to connect direct with the road now building via the Nehalem valley to Astoria.

It is said the new company will establish depots at Yaquina and Astoria.

The people living in the district surrounding the intersection of Twelfth and Grand avenue are very much interested in the recently announced intention of the improvement of Twelfth street. A petition is being prepared to be presented to the members of the council asking that when the improvement is made the block intersecting be left for park purposes and a public square. The block if improved would not be of much use on account of its extreme grade and would be of more benefit as a public square or a play ground for children. The location commands a splendid view of the Columbia and no doubt this park place would become quite a center for visitors.

The trial of Wm. Nyberg on an indictment charging him with violating the local option law by selling intoxicating liquor in Astoria precinct No Six, which is a "dry" precinct, was commenced in the circuit court this morning before a jury, consisting of Jacob Heblack, John Chitwood, A. W. Utzinger, Peter Gullickson, Hugh Cameron, W. C. Shaw S. Abrahamson, John Nordstorm, F. W. Preston, Geo. L. Hills and W. E. Balckstock. Two indictments had been pending against the defendant on this charge and this morning the grand jury returned seven additional indictments against him. He will plead to these tomorrow morning. The cases of James Finlayson vs Frank Patton et al and of G. Wingate vs Frank Patton et al was set for trial on February 26.

Negotiations are in progress for the purchase by the Union Fishermen's Co operative Packing Company of a tract of about 300 feet of water frontage near the old Scandinavian cannery. The tract is owned by Isaac Bergman.

The First Company Coast Artillery Corps, is changing its headquarters today and in the future the weekly drills will be held at the athletic club building.

The interested property owners have awarded a contract to [illegible] Lebeck to improve Bond street, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets for $8 per lineal foot or total of about $3800. Permission was granted by the council a short time ago to have the work done by private contract.

At this afternoon's session of the circuit court a decree of divorce was granted in the case of Frances Bell Carr vs George S. Carr. The grand jury is still in session but what matters are being taken up is not announced. While the district attorney and his deputy were engaged today in prosecuting a case in the circuit court, the grand jury visited the various county offices and made an examination of the records.

Birch & Jacobsen have received a contract to place a new foundation under the Masonic Temple building and as soon as weather condition are favorable the work will be hastened as rapidly as possible. Taylor avenue in Uniontown has been so badly damaged by the recent storms that Street Superintendent Kearney has found it necessary to close it up temporarily for the use of teams. He expects however that within a couple of days he will have it in condition for use.

Major Bartlett, formerly of Puget Sound, has arrived at Fort Stevens and assumed command of that post and the district of the Columbia, which comprises Fort Stevens, Columbia and Canby. He supersedes Captain Willis, of Fort Columbia, in command of this district, and Captain Raymondin command of Fort Stevens. His appointment is probably largely influenced by the fact that he is an expert authority on electric installation and can aid in profecting and expediting the work in connection with the new fire-control system.

S. Danziger is in the city on a short trip of business and pleasure and gives an interesting account of business conditions in San Francisco and the country adjacent to it. He says that this winter has been the worst that has been known there in 60 years, according to the evidence of the oldest inhabitants and official records. The Sacramento valley has become an inland sea, doing damage of millions of dollars to the transportation companies. In the city itself general business is at a standstill and many large establishments are conducting business at a loss and which it will take a very prosperous spring and summer to equalize.

Franklin P. Moon, a well known citizen of Hammond, died this morning on the steamer T. J. Potter as he was returning from The Dalles where he has been ill for several weeks. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. W. B. Chilton and was on his way to the post hospital at Fort Stevens for treatment for some stomach trouble, with which he was suffering. He was formerly in the employ of the engineering department there and lost his left hand by having had it caught in some machinery and this gave him the privilege of attending the post hospital. His funeral will be held from Hammond on Sunday. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

APPROPRIATION BILL REPORTED

Carries Large Sum for Work on Panama Canal

Washington, Feb. 19—Two more disputes between the president and congress were revived today, when the house committee on appropriations reported the sundry civil appropriation bill. The bill is the largest of the general supply bills and carries $137,022,007. The committee incorporated in the bill the same limitation on the use of the secret service operatives as were included in the bill, which became a law last winter. It was this limitation, which drew from the president his severe criticism in his annual message in December. The committee defended its recommendation of a year ago of $50,000 for the enforcement of sec. 20 of the Hepburn rate law, reappropriating $225,000 of the $350,000 appropriated in the current sundry civi bill for this purpose. The testimony taken by the committee, shows that during seven months of the present year only $41,000 of the fund had been expended and this amount included the salaries of twelve examiners. The largest item in the bill is for work on the Panama Canal for which $33,638,000, is appropriated.

On motion by Mann, of Illinois, the report was referred to the ways and means committee.

STEEL PRICES TO BE REDUCED

Proportionate Reduction of Wages will Follow

New York, Feb. 19—A conference, between the heads of the subsidiary companys of the United States Corporation was held today to discuss the conditions of trade. While no official statement is given out the current report that sweeping reductions in the price of steel, except steel rails, has been decided upon by the corporation to be accepted by a corresponding lowering of wages and that to meet this situation the various independent steel companies were organized for self protection. It was stated unofficially that the United States Steel corporation has determined to abandon its hitherto firm attitude in maintenance of prices of finished steel other than rails and that the market will hereafter be an open one. Steel stocks dropped on the local stock exchange.

VON BUELOW IS AGAIN IN FAVOR

Berlin, Feb. 19—"Upon the solution of the finance problem depends the power and safety of the nation."

These words, spoken by Chancellor von Buelow in an address delivered before the German Agricultural Association, signalize the government's purpose to push the fight for the finance bill with incrased vigor, taken with the Chancellor's declaration that is likely to "remain in office longer than his adversaries hope."

They are thought to mean that Prince von Buelow is again restored to favor, since it is improbable that he would make such a remark without the authorization of the Kaiser.

The forthcoming fight in the Reichstag promises to assume an acutely critical character, as every important feature of Prince von Buelow's plan for increasing the nation's revenue is violently opposed by one faction or another. On the other hand, the steady increase in the annul deficit in time of peace is creating a situation which the govrnement feels to be impossible.

PACKING FIRMS FORMED A TRUST

New York, Feb. 19—The agreement under which the four largest packing firms of the country are connected was made public in the course of the trial of the suit of Frederick Joseph against Ferdinand Sulzbergre, of the firm of Schwarzchild & Sulzberger, for recovery of $200,000 of stock which the plaintiff charges Mr. Sulzberger was converting to his own use.

Dr. Joseph testified that the agreement provided for merging into one corporation the Schwarzchild & Sulzberger Company, the Armour Packing Company, the Swift Company and the Nelson Morris Company. Provision was also made for absorbing the Cudahy Packing Company.

Under the terms of the agreement the stock of the Schwarzchild & Sulzberger Company was to be exchanged for $190 in cash or preferred stock and $200 in common stock of the new corporation.

Owing to the action of the government and the panic of 1907, the proposed consolidation fell through, however, and Mr. Joseph requested that the stock contributed by him to the pool be returned to him. This Mr. Sulzberger refused to do the plaintiff alleged.

BIG TOBACCO COMBINATION

Government Reports on Formation of Great Trust

Washington, D C., Feb. 19—In a report transmitted to President Roosevelt, Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, presents some highly interesting history of the organization of the "Tobacco Combination," which in the magnitude of its business operations, is one of the greatest organizations in America. The report is a result, in part, of an extensive investigation into the tobacco industry made by the bureau of corporations, subsequent reports will deal with the control of the tobacco industry, with price and profits, and with competitive methods.

The reports set forth the rise of one of the great combinations of the country. In his letter of transmittal, Commissioner Smith says that it "deals with the history, from tthe stand point of its organization, of the great tobacco combination. Starting in 1890 as the American tobacco company, a manufacturer of cigarettes, with a capital of $25,000,000, the combination has a net capitalization excluding inter-companys holding of $316,346,821. It has absorbed about 250 seperate concerns, and now controls substantially four-fiths of the outpout of each important kind of tobacco manufactured in the United States, with the exceptions of cigars.

"Its history also presents important features of stock manipulation. The financial transactions centering around the organization of the consolidated tobacco company in 1901 are especially noteworthy. At that time a small body of directors and stockholders in the combination believed that the profits of the combination could be greatly increased in the immediate future. They organized the Consolidated Tobacco Company and offered its bonds in exchange for the common stock of the American and the Continental, in order thus to secure for themselves most of the increased profits about to accrue. The profits accruing to the common stock of the American and the Continental; after its acquisition by the Consolidated, increased greatly; and the small body of men controlling the last named company—so small, in fact that six of them held a majority of its stock and thus controlled the entire combination—became entitled to millions of dollars which, had it not been for the Consolidated transaction, would have gone to the original common-stock holders".

Commissioner Smith says that "in fairness, it should be added that this offer of exchange was made with no concealment of the fact that that offer came from the principal officers and directors of the two companies", but, he adds;

"The conduct of this group of men is a proper subject for criticism, however, because they could foresee much better than outside stockholders the large profits about to accrue. They occupied a fiduciary relation to the outside stockholders, and should have shared with them equally the special knowledge acquired by their position."

The report discusses at length the methods by which the tobacco combinaiton has been developed, including the "bogus independent concerns" of the combination. It points out clearly that "the leading purpose of the men who have controlled it has been to dominate the tobacco industry. The report contains not only the details fo the financial operations of the combination in its rise, but also many interesting sidelights on the schemes employed to make the combination paramount in the tobacco industry.

WHEN A MAN IS MARRIED—

He can't help noticing what a fine fellow the other girls didn't catch, and he takes to watching them slyly to see if he can detect any signs of pining away on their part.

He thinks it is a blamed shame the way some of the unmarried fellows treat some of the girls of his acquaintance. If he had a chance now—er—well, confound it, come to remember he is married.

He can't see why his wife will insist upon his taking care of his things. Hang it all, what does a man have a house for? Of course he considers the top of the piano a most convenient place of deposit whenever he wants to unload his pockets of an indiscriminate mass of letters old and young, cards, cigarette papers, tobacco, bills, clippings and what not, some of which he wants and some he doesn't want. But why should any one object to that? And what did she do with those he wanted anyway?

STOCKHOLDERS BILL AMENDED

Prevents Freezing out of "Small Fry."

Olympia Feb. 19—What some of the members of the senate characterized as a "freeze-out" bill directed at minority stockholders in corporations was passed by the senate today after some of the features objectionable to the majority had been removed.

The bill was introduced by Booth of King and was designed to change the present law which enables one stockholder to block the sale of the property and assets of a corporation.

To a statement made by Cotterill that Booth had admitted in the judiciary committee that the bill had been drawn by James B. Howe, counsel for the Seattle Electric company. Booth admitted that such was the case and declared that Mr. Howe was one of the most substantial and learned constituents.

The bill as originally introduced permitted 5 percent of the stock to vote the selling out of the corporation. This was amended yesterday to 95 per cent. and was still objectionable to Cotterill, who moved to further amend by making the percentage 99.

In opposing the amendment Booth launched into a criticism of members who, he said, every time the word "corporation" appeared in a bill, immediately saw "hobgoblins" and "bugaboos" and Nichols energetically called Booth down for abuse of his fellow senators.

Paulhamus moved an amendment to Cotterill's amendment that the percentage be changed to 84 per cent. and said it did not make any difference whether the bill was originally drawn by Howe or Jacob Furth. The question he said, was whether the legislation desired to encourage additional transportation facilities or not. The members must either be for or against the bill, he said, and he was for it.

LUMBER DUTY IS ASKED FOR

British Columbia Legislature Now Faces Issue'

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 19—For the first time in the history of British Columbia, a commission will be appointed to investigate the timber and forestry matters of the province, with a view to conservation of resources, and for this purpose an appropriation of $5000 appears in the estimate for the ensuing fiscal year. Alluding to the lumber industry, the budget speech delivered yesterday in the provincial legislature says:

"The imposition of a duty on rough lumber imported from the United States would help our lumbermen very materially and the advisability of amending the tariff in that respect is being strongly urged upon the Dominion government. Rapid denudation of the forests of the United States has caused a persistent demand for free Canadian lumber, and if the concession be granted by congress the industry here will be greatly benefited, as many United States capitalists holding timber in this province will be encouarged to establish sawmills and factories on this side of the border."

The estimated revenue of the local legislature for the ensuing year is nearly $6,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 over the figure for 1903.

A Tangle of Letters that Was Finally Made O. K.

The man with a soft, low voice had just completed his purchases.

"What is the name?" asked the clerk.

"Jepson," replied the man.

"Jefferson?"

"No, Jepson; J-e-p-s-o-n."

"Jepson?"

"That's it. Eighty-two"—

"Your first name—initial, please."

"Oh, K."

"O. K. Jepson?"

"Excuse me, it isn't O. K. I said 'Oh.'"

"O. Jepson?"

"No, rub out the O. and let the K. stand."

The assistant looked annoyed.

"Will you please give me your initials again?"

"I said K."

"I beg your pardon, you said O. K. Perhaps you had better write it yourself."

"I said 'Oh'"—

"Just now you said K."

"Allow me to finish what I started to say. I said 'Oh' because I did not understand what you were asking me. I did not mean that it was my initial. My name is Kirby Jepson."

"Oh!"

"No, not O., but K.," said the man. "Give me the pencil and I'll write it down for you myself. There; it's O. K. now!"

Mme. Sainton-Dolby's Romance.

In 1856 Sainton was much interested in the lady whom, four years later, he took to wife. Some impetuous reader may here demand why if he were on excellent terms with Miss Dolby in 1856 he waited till 1860 before enforcing a decision. I can answer that on the authority of the persons most concerned. No ardor was wanting to the lover, but the gifted and stately woman, always so self possessed and dignified, seemed too formidable for any pretensions which Sainton could make. So he worshiped and waited till one day when the pair were touring with a concert company they found themselves two in a compartment. Resolved then to challenge fate, Sainton declared his love and put the momentous question. This was the answer: "Prosper, why did you not ask me before?"—From "Forty Years of Music," by Joseph Bennett.

Hardy on Dialect.

Thomas Hardy as editor of "Selected Poems of William Barnes" takes occasion in his preface to mourn over the disappearance of a good deal of picturesque Dorset dialect which Barnes used as a vehicle for his poetry. "Since his death," he complains, "education in the west of England, as elsewhere, has gone on with its silent and inevitable effacements, reducing the speech of this country to uniformity and obliterating every year many a fine old local word. The process is always the same—the word is ridiculed by the newly taught; it gets into disgrace; it is heard in holes and corners only; it dies, and, worst of all, it leaves no synonym. In the villages that one recognizes to be the scenes of these pastorals the poet's nouns, adjectives and idioms daily cease to be understood by the younger generation."

No Head.

"His wife boasts that she made him what he is."

"H'm! She seems to have neglected to work any higher than his neck."—Puck.

The One Horned Cow

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

Deacon Henderson was a meek man who had married a shrew. Cows troubled the deacon's wife. There was one cow in particular that the deacon always treated with the utmost tenderness and that his wife, per contra, always thirsted to kill on the spot. This was a one horned cow belonging to the Widow Glenn, in the village. At some stage in her cow career some one had knocked her right horn off in treating her as a trespasser. The deacon's wife wanted to maim or kill that cow because the bovine had but the one horn and because she belonged to a widow that had once wondered how the deacon could possibly stand it to live with such a wife. It thus came about that there were mornings when the one horned cow came home with a limp and a dejected attitude and other mornings when she came home with head and tail in the air and believing that life was worth the living. It all depended on whether the deacon or his wife got up first and found her trespassing.

The one horned cow had been what might be called a fixture for two years before the deacon's wife died. The conduct of the cow and the deacon's wife had divided the sentiment of the community. There were the cow party and the anti-cow party, and both of them were provided with powerful arguments to sustain their positions. The wife was several days in dying. When she had given directions about all other things, even to having the barrel of soft soap moved to a shady spot, she said to her husband:

"And now, Job, I want to talk about that one horned cow. I hoped to live long enough to kill her, but Providence has ordered otherwise. I go, and she stays, but I want you to promise to make it hot for her. Knock off her other horn. Break her neck. Spare her not. Have no further mercy on her because she is the cow of a widow. I can't die easy unless you promise me. You will probably find her in the cornfield the day of my funeral. Don't mind me, but get out and go for the cow. Chase her ten times around the lot and break both her hind legs."

It was against the grain, but the deacon wiped the tears from his eyes and promised, and it is due him to say that for a month after the funeral he did his best to carry out the promises. He didn't find the cow trespassing every morning when he turned out of bed. She put in some of her nights elsewhere. When he did find her he clubbed and stoned and raised bumps and lumps on various parts of her body. There came a day, however, when he let up on this. The one horned cow looked at him so mournfully and reproachfully that he couldn't throw another rock. She seemed to beg and appeal to him to give her a show, and he simply pulled up a tall cornstalk by the roots and used it as a gad to drive her to the highway. For the next two months the one horned cow lived on the fat of the land and exulted over other cows with more horns. Then Deacon Henderson found himself in a quandary between his dead wife and the living cow. He had made certain promises to a dying woman. He had failed to break that cow's neck. Instead of so doing he was treating her with all love and gentleness. This fact began to worry the good man. He grew thin over it, and he was yet undecided when the minister of his church called one afternoon. Here was the opportunity to unburden himself, and it was taken advantage of. The minister heard him through without a word and then said:

"I am surprised that Sister Henderson carried such a feeling to the grave with her. I wish you had not promised what you did, and yet it would be unnatural for you to carry out those promises. You have probably tried to break that cow's neck?"

"For three or four weeks I tried my best," was the answer.

"You didn't even succeed in knocking the other horn off?"

"No. It's there yet."

"And you broke none of her legs?"

"Not a leg."

"Well, then, you have tried and failed. It is not your fault that you have failed, but you had better stop right there. Something is owing to cows as well as to the departed. On the other hand, the Widow Glenn, knowing that her one horned cow is a botheration and a damage to you, has no right to let her run at large and to be defiant about it. Neither can she reasonably expect that you will continue to treat her animal with the mercy and tenderness you do."

"But there ought to be some way out of it," said the deacon.

"Yes, there ought. Suppose you were to call on the widow and talk things over in a friendly way."

"But she might turn me outdoors."

"I will see her first. I think you will find her gentle and amiable. Yes, I am sure you will."

A month later the deacon called. The one horned cow was discussed from the tip of her one horn to the tip of her ragged tail, but without acrimony. Six months after that, as the couple drove up to the house after a visit to the preacher's that made them man and wife, the old cow was at the gate to greet them.

"What are we going to do with her?" asked the deacon.

"Have her in the beef barrel afore tomorrow night," answered the bride. "We ain't a-going to take no chances on a one horned cow bringing us together and then hooking us apart."

Indisputable Evidence.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

The case of Peter Lusher was called. The judge, having asked him if he had employed counsel and receiving the reply that he had not, appointed a recent graduate of an eastern law school to defend him.

Lusher, a cowboy, was charged with having fired a shot at the conductor of a freight train with intent to kill. The conductor had put him off the train, passengers not being carried on freight trains. While the conductor was climbing back on to a car Lusher fired the shot. A brakeman came up behind him and held him till other employees of the road gathered round, took him in charge and at the next town turned him over to the police.

Another cowboy, Shattuck, a pal of Lusher, was on a rear car of the same train. He testified that he and Lusher were traveling together; that they were accustomed to travel on freight trains; that on such occasions they usually separated in order to attract less attention, and that if one were put off a train the other fired a shot from his revolver as a signal of the fact to the other, who then left the train. Lusher, backed by this testimony, claimed that instead of shooting with intent to injure the conductor he was merely giving the usual signal to Shattuck, who was on one of the rear cars.

There was no one in court, including the prisoner's counsel, who did not consider this plea very farfetched. The case looked bad for Lusher, for if convicted of trying to kill the conductor he could not hope for a less sentence than five years at hard labor in the penitentiary. When the jury was about to retire the prisoner said to the judge:

"Your honor, does any one yere think that I've been goin' around with two revolvers at my hips for ten years for nothin'? D'ye suppose I couldn't hit the man's body if I wanted to? All I ask is for the court to be adjourned outside and I'll show what tomfoolery this yere trial is."

There was something so convincing in this argument that the judge adjourned the court, and judge, attorneys, jury and spectators, lighting cigars, went out into the courthouse yard to find out why the cowboy missed the conductor.

The prisoner's pal, Shattuck, consented to be shot at. Lusher borrowed a quarter from the judge, inserting its lower edge between his friend's thumb and forefinger, stood off twenty paces and sent the coin spinning in the air without bringing a drop of blood to Shattuck's fingers. The coin happened to fall at the feet of the judge, who picked it up and, noticing its battered appearance, remarked audibly:

"By thunder!"

Lusher next procured a thread and, tying a walnut to one end of it, put the other end in Shattuck's hand, who held the nut suspended. Lusher walked away from his mark, counting forty paces, turned and before the spectators realized that he had raised his pistol cracked the nut.

There were more exclamations. Lusher then tied a stone to the thread and from the same distance as he had cracked the nut cut the thread at the middle.

By this time it began to look as if, had Lusher been vindictive toward the conductor, he could have cut off an ear, darkened an eye or put a ball through the center of his heart without half trying. Some one suggested as much, but Lusher declared that if he was to be vindicated he wanted the vindication to be satisfactory and proceeded with the exhibition. Borrowing a hunting watch from a juryman, he opened the case, which was highly polished and would serve for a reflector. Pointing to a break in the bark of a tree about two inches in diameter, he walked twenty paces from it and, still keeping his back toward it, caught the target's reflection in the watch case, fired over his shoulder and put a bullet in the improvised mark.

At this the spectators cried, "Acquit him!" The judge ordered the jury back into the courtroom, and as they were proceeding thither the prisoner cut a hole in each of their hats without scratching a head.

"You quit that," cried the foreman angrily, "or you'll get ten years!"

When court was resumed and the jury had been charged the foreman spoke a few words to the jury in a low tone, then arose and said:

"Your honor, the jury finds that the defendant is not guilty of attempting to kill the plaintiff. Furthermore, if he had intended to kill the plaintiff he could have shot off his fingers and toes separately, chipping off pieces of him till there was nothing left but his heart to keep on beating. Furthermore, it wouldn't be safe to convict him unless he's unarmed and no weapon within ten miles, for he could kill every mother's son of us before we could get him under."

"The prisoner is discharged," said the judge, following the verdict with remarkable activity, and, stepping down from the bench he took the precaution to grasp the cowboy's hand fervently that he might make peace with him before he had a chance to shoot. Every man in the courtroom insured his own safety by following the judge's example. Last of all came the conductor, who told the acquitted man that whenever he and his friend wished to ride on his train to step right into the caboose and if he would notify him a sumptuous lunch would be provided. Then Lusher walked out of the courtroom a conquering hero.

FORREST LIKE A THUNDERSTORM

The Great Tragedian's Acting Saturated with Realism

Edwin Forrest, says William Winter in "Other Days," was an uncommonly massive and puissant animal, and all of his impersonations were more physical than intellectual, while no one of them possessed any spiritual element whatever.

From the first and until the last his acting was saturated with "realism," and that was one reason of his extensive popularity. He could at all times be seen, heard and understood. He struck with a sledge hammer. Not even nerves of gutta percha could remain unshaken by his blow. In the manifestation of terror he lolled out his tongue, contorted his visage, made his frame quiver and used the trick sword with the rattling hilt. In scenes of fury he panted, snorted and snarled like a wild beast. In death scenes his gasps and gurgles were protracted and painfully literal. The bellow that he emitted when, as Richelieu, he threatened to launch the ecclesiastical curse almost made the theater walls tremble. The snarling yell of ferocity that burst from him when, as Jack Cade, he recognized and sprang upon Lord Say in the forest fairly frightened his hearers. His utterance of Lear's delirious prayer to nature was like a thunderstorm. Often he produced amazingly consolatory effects, affording ample gratification to the overstrained feeling of his audience, desirous—as in stormy passages of "King Lear" and "Othello," the forum scene of "Virginius," the statue scene of "Brutus" and the scaffold scene of "Damon and Pythias"—that something tempestuous and terrific should be said and done. There are times when it is a comfort to see somebody who can let himself go. Forrest could. His style accordingly had its positive, ample, undeniable merits, but neither he nor his apostles were ever satisfied with acknowledgment of those merits at their actual worth.

Sister Gregory of the Little Sisters of the Poor, Seattle, Wash., is possessor of a certificate which entitles her to practice as a stationary engineer. She recently passed examination before the board of engineers and is authorized to operate steam plants with not more than fifteen pounds pressure.

Mrs. Herman V. Hilprecht, wife of the archaeologist, has a diamond studded medallion, insignia of the knight commander of the Shefaket, which was given to her by the sultan of Turkey. In the center of the star of brilliants are sixty rubies. The sultan conferred the honor upon her in 1907 out of regard for her husband.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

Judging from Governor Chamberlain's special message to the legislature urging the passage of the proposed measure authorizing the state to construct railroads, the chief executive does not place much credence in the announcement that the Harriman lines are to build a road thru central Oregon in the immediate future. Of course, the announcement says the work will be commenced after the surveys are approved and that may be a long time. However, if we have about two more sessions of the legislature as extravagant as the present one, the state will not have funds enough to build a sidewalk to say nothing of a railroad.

Have you any idea as to the number of cigars smoked in the United States? The annual report of the commissioner of internal revenue for 1907 gives the production of large cigars in this country for that fiscal year as being 7,428,651,943. Small cigars, 1,152,525,926. Cigarettes, 5,207,134,513. These figures are staggering—when it comes to billions man's mind has no conception of numbers. Altogether in round numbers nearly fourteen billion cigars and cigarettes. Then think how many cigarettes are rolled by the hands of smokers. If the moral reformers should happen to put king alcohol out of business they would not be without a job. Fourteen billion cigars and cigarettes manufactured in a year.

Joseph W. Folk, as governor of Missouri, came to the conclusion that government is more popular when fewer officials are elected by the people. This is contrary to common view, which is that the more officials the people elect, the closer is the government to the people. Mr. Folk puts the matter thus: "Paradoxical as it may seem the fewer elective offices we have the more government by the people we shall have. It is this way: The people have no organization. They cannot organize for the election of many. They can concentrate their attention on one man. They can devote their thought to the election of a governor and get a good man. But when it comes to electing the various other state officials is a difficult task for them to become posted on the qualifications of the various candidates and they vote more or less blindly." He submits that "special interests" have less difficulty about keeping posted than do the people, and as a result "special interests" have an advantage in the election of a large number of officials. On this as on many other questions there is something to be said on both sides. It may be said that when there are many officials elected, some are reasonably sure to "squeal" if they discover wrong, and with many officials it is more probable that wrong will be discovered. After the merits and demerits of all the systems are weighed, it is still found that good men are indispensable to good government. When the standard of public morals is raised, the standard of public service is pretty certain to be raised at the same time.

The Oregon senate has passed a bill extending act of 1907 appropriating $300,000 for the purchase of the locks and canal at Oregon City in four years, as amended in the ways and means committee. The time was extended from two years to four years and the money already collected under the act made available for the general fund, but authorizing new levies of $100,000 per year. The state board is empowered to draw a warrant of the full amount whenever congress passes the bill to take over and maintain the locks and canal free to the people. The bill passed by the senate is the ways and means committee substitute for the Jones' bill as it passed the house.

WHY NOT BUILD MORE?

There has been a lack of construction work in Astoria during the past few months that is noticeable to almost everyone in face of the fact that there exists a strong demand for new and modern dwellings, apartment houses and business blocks.

One of the most important reasons given for this lack of improvement is that property owners have placed too high a value upon their holdings and will neither sell or lease their lands with sufficient inducements to stimulate the building habit, while the owners of property themselves refuse to make improvements on the ground that it would not pay interest on their investments.

The method adopted by all progressive cities is to induce capital to improve all unproductive city realty wherever possible; create homes for working men to live in instead of seeking temporary locations; modernizing retail districts so that the business activity of the city always appeals to the trade and retain the money at home. The most important effort of all is to find the energy to build when lack of capital is evident on one's own part.

This is what makes cities grow, because when those who reside in a given place illustrated by their own force that they have confidence in the location, it proves to the investor, the manufacturer and the artisan, that this must surely be the right place to live and prosper. Ambition to do things radiates prosperity and health and happiness follow.

So the Astorians "smoke up" a litte and start a building boom this spring. Let those who own property make it known that every inducement will be given for desirable leases or transfer of realty and the result will be that many laboring men will erect comfortable homes; businessmen will develop some long cherished ideas to improve their establishments and everybody will be benefitted.

POOR SEASON IS PREDICTED

For Mild Cured Salmon of Alaskan Grades

A. H. Sonsthagen, of Cape Fanshaw, who is probably the best posted man in Southeastern Alaska on the fish business, was recently interviewed by a Seattle Times reporter, and gives out as his opinion that the market for mild cured salmon will not be so good this season as heretofore. He says:

"From what I can learn the outlook for mild cured Alaska Salmon is not of the brightest, and the prices for 1909 may be as much as from 1½ to 2 cents per pound less than a year ago. The only way I can account for this condition is that the salmon industry seems to suffer from the depression of a year ago, and if conditions do not improve the mild cured pack of Alaska fish will be small this year."

WYOMING MAN FOR CABINET

Van Deventer to be Secretary of Treasury

Washington, Feb 19--It is highly probable that the secretary of the treasury in the cabinet of President Taft will be Willis Van Deventer, of Wyoming, for the last six years a judge of the United States circuit court for the Eighth district.

Judge Van Deventer would have preferred to be attorney general, and it is barely possible that there will be a shifting about of names on the cabinet slate to permit his appointment to that position.

Judge Van Deventer is 50 years old, and was born in Indiana. He went to Wyoming in 1884. He was appointed chief justice of the supreme court of Wyoming by President Harrison in the territorial days and in 1887 was appointed assistant attorney general for the interior department.

He has high repute as a jurist and there is no doubt that his appointment to the cabinet will eventually lead to his appointment as a member of the United States Supreme court.

ATTRACTIONS CANCELLED

Astoria Theatre Unable to Secure Big Shows this Season

Manager Hanlin of the Astoria theatre is up in arms over the recent action of the theatrical association in cancelling some of the big companies booked to appear in Astoria.

The Northwest theatrical association is not to blame for this inasmuch as it has always shown a willingness to give Astoria the best that has appeared in the coast cities, but owing to the arbitary rates charged on the railroads from Portland to Astoria the association has determined to cancel the engagements of the larger companies and thus obviate any further financial loss.

Manager Hanlin states that it is impossible for a company containing 30 or 40 people to visit Astoria and play oven after paying the regular railroad fare demanded by the railroad. A special rate is given to theatrical people on specified days, such as Saturday and Sunday, which are classed under the head of excursion rates, but it is impossible for every large company that is booked to appear here to make dates that will accomodate the railroad method of selling tickets.

An illustration is cited thru the Hanford Company that appeared in Astoria last Wednesday evening. With a total membership of about 20 people it is said that owing to the advanced rates which it was obliged to pay to reach Astoria the company did not make expenses from its production here.

With such a company as "Stubborn Cinderella" that carries over 50 people and a carload of special scenery, "The Burgomaster" and other spectacular productions with a membership averaging over 40 people, it appears to be against the business judgment to send them off the main line of any railroad on account of the extra fare required. As a rule when these theatrical productions start on a tour from the east they are booked direct to a given point in the west and whenever a production is given off the main line of the railroad an additional local fare, usually of a probibitory nature, is abstracted and thus making it almost impossible for the smaller towns in the west to secure them.

The recent action taken by the theatrical association means that in the future Astoria and other towns similarly situated will not be able to enjoy any of the first class productions in the future unless some amicablle agreement can be reached with railroads.

CLATSOP EXHIBIT AT SEATTLE FAIR

This County will be well Represented

C. S. Dow, who will have charge of the Clatsop county exhibit at the Seattle fair this summer has returned from that city where he made the preliminary arrangements for the display and was fortunate in securing desirable space near the general fisheries exhibit. He believes that this county will be the best represented of any county in Oregon. He has already forwarded a portion of the exhibit taken from that used at the state fair at Salem and is now busily engaged in collecting the balance. A specialty will be made of the fishing and lumbering industries and is meeting with ready cooperation from the millmen, and cannerymen. Special advertising matter for distribution among the visitors to the fair is being prepared under the direction of the chamber of commerce and it will be in the nature of a handsome souvenir.

WOMAN'S CRIES SAVES THE CREW

Screams Heard Above Noise of Storm

Juneau, Feb. 19 – The steamer Northwestern, which arrived from Valdez last night, brought five survivors of the schooner Nugget, picked up near Lituya bay, who had been at the mercy of the elements for nearly a week.

A party of six left this city last summer prospecting. They remained at Lituya until their provisions were exhausted. Then they started out in the Nugget, a schooner of five tons capacity. The party was caught in a storm and drifted helpless until picked up by the Northwestern.

The lookout on the big vessel heard a woman scream. The sea was extreemly rough, and in anscending the rope ladder Louis Jordan lost his hold and fell into the sea and was drowned.

The engineer of the Northwestern was struck by the mast of the plunging schooner and severely injured. He remainded behind at the Sister's hospital here.

The survivors of the Nugget are Charles Byron, captain; Daniel Wagner, John Finley, C. Lukan and Mrs. Lukan. Jordan was a brother of Mrs. Lukan.

Joey's Luck.

It was Joey's first term at school, and he had had troubles of his own getting used to the routine. One day a friend of the family said to him, "Joey, I suppose you are at the head of your class."

"Oh, yeth, thir," replied Joey, with a smile.

"Why, Joey, how is that?" said his father. "You have always been at the foot."

"Yeth, thir; but, you see, the teacher turned the clath around." Ladies' Home Journal.

Won't Eat Their Relatives.

The thick forest along the banks of the Semliki, in eastern Africa, is densely inhabited by pygmies. They are cannibals and when pressed for food exchange their children for those of other families. They refuse to eat members of their own families. At the southern end of the frontier of the Kongo Independent State there are people who owe allegiance to no chiefs, each family owning its own village and recognizing no head. The whole community, however, is dominated by a clan of witch women, who are extremely hostile to Europeans.

Tim Knew the Law.

Tim was a protege of Mr. Blank, a well known lawyer. He was often in trouble, but by personal influence with the courts Mr. Blank managed to have him let down easy, so it became a matter of talk that he did not suffer greatly in being arrested.

"How is it, Tim," some one asked one day, "that you are arrested very often, but never go to jail or pay any fines?"

"It's just this way," Tim replied. "I have Mr. Blank for me lawyer, and what he doesn't know about the law I tells him."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Dog Ghosts.

The phantom dog specter was one of the hardiest of old English superstitions. Almost every county had its black dog which haunted its lonely spots and was the dread of every native. Most of them were regarded as devils, but some were held to be the spirits of human beings transformed thus as a punishment. Lady Howard, a Devon notable of the days of James I., for instance, was said to be compelled to haunt Okehampton in the form of a dog as a punishment for her cruelty to her daughter.—London Chronicle.

DRYS PROPOSE DRASTIC MEANS

Would Confiscate Property of Liquor Sellers

Salem, Or., Feb 19—Objecting that Representative Mahoney's bill relating to the enforcement of local option in dry territories is too drastic, opponents of the measure will make a determined fight in the senate.

The committee on revision of laws, to which it was referred, is divided. Three members, a majority, will recommend that it pass with certain amendments, Norton and Coffey are against the bill, taking the view that it amounts to an amendment of the local option law and declaring they are opposed to changing the law in any respect.

The bill declares any place in which liquor is bartered, sold or given away in violation of law a nuisance, authorizes the confiscation of such property and gives the right of search where it is suspected that liquor traffic is being carried on in dry territory. It makes a place for prosecuting officers of the Anti-Saloon league by providing that private persons may employ assistant prosecutors who shall be recognized by the courts.

Friends of the bill say it is merely intended to make effective the enforcement of the law in territory voted dry and that the liquor interests have no rights there that anyone is bound to respect.

There are about twelve generations of flies a year, the sexes being about equally divided, each female laying about 1,000 eggs.

Why Ivory Soap, or any other, should be a valuable insecticide is hard to explain, but it is a fact. It has the advantage of not making the bushes unsightly as Bordeaux mixture does. ABOUT ASTORIA

A decree of divorce was granted in the circuit court last evening in the case of Ada Eberman vs J. P. Eberman.

The steamer Cascade cleared at the custom house today four San Francisco with a cargo of 520,000 feet of lumber loaded at Prescott.

Mrs. Samuel Elmore, who has been quite ill for some time, is now much better and in a short time will accompany Mr. Elmore to California for the balance of the summer.

A deed was filed for record this morning, whereby the Moore Hotel Company sells the Moore hotel property at Seaside and two lots in Hustler's Astoria to John C. Ainswoath of Portland for a consideration of $60,000.

A petition was filed in the city auditor's office this morning by Frank Patton and other interested property owners, asking permission to improve Bond street, between Ninth and Tenth streets by private contract.

P. J. McGowan, the veteran Columbia river canneryman, who has been ill for sometime as a result of injuries received by a fall, is reported to be improving and it is expected will soon regain his accustomed good health.

The announcement is made that a deal has been closed whereby Isaac Bergman sells to the Union Fishermen's Co-operative Packing Company, block four, Alderbrook comprising 300 feet of water frontage, for a consideration of $9000.

North Yakima is to have a large holding company, backed by the Commercial Club, for the purpose of assisting factories to locate there. The object will be to incorporate with a large capital stock, purchase sites for deserving projects, and also assist such projects.

C. I. Spencer who had his right eye injured while workng at the Clatsop Mill on Wednesday has so far recovered under the care of Dr. Pilkington that it will not be necessary to consult a specialist in Portland as was at first thought and from present indications he will retain the sight of his eye.

Secretary W. A. Kinney of the Astoria Athletic Club returned last evening from a business visit to Portland. He was successful in securing a match game for Astoria with the basket ball team of the Vancouver Athletic Club and also that of the Multnomah team to take place some time during the month of March.

Joe Phililps, expects to leave for Fairbanks Alaska this evening, where he will go into the express and transfer business. He will take with him from Seattle a fine large team of horses, Mrs. Phillips will visit her mother in Eureka until the summer is well on when she will also leave to join her husband. A large number of Joe's friends wish him all kinds of good luck.

The circuit court jury returned a verdict shortly before five o'clock last evening finding Wm. Nyberg guilty of violating the local option law by selling intoxicating liquors in Astoria precinct No Six, which is a "dry" precinct. The court announced that sentence will be imposed on Tuesday. Tomorrow the case against D. Falangos of Clifton charged with selling liquor without a license will be called for trial.

Present weather conditions are expected to continue for an indefinite period according to the prognostications of Weather Forecaster Beals. He predicts another southwest storm of some severity and to be accompanied by high winds, rain or snow. The present winter has been the most severe in recent years but the same is true of all parts of the country.

Mrs. George Coffman of Clatskannie is in the city on a brief visit to friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Coffman conducts the Commercial hotel at Clatskanie and report that the hostelry has enjoyed an excellent patronage since they have taken over its management. It is the headquarters for all visitors from the lower river and Astoria in particular.

The annual number of the Pacific Fisherman, published at Seattle, is at hand and is a most creditable edition. In addition to a number of well written articles on the fisheries by competent authorities the number contains an annual review of the industry including all points of the Pacific coast with a carefully prepared estimate of the pack in each district. The edition is one which should be of considerable value, especially to the trade.

The board of directors of Oregon Coast Railway Company held a meeting his morning and directed the president and secretary to notify the officers of the Astoria, Seaside & Tillamook Railroad Company that the board is ready to turn over to the latter company the 80 per cent of the right-of-way between here and Seaside which the board was obligated under its agreement to procure. As soon as Mr. Evans returns the formal transfere of the rights-of-way will be made.

The Danmoore hotel of Portland is to go out of existence. Rent of the property has been paid to March 1, but the owner of the property, E. M. Laazrus, insists that a rental of $1500 a month shall be complied with and Mr. Moore maintains that the figure is more than the property is worth. The proprietor of the hotel has spent thousands of dollars in fitting up the hotel and in advertising it, and now is compelled to let go, as he explains, simply because the rental is more than the business of the house will justify.

Exciting incidents are expected to happen at Cathalmet during the coming week when the trial of Dr. Peacock comes up on a charge of having been instrumental in the death of Miss Longtain of that city as the result of a criminal operation. It is believed by many that it will be impossible to secure a jury in Wahkiakum county and that a change of venue will have to be granted. The community is divided over the merits of the case and nearly everyone has expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused man.

Frank J. McKinley, who was a freight conductor on the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad for several years, but during the past year employed by the Oregon Electric Company, was knocked from a freight car and run over in the company's yards at Portland yesterday, being so badly injured that he died last evening. The deceased was a native of Iowa, 46 years of age and had lived in Oregon about 20 years being widely known among the railroad men of the state. He left a mother, two sisters and two sons, all of whom reside in Portland.

Mat Schubert, an elderly man who has lived in this city for a number of years and of personal good habits, gave evidence of becoming insane and was taken into custody by the police. He had a halucination that he was a monkey and was climbing over the tops of the buildings in the vicinity of Ninth and Bond streets and broke several chimneys down. He is harmless and gives no other evidence of insanity but wants to climb all the time and in the city this morning appeared contended when he hung on the bars of the cell in which he was locked. He will be taken before the county board before being sent to the state asylum.

For the third time this winter exceptionally high tide was experienced this morning in the lower Columbia river district. The predicted tide was nine feet four inches but it reached a stage of at least 12 feet 6 inches, being backed up by the southwest swell. No damage has been reported in this city, except the flooding of basements, but at Warrenton and in that section several of the recently built dykes were washed out and the conditions are worse there than they have been. Similar reports come from the Lewis and Clark and the Youngs river districts.

John Corno was arraigned in the justice court this morning on two complaints charging him with assault and battery of W. F. Smith He pleaded guilty to both charges and was fined $8 on one and $12 on the other or a total of $20, which he paid. He was also placed under $50 bonds to keep the peace. The trouble is said to have arisen in a dispute over the hauling of some freight.

As was published in last evening's Budget, the grand jury yesterday reported seven indictments against one man on the charge of violating the local option law by conducting what is termed a "blind pig" in Astoria precinct No Six. It appears that instead of relying altogether on the testimony of witnesses, certain members of the grand jury visited the resort a few nights ago and purchased liquor from the proprietor.

At this afternoon's session of the circuit court, D. Falangos of Clifton, whose trial on two indictments charging him with selling liqour without a license was set for tomorrow, appeared before the court and pleaded guilty to both indictments. He was fined $200 on each or a total of $400. The case against Charlse Bertlesen charged with pointing a gun at Patrolman Houghton, which was also to come up in the circuit court tomorrow, was this afternoon submitted to the court to decide a question of law. The defense claims that when the alleged crime was committed, the patrolman was attemping to make an unlawful arrest of the defendant, as he had no warrant. The attorneys for the prosecution and defense agreed upon a stipulation as to the facts in the case which will be submitted to the court for a ruling. A default was allowed today in the case of Walter Maynard vs Jennie Maynard.

A telegram was received at the Chamber of Commerce this morning from Senator Fulton stating that the rivers and harbors bill has been reported to the house and that it contained an appropriation for placing the dredge Chinook at work on the Columbia river bar. Senator Fulton's telegram reads as follows: "River and harbor bill will carry a lump appropriation of over $8,000,000 for maintenance, based on estimates of the department, which include $500,000 for work at the mouth of the Columbia and $200,000 for repairing and operating the dredge Chinook." Senator Fulton's telegram was replied to by Secretary Whyte and the senator thanked for his excellent work in behalf of the Columbia river. While this report does not mean that the river and harbor bill has passed congress there is every reason to believe that it will be and within the next few days.

The Astoria high school debating team left last evening for Newberg, where it will meet this evening the team from the high school of that place in the second contest for this district in the series of debates arranged by the interscholastic debating league. The subject to be discussed this evening is, "Resolved that the apportionment of school funds among the several districts should be in proportion to the number of teachers employed." This question is an unusually difficult one, especially for children to discuss, and would be far more appropriate for school superintendents or college professors to discuss. While the local team is a strong one and there is good reason to believe it will win, the team is at the disadvantage of having had but a short time in which to prepare its arguments while its competitors have had nearly three weeks preparation for this contest.

The Norwegian steamship Elsa, with a cargo of lumber for New Zealand, has arrived down the river and will go to British Columbia for coal before starting across the Pacific.

Captain Bjorn is on his way from San Francisco to take command of the schooner W. F. Jewett, which has been laid up in the Youngs bay bone yard for some time. This would naturally indicate that she is to go into commission soon again.

The steam schooner Cascades, with a cargo of lumber for California, arrived down the river this morning and will go to sea at the first opportunity.

The steamer R. Miler has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired and will return to the daily run to Cathlamet and way ports, leaving here on next Monday morning. While she has been necessarily laid off she has been missed by her patrons and her return to the run will be welcomed.

F. P. Baumgartner, formerly local agent for the Grays & Holt Steamship Company, will leave for Seattle, where he intends to embark in the steamship business. Mr. Baumgartner severed his connection with the Gray people.

With a full cargo of cement, the French bark Genevieve Molinos will sail from Antwerp next month. The charter was announced yesterday, but the rate has not been made public. With a March sailing date from the German port the craft should be due off the mouth of the Columbia River in August or September.

The American barkentine James Johnson, upon arrival at Port Townsend from Callao, was ordered to proceed to Freaser River, British Columbia, to load lumber for San Francisco and San Pedro. Owing to the duty, $2 per ton, on British Columbia lumber, its importation to coast cities has not before been attempted. The possible development of a trade in a territory heretofore impracticable is attracting unusaul attention in shipping circles. With chronometers damaged to a condition of inaccuracy and before southerly gales, the passage of 36 days for the barkentine from Callao was one of nearly constant danger.

TO INCREASE BRITISH ARMY

War Department Asks for Forty Six Divisions

London, Feb. 20—Speaking at New Castle today on the subject of the proposed imperial German staff for the army, Secretary of War Haldane gave a general outline of the strength of the over-sea forces as contemplated under the imperial scheme. Canada, he said, could easily raise five or six territorial divisions, Australia, five; New Zealand, one, and South Africa, four or five. These in addition to the existing fourteen divisons of territorial forces of the United Kingdom would give a total of thirty divisions for home defense. With sixteen divisions of regulars ready for over-sea service, it was thus hoped to attain an imperial army of 46 divisions, equivalent to 23 army corps. This was just the strength of the German army, Haldane said, and no other army in the world had such a great organization.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

... Blessed Be Nothing ...

By W. S. GENUNG

Some years ago, while I was engaged in natural history pursuits in one of the back counties of Florida, I was out hunting one day with a young man, a typical backwoodsman, and we stopped at a small log cabin for a drink of water.

A widow and her little girl, about five years old, lived there. I had met the lady before, and so I presented the young man to her.

The widow was a stout, hardy, energetic woman, probably thirty-five years old. The young man was nearly eighteen and was never thirty miles from home, had never seen a locomotive, steamboat, bicycle, stove, clock or mirror. Raised in the flat woods, without education, he could not pick "A" out of the alphabet. But to his credit, be it said, he had been working for $6 a month to support a widowed mother, who was an invalid; a crippled brother and a younger brother and sister. This small amount had supported this family of five, with the addition of $2 a month which the county gave the cripple.

Not an evening passed after the young man was introduced to the widow that he was not at her house, and in less than two weeks they were engaged.

Then the struggle with fate began. The young man lost his job. A marriage license would cost $2. He could not get the price, and they were not selling marriage licenses on credit. What was he to do? He struggled hard for two weeks and managed by hook or by crook to secure $1.25. Only 75 cents between him and perfect bliss! But, alas, with the longest pole he could find he could not reach the persimmon. He could not, with the stoicism of the fox that could not get the grapes, dismiss them from his mind by saying that they were sour, for he positively knew they were sweet. No; he could only murmur in bitterness of heart, "Thou art so near and yet so far."

Thus several days passed away. The darkness of despair seemed to settle upon him. He became despondent. A haggard, careworn look was on his face, as if he had not slept for a week. Finally, however, with desperation and a courage he did not know that he possessed, he came to me with tears in his eyes and opened his whole heart.

He told me of his trials and troubles, his expectations and disappointments, his hopes, fears and discouragements, and then besought me so piteously for the loan of the other 75 cents that I did not have it in my heart to refuse him.

He had to go immediately to his sweetheart and tell her his good fortune. He was back in a very short time in an ecstasy of delight to get me to write and send for his license to the county seat, forty miles away.

I wrote and directed the letter and told him to put the two dollar fee in it and register it for safety. I also told him that registering and postage would cost him 10 cents more. Again his countenance changed from happiness to despair. He had encountered what was to him another insurmountable obstacle, though only the size of a dime.

"Gosh," he cried, "what 'll I do? I hain't got anuther cent. If yer don't lend me 10 cents more, I'll haf ter give it up. I'll pay yer back, I declare to heaven I will!"

I gave him the additional dime, and he started off in a hurry for the postoffice, five miles away, to mail and register his letter. The postmaster told him that his license ought to be back at the postoffice by Friday night. It was then Monday. It seemed a long time to wait, but there was no help for it.

It was arranged that the bride and groom should start early Saturday morning to the postoffice for the license, and as the postmaster was also a notary public he was the only man for a long distance who could perform the marriage ceremony, as there were no preachers in that part of the country, except a colored man at the turpentine still, and they were too high toned to call upon him.

Saturday morning came at last. The week had seemed like a month to this ardent young lover. He and his lady were over at my place bright and early for my inspection and advice as to how to proceed.

The bride was dressed in a black serge skirt and faded silk waist, with red ribbon around her neck and a brown sailor hat on her head [illegible] had to wear brogan shoes, as [illegible] half the distance to the postoffice was through water from shoe to knee deep, but she took a pair of morocco shoes and a pair of black stockings to put on before reaching the goal.

When the young man came to my place on this eventful wedding morning he was dressed in a clean twenty-five cent calico shirt, much too large at the neck, but the sleeves only came to within about eight inches of his wrists; a pair of old shoddy pants, which in his rapid vertical growth he had left about halfway between ankle and knee, but to make up for this defect his travels through swamp and briers, brushwood and palmettos had fringed them at the bottom for about one and a half inches. These trousers were kept up by a pair of mother made [illegible] from unbleached muslin. A pair of No. 11 brogan shoes, the tops of which lacked several inches of meeting the fringed ends of his pants—and he unfortunately not having [illegible] brought up to the luxury of underwear—unblushingly exposed a strip of bare flesh about six inches wide intervening between pants and shoes. A cheap dirty brown wool hat, which had been worn until every particle of its original shape was gone, decorated the conical head.

Alas, I am through—nothing else to describe. Shirt, pants, shoes and hat were all the young man possessed as yet, but he was soon to possess a loving wife, so what cared he?

I lent him a collar; but, as I wear a 17½ and he a 13 inch one, by pinning his ears back he could slip it on over his head buttoned. A hat was the next thing needed, which I willingly gave him. Seven three-eighths is my size, 6¾ his, which, although not a perfect fit, harmonized nicely with the collar. His ears kept it from going entirely over his face, but he had to tilt it back a little in order to see.

He drew the line at wearing a forty-two inch coat and vest which I offered him, saying, "I'm afeard folks 'll notice that it don't fit, and I'd rather go in my shirt sleeves anyhow."

He had his long, single barrel, muzzle loading shotgun with a homemade stock (his father having broken it some twenty years previous in a fight with a wounded panther in which he had to use his clubbed gun to save his life), which he proposed to take along to protect his bride and to shoot any wild turkeys or squirrels he might see while going through the swamp. After borrowing some powder and shot of me and loading his gun they at last started on their tramp.

They left my place at 7 o'clock and got back again a happy man and wife at 2 p. m. after walking ten miles, a large part of the way through miry sloughs and water half leg deep.

The bride was carrying three gray squirrels by their tails, killed by her new husband on their way back through the swamp, which made her feel quite proud of his skill as a hunter.

They related to me an occurrence that came very near destroying the sweetness of their honeymoon, for our hero had nearly killed a negro.

Near the office where they went was a turpentine still, the owner of which came from Quitman, Ga., and he had a family of three or four boys from ten to fifteen years old.

In some way they got wind that there was "something doing" at the postoffice and were not far off when our newly married couple came out to start for home. One of them yelled "High water pants!" another "Shoot the hat!" another "Put on your socks!" still another "Let out your suspenders!" all of which was borne meekly by our hero, but when a negro came along who asked him how long he had had the cholera and did it hurt him much, referring to his collar, which bounced up and hit his ears every step he took, it was too much for him to stand. He leveled his gun and swore he would kill him if he was the last nigger in the world and was about to fire as his wife knocked the gun up, and it was discharged in the air.

The negro and the boys were not long in getting out of sight, and the bride succeeded in half dragging her youthful husband away from the scene of conflict and into the swamp on their homeward way.

After telling this thrilling adventure they went at once to get their wedding dinner without stopping to change their wet shoes. In fact, the only change the groom could have made would have been to take off his shoes and go barefoot.

In a comparatively short time the repast was ready. It consisted of a pone of corn [illegible] baked in a spider, a hoecake of flour bread [illegible] frying [illegible], some salt razorback bacon, fried [illegible] of [illegible] the bud of the [illegible] palm [illegible] boiled and a pot of black coffee served without milk or [illegible].

I was the only guest, and as they had only two table [illegible] bride was obliged to use the [illegible]

Their ten mile walk had given them [illegible] appetites and they certainly enjoyed their wedding dinner, no [illegible] no pie, no butter, no sugar, but happiness supreme.

The bride brought all her husband's effects home from his mother's house that afternoon in her apron. She could have tied them all, except his brogan shoes, in a pocket handkerchief and have had good long ends to tie with.

"Blessed be nothing."

An Effective Disguise.

A playwright in New York criticised with telling scorn a drama that he had recently seen.

"The leading incident was so impossible," said he, "that I was reminded of one of those nonsense dialogues. You know how they run.

"A young man, for instance, says to a friend:

"'For all her coldness and austerity I have kissed Ethel Prymm.'

"'Really?' doubts the other [illegible] really.'

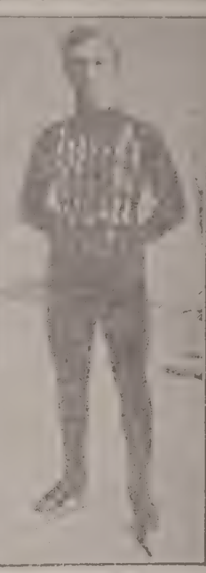
"'But how on earth did you inflame that icy heart?'

"'I didn't inflame her icy heart. That would have been impossible. I simply disguised myself as the [illegible]"—Philadelphia Record.

THE SPORTING WORLD

With the opening of the skating season interest naturally centers in the steel blade artists who will vie for honors on the ice, and it is pleasing to hear that Edmund Lamy of Saranac Lake, N. Y., is moving faster than ever and will compete in all the big meets, ready to lead attacks on the best of standing records.

Great things are expected of the eighteen-year-old lad who was the sensation of 1908 and who is improving in rapid strides. Already a long string of championships and records hang at his belt, and if we may believe what the leading experts of the country are saying we will see him acclaimed the greatest skater the world has ever seen before he retires from competition.



EDMUND LAMY.

Young Lamy is a native of Saranac Lake, N. Y., and celebrated his eighteenth birthday Jan. 18. At the early age of fourteen he could outdistance any of the crack racers around his home town, and in February, 1905, his father decided to enter him for the international junior championship, to be held in Montreal on the 24th of that month. How the stripling won the big event handily, clipping seventeen seconds off the junior world's record, is now history.

Footballer Wants to Fight.

Another aspirant for heavyweight pugilistic honors has appeared in the form of a college man, one who has played tackle on his varsity football team and who this year faced the Pennsylvania, Princeton, Annapolis, the Indian and West Point elevens on the gridiron. The would be champion is Thomas Edward Casey and until [illegible] he was a student at Villa Nova college.

Casey is the man who made the touchdown against Princeton last fall, but the play was disallowed after he had made an eighty yard run and outfooled Tibbott, the All American halfback, who chased him down the field. Casey is a magnificently developed man, nineteen years of age, stands six feet, weighs 195 pounds stripped, has a normal chest development of forty-one inches, forty-five inches expanded, and has a thirty-four inch waist. He lives in Bridgeport, Conn., and expresses a desire to meet John Wille or Kubiak.

Millionaires to Play Polo Abroad.

When the polo season opens English players will find an American team composed of members of the Meadowbrook club (New York) ready to meet them on their own ground. The Meadowbrook team has been practically invincible for two years and has beaten nearly every team of note on this side of the Atlantic. Three of the members—namely, Harry Payne Whitney, Lawrence Waterbury and J. M. Waterbury—apparently not satisfied with a monopoly of the American victories and sighing "for other worlds to conquer," will cross the ocean next season, carrying with them the good wishes of every polo enthusiast.

Chicago Americans Get Altizer.

Dave Altizer, the infielder, who did utility duty for the Washington and Cleveland baseball teams last season, was purchased by President Comiskey of the Chicago Americans recently. Altizer finished the season with the Naps and is rated as a first class all round player. His hitting is his best point, and his speed on the bases is good.

Burch to Coach Cincinnati University.

Robert Burch of Cincinnati, captain of the 1908 Yale football team, was recently chosen coach for the University of Cincinnati football team for next season. Burch will attend the Cincinnati Law school next year after graduating at Yale in June.

Sporting Notes.

Approximately 17,034 deer have been shot in the Adirondacks in eighteen years.

The Leading Lady (3), 2:07, by Bingen, started the season with a record of 2:16¼.

Minor Heir, 1:59½, started in eight races, won six, was once second and once third.

Narragansett bay yachtsmen have formed a knockabout class association for next year.

Annapolis has offered Yale the use of their baseball grounds during the Eastertide season.

The Size of It.

"It's dish-u-way, sah," explained old Brother Swank to a befuddled friend. 'Orthedoxy am de doxy dat I makes myse'f, dat I's de orthor of, yo' un-erstand. Uh-well, and dis yuh hectordoxy am de udder man's doxy dat he's allus uh-hectorin' me wid. Do dat make it cl'ar to yo' apprehension, Brudder Tarr?"—Puck.

Senator Fulton is certainly doing excellent work in Washington for the improvement of the Columbia river. Not only has he been able with the assistance of other western members in inducing the committee to include in the river and harbor bill an appropriation of $500,000 for continuing the work on the jetty, but also an appropriation of $200,000 for repairing and operating the dredge Chinook. As it has always been the rule in congress to pass the river and harbor bill as reported by the committee, there is every reason to believe that this measure will be acted upon favorably. If so, it will mean that the dredge can be put at work early during the coming summer and much good in deepening the channel can be accomplished before the shipping season of next fall beings.

The heavy fines imposed by the circuit court in the cases of the men arrested for selling liquor without a license should be a lesson to those persons that even as a simple matter of economy it is much better to obey the law than to endeavor to evade it. It is true that in past years there have been but few prosecutions for violations of the liquor laws, but now that the start has been made we may expect to see either more prosecutions or less selling of liquor without licenses.

The Chinese Six Companies have made an appeal to the president for the same treatment accorded the Japanese for the subjects of the Celestial kingdom. Nobody will deny the logic of this appeal, but it is extremely doubtful if it will be granted. China is not the aggressive nation that Japan is, nor does that government go about with a chip on its shoulder the entire time, hunting for an insult. The way to gain recognition is to demand it, and if necessary make a showing to enforce the demand. And this also applies to individuals as well as nations. It is the aggressive fellow who wins out every time in any enterprise.

Concerning the estate of the late George Washington Todd, a travelling peddler and miser, who died in the city hospital in Hamilton, Ont., a few years ago, a dispatch from that place states that the estate of $50,000 which he left and which was claimed by alleged relatives from all parts of the country has been at last settled. By this settlement the claimants to the estate get $10,000, the remainder of the $50,000 goes to the attorneys employed in the case.

An oil well in Mexico which has been burning several months is beginning to show signs of developing into a first-class volcano. A tremendous quantity of oil has been consumed since the well first took fire, and efforts to extinguish the flames have proved unsuccessful. This latest development puts an end to all hope and its abandonment means the destruction of an oil field which once promised to greatly augment the world's supply of petroleum.

Germany has taken hold of the aerial problem very earnestly and promises in the near future to build airships that will carry 3000 or 4000 pounds of freight. The outlook for profitable business is not very brilliant just at present, but if the air can be successfully navigated with ships that can carry a couple of tons of stuff, respectful attention will be paid to those who contend that ballooning is going to play an important part in future warfare.

Pigheaded?

It is an interesting fact that the two studies of arithmetic and geography seem to be diametrically opposed to each other in the affections of school children. Pupils who are particularly proficient in one are apt to be backward in the other. A story is told of a little boy who was slow in arithmetic and whose apparent stupidity in this field was a great source of grief to his father, who had been a mathematician. One day when the father and son were walking out they passed a place where a "learned pig" was on exhibition, and the father took the boy to see this porcine prodigy.

"Just look at that," said the father. "Why, there's a pig that can count and add up numbers! Don't you wish you were as smart as he?"

"Ha," answered the boy, "just let me ask him a few questions in geography!"

A Penalty of Genius.

It seems to be the frequent penalty of genius that it is denied the privilege of perpetuating its name and kind beyond a few generations at most. Thus it is said that there is not now living a single descendant in the male line of Chaucer, Shakespeare, Spenser, Milton, Cowley, Butler, Dryden, Pope, Cowper, Goldsmith, Byron or Moore; not one of Sir Philip Sidney or of Sir Walter Raleigh; not one of Drake, Cromwell, Hampden, Monk, Marlborough, Peterborough or Nelson; not one of Bolingbroke, Walpole, Chatham, Pitt, Fox, Burke, Graham or Channing; not one of Bacon, Locke, Newton or Davy; not one of Hume, Gibbon or Macaulay; not one of Hogarth, Sir Joshua Reynolds or Sir Thomas Lawrence; not one of David Garrick, John Kemble or Edmund Kean.—London Standard.

HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

Years ago [illegible] boy who was wo[illegible] in [illegible] Field's wholesale [illegible] conceived the idea that he ought to have a raise in his [illegible]lary. He was then receiving $4 a week and he believed [illegible] was worth $5. He asked the manager of his department for a raise but was refused. Not daunted he went to the next higher authority, only to be again disappointed. He continued to run the complete gamut of managers until his only hope lay in going to Mr. Field himself with his request. One morning he lay in wait outside Marshall Field's private office, and when the merchant prince arrived immediately waylaid him and stated the case to him. Mr Field listened patiently to the boy's story, but a stern look came over his face.

"See here, my boy, you are paid $4 a [illegible] now, are you not?" he asked.

"Yes sir," the boy answered, "but I'm worth $5 to you."

"When I was considerably older than you I was only getting $3 a week, and I think you ought to be satisfied with $4," said Mr. Field.

The you[illegible]er saw all his hopes dashed to [illegible] round. Tears of disappointment came to his eyes, and he blubbered:

"Well, perhaps you wasn't worth more than $[illegible] a week."

Marshall Field laughed. The boy got his raise.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Got It Bruised.

"He has got a bad case of swelled head."

"Good opinion of himself, eh?"

"Well, not exactly."

"Not?"

"No."

"What do you mean?"

"Not as good an opinion of himself as he did have, but a better one of O'Malley."

RICKMERS IS SUCCESSFUL

German Concern Builds Sailer with Auxiliary Power

That sailing vessels with auxiliary power to propel them along in calm weather or on inland waterways when entering or leaving ports are successful is said to be apparent from the announcement that the Rickmers company of Germany is now constructing another vessel of the type of the C. R. Rickmers.

In six hundred and eight days the C. R. Rickmers has logged 100,310 miles. Her 10 passages was follows: Bremen to New York, New York to Saigon, Saigon to Bankok, Bankok to Bremen Hamburg to San Pedro, Pedro to Sydney Sydney to San Francisco, San Francisco to Tacoma, Tacoma to Antwerp, Antwerp to San Francisco. This is 165 miles a day, or about seven miles an hour, averaging the running time of the 10 voyages in which this vessel as earned 945,462 marks or $235,000, which is about $250 a day for the 942 days she has been either at sea or in port. This is equal to $2.30 earnings per mile. In the 31 months the C. R. Rickmers carried 42,000 tons of cargo, dead weight.

Had to Stay.

An English nobleman whose entertainments are noticeably dull is nevertheless himself a man of much dry humor.

One evening he was leaning against a wall for a few moments' refreshment and surveying the throng of guests gathered at his wife's bidding with a speculative gaze when a voluble young man stepped up to him.

"Pretty slow, isn't it?" volunteered the lively stranger. "I wonder if the parties Lord and Lady —— give are never any livelier than this."

"Never," returned the unrecognized host promptly.

"Then I shall make my bow and take myself off at once," said the man.

"Lucky fellow," said Lord ——, with a whimsical smile. "I'm obliged to stay."

Something in his tone enlightened the young man, who turned crimson and began to stammer apologies. But his host waived all such attempts and held out his hand to his unwise guest.

"You can go with a clear conscience," said he pleasantly, "for you've given me the only amusement I've had this evening."

NEW CHARTER FOR BARKENTINE

Carry Lumber from British Columbia to California

Port Townsend, Feb. 20—The possibility of a coast-wise lumber trade developing between British Columbia and California is suggested by the unusual charter of the American barkentine James Johnson. Upon arriving here from Callao, Peru, Capt. Carl Jensen, of the James Johnson, received orders to proceed to Milltown, B. C. to load a cargo of lumber for San Francisco or San Pedro.

The invasion of British Columbia into a trade that has for years been held by Puget sound, Grays harbor and Oregon ports, its deemed possible by the charter of the barkentine. In shipping circles this charter is known as a foreign coastwise voyage, and as far as the freighting of lumber is concerned, this arrangement establishes a precedent, according to the oldest local shipping authorities.

The James Johnson will freight nearly 1,500,000 feet. Under present tariff restrictions the sale of British Columbia lumber in California is impracticable, as an entry duty of $2 a thousand is imposed. With the prevailing poor demand for lumber and low prices, news of this charter was receied with great surprise here, and it will be discussed with interest in other shipping and manufacturing circles. To Capt. Jensen the charter is a strange one.

The James Johnson completed a smart passage from Callao, logging the distance in thirty-six days. Cape Flattery was sighted in thirty-three days sailing, but an entrance to the Strait of Juan de Fuca was gained only upon the third attempt. Very haevy weather was encountered off the Washington coast, and with chronomters damaged to inaccuracy, the voyage before gales was made a trying one. Capt. Jensen is known on Puget sound as having been several years in command of the barkentine Amaranth.

Good to Remember.

A church somewhere, no matter where, prints on the back of little slips—programs denoting the order of service—these words:

I will not worry.
I will not be afraid.
I will not give way to anger.
I will not yield to envy, jealousy or hatred.
I will be kind to every man, woman and child with whom I come in contact.
I will be cheerful and hopeful.
I will trust in God and bravely face the future.

Read them again; they are worth while. You might cut them out and paste them in your hat, indeed. If you will resolve to live by them—even for one week—you will be a great deal better for it. If you will get these words into your mind—good and strong—you will find that living up to them supplies you with all the religion, all the philosophy, you need. You cannot go wrong if you follow these precepts. —Washington Herald.

Driccoll Never Knocked Out.

Long Beach has Chartered Immense Sea Serpent

Long Beach, Cal, Feb. 20—Five men who went fishing yesterday on the launch Reta assert that they had an encounter with a sea serpent at the Grouper banks, 18 miles off shore. Guy Griffiths and James Harvey were of the party.

"The monster was about 40 feet long," said Griffith, "and about 15 feet back from the head it had a big dorsal fin. The head was as big as a barrel and brown, with eyes as big as my fist, and it moved from side to side. The tail was like that of a porpoise.

"We first sighted the thing 100 feet away. The head was then out of the water, and I started to shoot at it, but feared it might become angry and wreck us, so I told one of the boys to start the engine, and we glided away, but the monster came after us. We gave the engine all speed and got away from the creature."

It is asserted that the bodyguard of Pontius Pilate was composed of Caledonians, the Dugald Dalgettys of their time. Such at least is the claim put forward by the Royal Scots, now the premier regiment of the British line, who are alternatively known as "Pontius Pilate's bodyguard."

"Mrs. Blazes has applied for separate maintenance."

"What for?"

"Well, she stood for her husband's foolishness until he wanted to name their last daughter Helen, and then she decided it was time to quit."

TWO ODD EPITAPHS

The Tombstone Inscription Willed by a Republican

At Attica in the [illegible] burying ground is the grave of Nathaniel Grigsby. He died in 1890 and was a man of much force. He had a war record, serving as second lieutenant in Company G, Tenth Indiana cavalry. Grigsby was an ardent Republican. He stood by the G. O. P. at all times and even in death. This epitaph is on his tomb stone:

> Through this inscription
> I wish to [illegible]
> [illegible]
> [illegible] party,
> [illegible]
> [illegible] ys of Jn [illegible] > and know that all the [illegible] > fortunes of our [illegible]
> come to it throu [illegible] > called party. Therefore beware of this party of treason

Grigsby's heirs did not want this inscription to go on the tombstone, but the lawyer declared that the will provided that it must be used, and the family had to agree. But the inscription is headed with a line that Grigsby's will made the epitaph mandatory.

At Lincoln is a very odd tombstone. A traveling man of that town, who had been on the road many years and was quite eccentric, framed an epitaph that is decidedly original. He died several years ago, and a traveling bag hewn out of marble stands at the head of his grave. On one side of the bag is this line:

"Here is where Bill stopped last!"—Kansas City Journal.

The Royal Box.

Pi Yu is the name of the infant Chinese emperor.

King Haakon has headed the public subscription in Norway for Captain Amundsen's polar expedition with a donation of $5,000.

Princess Victoria Louise, only daughter of Emperor William of Germany, recently celebrated her sixteenth birthday. She is a very clever girl and is quite grown up, having the airs of a grand dame.

King Charles of Roumania is extremely popular with his subjects. Like the late king of Denmark, he is a king without pretensions, and nothing delights him more than to mix freely with his people.

Pen and Brush.

Helen Kathryn Sharpe of Indianapolis is an authoress at the age of twelve.

Winston Churchill, the author, is a graduate of the Naval academy at Annapolis.

A memorial is projected for Gainsborough, the famous English painter, at his birthplace, Sudburg, in Suffolk.

George Eliot received $40,000 for "Middlemarch." This is believed to be the highest price ever paid to a woman for a single work.

Kenyon Cox, the painter, is also an accomplished writer. He is a son of General Jacob D. Cox, secretary of interior in President Grant's first cabinet.

ABOUT ASTORIA

B. Soderlund and Charles Tongue of Chinook are in Astora today on business.

L. Lobeck and wife and Emil Carlson and wife came over from Chinook this morning to spend the day.

Mrs. August Johansen of Chinook is in the city today, en route to Seattle, where she will make her future home.

An order was made in the probate court today setting the petition to sell real property belonging to the estate of C. W. Carnahan, deceased, for hearing on March 22.

Miss Thyra Knudsen has resigned as stenographer for S. Elmore & Co and leaves this evening for Portland to accept a similar position with the federal forestry department in that city.

City Auditor Anderson returned last evening from a trip to his ranch in the Nehalem valley. He reports that on the summit and in the timber on the other side the snow is fully 18 inches deep, but was rapidly disappearing.

The Sixth Annual celebration of Washington's birthday will be held at St. Mary's Hall Fifteenth and Grand avenue on February 22. J. M. Anderson will deliver the address. A musical and literary program will be rendered.

The civil sundry bill reported to congress yesterday contains an appropriation of $21,000 for new barracks at Fort Stevens, so it is supposed the department contemplates some additional work there in the near future.

A bill providing for the appointment of an addition circuit judge for this district has been passed by both houses of the Oregon legislature, but as no emergency clause is attached to the measure it will not become effective for several weeks.

Casper Drilling, who is an inspector connected with the interior department of the federal government, received orders this morning from the department to proceed to Arizona and inspect work being done on reclamation projects.

The high tide yesterday caused a washout of a portion of the railroad grade between Fort Columbia and McGowan and as a result there was no train service above Ilwaco. Repairs are now being made and it is expected the trains will be running again in a short time.

The superintendent of the Old Oregon Mills plant at Warrenton received instructions from the company yesterday to dispose of all the logs and lumber at the mill, as well as the horses owned by the company, as the plant will remain closed for an indefinite period.

A deed was filed for record today whereby O. I. Peterson sells to Mrs. Anna Busch of St. Louis, a dairy ranch on the Lewis and Clark river for a consideration of $20,000. A bill of sale was also filed whereby Mr. Peterson sells the stock, tolls and machinery on the racnh to Mrs. Busch for $3000.

While the scheduled tide today was higher than on Friday it did not reach the height of yesterday, but was still up to the 12 foot mark, its decrease being on account of the subsiding of the southwesterly swell. No damage was done except that conditions in the vicinity of Warrenton remain about the same and the train at noon was late in reaching there by an hour or more. Just east of Warrenton the track was submerged and it was necessary to wait until the tide started to fall before it was safe to pass over the track.

Several dolphins were seen out by the drift and the underpinning of the docks at north shore points was considerably damaged

Manager Hanlin, of the Astoria theatre states that the reason Arthur Cunningham and his company in "Kerry Gow" postponed their engagement here from Sunday night to next Sunday is that the company is doing such an enormous business in Portland at the Baker this week, they have decided to prolong their engagement there another week.

Another strom warning was sent out this morning by Weather Observer Beals announcing the coming of a southeast storm for this evening and tomorrow and that it would be accompanied by high winds. When the record of the present month is made up it will probably be a record breaker unless conditions change within a few days.

The boys outing class of the Presbyterian church, numbering about 20, left this morning to spend the day at Clatsop beach under the guiding arms of Prof. E.P. Bradley, their class instructor, and Rev. Gilbert, their pastor. The trip included a tramp from Skipanon to the ocean beach where the wreck of the Peter Iredale is located thence south to the wreck of the British ship Galena. Each boy carried his own luncheon and a right good time was had. The distance traveled was about 20 miles. The party returned by way of West Station.

This evening Otto F. Heilborn will retire as assistant postmaster at the local office, having resigned to accept a more lucrative position with a Portland commercial house. He will be succeeded by Astor M. Salvon. Mr. Heilborn has been assistant at the Astoria postoffice for over ten years and during that time he has attained a most enviable record both among the patrons of the office and the officers of the department as a courteous and efficient official. While regretting his departure, his many friends will join in wishing him success in is new position.

The case of the United States against J. Neimann, master of the tramp German steamship Miles, was dismissed in the federal court at Portland yesterday on motion on the government's attorney. Captain Neimann was arrested in January, 1901, on complaint of John H. Hall, then United States attorney, and the case has been pending ever since without further action. It finally became so musty with age that the federal authorities concluded to get rid of it in the manner indicated. The defendant was accused of taking Jack Reid, a boatman on board his ship at Astoria before the vessel had been inspected by a quarantine officer, which was contrary to the peace and dignity of the United States. Nothing has been heard of the German steamship or its master for several years.

Arrested by the police this morning at an early hour were a Chinaman and a woman of the same nationality. At the time they were in a launch and about to start for Megler station to take the train for South Bend. The woman's name is Ling Soy and she was dressed in male attire when arrested but the man would only give his name as Sing. They arrived down from Portland on Friday night and the police deparment of that city ordered their arrest, giving as a reason that the man had stolen the woman from her husband. It is also stated that he is a Highbinder and wanted in San Francisco for several crimes. They will be held pending the arrival of an officer from Portland or further instructions.

K. F. Johnson finished work with his dredging machine yesterday on rebuilding the broken dike for the Old Oregon Mills at Warrenton and today took his dredge back to Young's river to continue building the extensive dike for which he has a contract with the owners of a large tract of tideland. The dike at the Old Oregon Mills has not been completed, as a gap of about 20 feet remains, but a force of men is at work wheeling dirt in to fill it. During last night anumber of logs broke loose from the mill boom and carried away the greater portion of the new dike that had been built, so that the break is now worse than it was before.

Hon. J. R. Burke members of the Washington legislature from Wahkiakum county, was in the city on a short business trip during a temporary recess. He is largely interested in the fishing industry and expressed himself as pleased with the passage of the joints fisheries bill at Salem and said that there was no question but that the Washington legislature would ratify it. He said that while the bill was unjust in part to every fishing interest, yet each had to make concessions as it was best for all that a universal law be adopted by both states and it could not have been otherwise.

The Astoria high school debating team was defeated by the team from the Newberg high school in a contest at the latter place last evening, the subject under discussion being, "Resolved, That the school funds Should Be Apportioned on the Basis of the Number of Teachers Employed Rather Than on the School Census." G. W. Roberts, local agent of the O. R. & N. Co., has received a number of the new wall maps of the Pacific northwest, issued by the passenger department of the Harriman lines, which he is distributing. The map shows two projected lines into Astoria, one being an extension of what is known as the Lytle road leaving the Nehalem river at Jewell and coming via the Young's river route, and the other via the Lewis and Clark river, joining the Lytle road near Elsie. These are the two roads which Mr. Harriman told the Portland newspapers he intended to build, when he visited the coast some months ago. Two lines are shown from Buxton to the coast near Tillamook, one down the Salmonberry and the other, which according to the map is to be the first one built, via Vernonia and thence down the Nehalem river to Jewell. The maps are official and the dotted lines on them show only such surveys for projected roads as have been made by the railway company and approved, and on which constrution work is to be crowded.

The regular meeting of the chamber of commerce will be held at 7:30 o'clock Monday night and the members who have been actively at work lately, especially those of the principal committees are feeling extra-ordinarily good as one member said at a committee meeting last night. "I have never seen a time when things looked better for Astoria. The work that has been accomplished through Senator Fulton in getting the dredge Chinook appropriation in the rivers and harbors bill; the new map just issued by the Harriman lines showing the exact routes of the railroads to be built in Clatsop county; the new map just issued by the Washington state railroad commission showing just how we are soon to have a road on the North bank of the Columbia down to the mouth of Grays river; and the apparent certainty of renewed attention of this section, and the careful consideration being given Astoria by business interests every where, pressages the present as the most important year in the history of the city. It is necessary to do better thinking and harder work in the next few months than has ever been done before and we will then have crossed the dead line into an era of conditions entirely satisfactory to the most pessimistic."

BATTLESHIPS RETURN TODAY

In Grand Review Before President Roosevelt and Officials

Old Point Comfort, Va., Feb. 22—With homeward pennants streaming far behind them 28 bands playing "Sar Spanlged Banner" and saluting cannon roaring tribute to the president of the United States, the battleships of the American navy ended its world cruise today. After steaming in review before the president, whose eagle crested flag of blue was at the mainmast of the cruiser yacht Mayflower, the sixteen white battleships finally cast anchor in Hampton Roads, whence they started fourteen months ago on a notable journey of 45,000 miles. The joy of home coming was written on the face of every bluejacket and officer of the sixteen ships. As she led the beautiful column of battleships out of Hampton Roads, fourteen months ago, the Connecticut steamed again today at the head of the returning squadrons and in her wake the white fleet followed a welcoming host in gray, four battleships and five powerful cruisers being in the escorting column which went a thousand miles to sea to convey the preliminary word of welcome to the famous squadron.

The day was not as propitious as might have been desired, the early morning fog giving way to a gray day and anything but attractive to thousands upon thousands gathered at all points at Hampton Roads to witness the return of the fleet.

The foreign naval attaches and immense parties of government officials, and high officers of the army and navy were aboard the fleet of welcome, which steamed out to greet the incoming vessels and witness the review by the president. The yacht Mayflower with the president and party on board steamed at the head of the long column into Hampton roads and when the home-coming vessels had anchored, she took up her position in the center of the fleet. Admiral Sperry and other flag officers together with the captains, commanding, were received on board and to them President Roosevelt extended the cordial thanks, whien he afterward expressed anew to the officers and crews of the four divisional flagships Connecticut, Louisanna, Georgia and Wisconsin which he visited in the afternoon.

The health officer of the port boarded the Connecticut and granted a clear bill of health to the entire fleet. When the Mayflower came up the harbor the fleet saluted the president by a din of whistles.

In a quarter of an hour, the flagship launches took the admirals, their staffs and the captains of the fleet on board the Mayflower. The president delivered an address of welcome and then started on his round of the divisional flagships.

The Rev. Walter Carrington the Wesleyan Methodist evangalist will preach this evening at the Asteria Gospel mission on Duane street, over Kelly's barn. A cordial invitation is exended to all.

RAINEY SCORES HIS TRADUCERS

Has Just Begun Expose of Panama Canal Matters

Washington, Feb. 22—Asserting that his recent speech in the house, relative to the purchase of the canal had brought upon himself "Villification, misrepresentation, and abuse almost without parallel in the history of that body," Representative Rainey of Illinois today delivered in the house a lengthy speech in reply to the charges that the information upon which his remarks were based were obtained from "ex-convicts an blackmailers," this accusation having been made openly in the house by Lovering of Massachusetts. Rainey declared he did not attack the canal, but simply attacked the graft connected with the enterprise. "True loyalty to this great enterprise, "Rainey said, "means that you must expose and denounce all kinds of graft in connection with it, in order to avoid the pitfalls, which the French companies fell into, and I propose to do this, whether it meets the approval of the next president or not. I want to say to all those, who are spending so much time abusing me, that I have not yet commenced this fight. I have only trained my guns on some of the most objectionable features of the Panama matters."

Train and Track.

The average cost for fuel for a railroad train is 10 cents a mile, and the average fireman burns $2,500 worth a year.

Massachusetts has been spending at the rate of about $400,000 a year in removing grade crossings during the last eighteen years.

Higher speed on the main lines has been ordered by the management of the German railroads, so that, instead of ninety kilometers, or 55.92 miles, an hour, it will be a hundred kilometers, or 62.13 miles, an hour.

The growing scarcity of timber suitable for railroad ties and the resultant increase in their cost have led eleven roads to start forests. In their respective forest sites they have already planted thousands of catalpa, black locust, red oak, pine oak, chestnut and eucalyptus.

GRANT'S CABIN A MUSEUM

Augustus Busch to Collect all the General's Relics

Augustus A. Busch, who recently bought the old home of Ulysses S Grant, on the Gravois road, in St Louis county, Mo known as the "Grant farm," has converted it into a model game preserve, says a St Louis dispatch

The famous log cabin which was carried around the country for exhibition now occupies a position on the farm overlooking the Gravois road. It will be opened to the public as a museum It is the intention of Mr Busch to collect as many Grant relics as possible and restore them to the cabin The cabin itself is as General Grant left it, except that a few logs have been cut out of an inside partition.

The old spring house where the general kept his butter, eggs, milk and, it is rumored, his liquor, which was said to be the best to be found in the state, has been preserved in its entirety. A fence of musket barrels that saw service in the civil war surrounds the cabin. A veteran who served under Grant is caretaker.

To the right of the cabin and a short distance away stands the former home of Mrs. Grant, a two story stone house typical of that period. The large barns and other buildings put up afterward under the personal supervision of General Grant are in their original state.

Herman Wise, has received his boys and children's spring suits. x

SILVER FOX A GLORIOUS FREAK

He is an Ofspring of the Common Red Breed

Only those wise in the woodlore of the north can fully know the magic in the name silver fox. The silver fox is not of different kind, but a glorified freak of the red race. His parents may have been the commonest kind of red foxes, yet nature in extravagant mood may have showered all her gifts on this favored one of the offspring and not only clad him in a marvelous coat, but gifted him with speed and wind and brains above his kind to guard his perilous wealth. And need he has of all such power, for this exquisite robe is so mellow rich, so wonderful in style, with its gloss black and delicate frosting, that it is the most desirable, the most precious of all furs, worth many times its weight in gold, the noblest peltry known to man. It is the proper robe of kings, the appanage of great imperial thrones today, as was the tyrian purple in the days of Rome. This is indeed the hunter's highest prize, but so guarded by the cunning brain and the wind and limb of the beast himself that it is through rare good luck more than hunter skill that a few of these fur jewels are taken each year in the woods.

There are degrees of rank among these patricians. They range in quality even as diamonds range, and the hunters have a jargon of their own to express all shades between the cross and the finest silver black.—Ernest Thompson Seton in Century Magazine.

Influence of Food.

"What do you think of the theory that food has a potent influence in determining character?" asked Mr. Smithfield as he put three lumps of sugar in his coffee.

"I guess it's all right," replied Mr. Wood as he severed a portion of his beefsteak. "It always seems a little cannibalistic to me when you order lobster."

"Well," retorted Mr. Smithfield good humoredly, "I ought to have known it was dangerous to lend you money after I discovered your fondness for beets. But, seriously, if there were anything in the theory, wouldn't it make a man sheepish to eat mutton?"

"It would, and prize fighters ought to restrict themselves to a diet of scraps."

Poet.

Throwing his pen aside,
"If I knew life," he cried,
"Then could I write!"
But when with knowledge wide,
Stained by life's purple fruit,
Taking his pen one night—
Lo, he was mute!
—Armin Trebor in Appleton's Magazine.

As to Blobbs.

"Poor Blobbs! It's about all he can do to keep his head above water these days."

"It oughtn't to be. He has invented a new style of life preserver."

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

Barbarous Impudence.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"How do you account," said the English girl, "for the way your American girls marry our most desirable bachelors? I mean those cases where money is not the prime motive."

"Well, I think impudence has more to do with it than anything else."

"Impudence! What do you mean?"

"Perhaps I had better illustrate. I will tell you a story of which the heroine, if she can be called such, is well known to me. As a girl she was no more like the typical English girl than a gypsy is like a queen. She was nineteen years old, not very pretty, with a thin, fairly tall figure and a pair of eyes with which she could express any emotion she felt or did not feel. She was 'doing' England as thousands of Americans 'do' Europe—guidebook in hand—in company with a party from her native state, Indiana.

"Well, one morning two or three of them, the girl—Eliza Kimball, I'll call her—included, went to visit an English castle near the Scotch border. There were two other girls, an elderly man and a boy. They walked to the castle and stood at the gate waiting to know if strangers were admitted; but, since there appeared to be no gatekeeper about, Eliza led the way in. They hadn't gone a dozen steps before a man in overalls, his hands covered with black grease, came out of a basement door and, seeing the party approaching, waited till they came up.

"'Are strangers admitted to the castle?' asked Eliza.

"'Not today.'

"'Oh, dear, we've come all the way from Indianapolis to see it. How disappointing!'

"'And where is Indianapolis?' asked the man.

"'Indianapolis! You don't know where Indianapolis is! I'm surprised. If you had our public school system in England even a mechanic like you would know where that is. It's the capital of Indiana, United States of America.'

"'Well, since you've come so far to see the castle I suppose I'll have to give you a chance. Come with me.'

"He showed them everywhere, inside and outside. Eliza walked beside him, plying him with questions. She soon noticed that any one they met showed surprising deference to their guide.

"'Who is the man in overalls?' she asked of a lackey.

"'He's Lord Walter Furgeson, his grace's youngest son.'

"'You don't mean it! What makes him wear such togs?'

"'He has a fancy for machinery. He's invented many valuable things.'

"'Oh, he has! Much obliged for the information.' And she rejoined the party. Sailing up beside Lord Walter, she said:

"'Come; we've had enough of these musty pictures. There's not a real bright one among them. Show us something more inspiriting.'

"The young man smiled. 'There's nothing here less than 300 years old, not even the furniture.'

"'Well, then, I think it time you got some new things. If a chair lasts twenty years in America we think it's doing well. We throw it away after that and get a new one. It keeps things fresh.'

"'Everything is fresh in America, I believe.'

"'Even we girls. We haven't any old fashioned notions. Now, in America, if you, even in your overalls, were to show yourself worthy, you'd be treated just as well as any one.'

"'Would I, indeed?'

"'Certainly. You come to Indianapolis when I'm there, and I'll show you around and introduce you everywhere. You can wear your overalls too.'

"They went through the rest of the old pile, and at everything that was particularly ancient Eliza would say, 'Why don't you freshen it up?' or 'Can't the duke afford to buy a new one?' or make some other equally deprecating remark. And when their guide led them to the gate she took a half crown from her portemonnaie and handed it to him. He didn't want to take it, but she said: 'Nonsense! You've earned it. Never refuse what you've earned honestly. That's the way our men get rich and their daughters come over here to marry into your nobility and keep these old castles patched up with their fathers' fortunes.'

"Lord Walter took the coin and went up to his apartments to change his costume for evening dress.

"'How I did fool that American girl!' he said to his valet.

"'I think not, your lordship,' said the valet. 'Murphy told me she asked him who you were and he told her.'

"The young man paused in putting on a white silk waistcoat with gold buttons and stared.

"'By Jove!' he exclaimed, and that was his only comment.

"He joined a party of high bred English girls at dinner, but he couldn't dismiss from his mind that impudent American girl who had dared to talk to him, knowing his station, as if he had really been a greasy mechanic. That night he lay awake thinking about her thin form, her American accent and, above all, those eyes of hers—expressive brown eyes that looked so innocent—and he tumbled all over the bed.

"Well, to make a long story short, in about two months he went to Indianapolis, was introduced to all Eliza Kimball's friends and took her back with him to England.

"That's what I mean by impudence winning your men over here. You English girls are too timid."

The True Story of an Interview Told in 1918.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"You must admit," I said to Count Haenant while we were pacing the deck of an ocean steamer, "that the late emperor was impolitic."

"Not at all. There was always a method in his madness."

"What method could there possibly have been in that affair of the suppressed interview which stirred up the whole world and put the emperor in a humiliating position?"

"The secret history of that affair has never been published. It was never known to more than three persons besides the emperor and his chancellor, and I am now the only person living in possession of it."

"What, you?"

"Yes, I. And, what's more, I'm going to give it to you. Listen. There was then in William's service a man whom he consulted more on matters of statecraft than even Von Bulow. Baron Trengel was during the period of his intimacy with the late emperor between the ages of thirty-five and forty. He was handsome as a picture and would have been attractive to women had he taken any interest in them. But he was a pronounced woman hater.

"While traveling in Egypt Trengel fell in with a party of your countrymen from New York, among them a Miss Rebecca Wray. She had come over and remained with her fellow travelers by permission, having, it was understood, been graduated from school the previous spring. Her trip was intended as a finisher to her education.

"Trengel had never before fallen under the influence of one of your unconventional, coquettish American girls. His ideas of women were derived from the German fraulein of noble blood and more especially from an old maid sister ten years his senior who kept house for him. Miss Wray made nothing of visiting the ruins of the temple of Karnak with him unchaperoned or sailing alone with him on the Nile.

"The next heard of Miss Wray she was in Berlin, chaperoned by an entirely different party from that which she was supposed to have traveled with in Egypt. She had not been there long before she received invitations to houses whose owners were in high life and dined with the late emperor and the now dowager empress. She spent some time ostensibly visiting Trengel's old maid sister, and while there she was riding, driving and hunting in madcap fashion with the baron.

"One morning Trengel was summoned to Berlin by the emperor for conference. Your countrymen were getting rather too thick with the Japanese to please his majesty, and he desired to head them off. At this interview a number of different matters were taken up, all of them of importance in European complications. Trengel when in conference with the emperor was accustomed to jot down the points discussed; also William's views. On returning to his schloss he found Miss Wray, who had remained during his absence with his sister, and was so delighted to be reunited with her that he did something he had never done before. He tossed his notebook on his desk in the library to hasten out for a ride with the girl who had infatuated him.

"That was the last he thought of the notebook till the next morning. Then he hurried to the library to find it gone. Breakfast was waiting for the guest, who had not yet come down. After waiting some time for her the baron sent to her room. She as well as the notebook had disappeared.

"The consternation that seized upon the baron was nothing to that of the emperor when Trengel went to Berlin and told him the story. The police were notified, and the secret service men got on the case in a hurry. Not a train in Germany that was not under surveillance of government emissaries, each having a detailed description of the American girl. They failed to catch her. A boy excited some suspicion, but got across the frontier without being detained, the German detectives having been instructed to look out for a girl. It was afterward supposed that this boy was the slippery Miss Wray in disguise.

"Miss Wray's identity and position afterward became known to those of us in the secret. She was the daughter of a poor professor in an American university. She was twenty-two years old at that time and had taken nearly every honor in a woman's college for which she was eligible for competition. Leaving college, she went to New York and worked on one of the principal papers there. It was this paper that sent her abroad for news of certain diplomatic questions of interest to the people of the United States.

"Miss Wray, who had always known the want of money and consequently knew its value, saw a chance for a fortune. She wrote out an interview with the emperor of Germany and sold it to a London paper for $100,000. Since she could show Trengel's notebook containing confirmation of what she put in the emperor's mouth she had everything her own way.

"Now comes the part taken by the emperor. He never visited on his friend Trengel any punishment or displeasure bearing the obloquy heaped upon him for doing too much talking. Trengel, however, shut himself up in his schloss and was never again seen at court. Three years after the affair of which he was the unknown cause he committed suicide."

SKILL OF AN ARAB PHYSICIAN

His Own Story of a Wonderful Operation Performed

Mr. Walter B. Harris in his account of a journey to Tafilet tells the story of a wonderful operation in surgery as it was reported to him by a native doctor who was traveling in his company:

"I think the old man fancied that I doubted his skill. At least, he was always holding forth upon the subject and continually repeating the story that when in Algeria he had been offered a fabulous salary—the sum varied each time the tale was told—to remain in charge of the military hospital at Algiers, an honor which he had declined.

"He never tired of narrating the facts and details of his most successful operations. There is a sect in Morocco called Hamacha, who are followers of a certain saint buried near Mekinez. These devotees amuse their audience—and themselves, too, let us hope—by throwing into the air heavy cannon balls, which they allow to fall upon their shaven crowns. On the occasion in question a Hamdushi had unfortunately been wanting in religious power, for the cannon ball crushed his skull.

"My old shereef friend had been called to the rescue. According to his account, he removed the broken patch of skull, replacing it with the rind of a green pumpkin, and closed the skin over it. In a month's time, he said, the patient was not only convalescent, but was once more hard at work practicing his religio-acrobatic feats, with not only a remodeled and renovated skull, but even a new crop of hair."

"Sister 'll be down in 'bout an hour," announced little Bobby as he ushered his sister's beau into the parlor.

"An hour?" repeated the young man in surprise.

"Oh, well, she said ter tell yer she'd be down in a minute, but yer know how that is yerself."

Does it do any good to worry? It does. It gives the doctor a chance to earn the price of a meal ticket, the maker of dyspepsia dope a chance to work off his truck upon your system, and eventually it gives the grave digger a job. Of course it pays to worry. —Los Angeles Express.

Downtrod—Never write letters, my boy, that you'll regret in after life.

Dewtell—You speak as if from experience.

Downtrod—I do. In early correspondence with her who is now my wife I signed myself, "Your obedient servant." —Exchange.

The Order of the Seraphim.

The Order of the Seraphim is the oldest and most famous of the decorations in the gift of the king of Sweden. Originally it was instituted by Magnus IV., some 600 years ago, to commemorate the siege of Upsala, the ancient capital of the Swedish kings, and its statutes bound the recipients of the order to fight to the death for the maintenance of their religion and to constitute themselves the special protectors of the widow and the fatherless. When it was revived about the middle of the eighteenth century by King Frederick the obligations laid upon the members were somewhat less onerous. The decoration consists of an eight pointed star in white enamel with cherubs' heads of gold and is worn on a broad band of pale blue ribbon.—Boston Transcript.

The Oregon legislature has seen fit to disregard the decree of the people by repealing the law enacted by a large majority last June to save the fisheries of the Columbia river from being ruined to satisfy the greed of a few individuals. Matters have certainly come to a pretty pass when the legislators will take such authority into their hands. But, it is just another illustration of the fact that has long been known, that the Oregon legislatures are controlled by a coterie of Portland men, who use it to enact or repeal laws as best suits their own interests. Some day the people of the state will become tired of this and when they do, there will be a reckoning. It was hoped that after the passage of the law stopping fishing above tidewater, the salmon fisheries of the Columbia river would soon be built up but now that hope is at an end and unless the initiative is again invoked the ruthless slaughter of young fish will be continued, as in former years.

The new maps issued by the Harriman lines showing the roads which the company intends building in the state of Oregon is another indication that before many weeks roll by we may expect construction work commenced on a road from Astoria along Young's river to the Nehalem valley. Not only does the mortgage given to float bonds for constructing what is known as the Lytle road require the building of a line to this city, but when Mr. Harriman was in Portland a few months ago, he openly announced that he was going to build one road to Astoria down Young's river and that he would probably also build via the Lewis and Clark river.

In addition to the $500,000 for new contracts at the mouth of the Columbia river and $200,000 for repairing and operating the dredge Chinook, contained in the river and harbor bill as reported to congress, the sundry civil bill contains an appropriation of $250,000 to complete outstanding contracts on the jetty extension, making a total of $950,000 that is recommeded by the committees for improving the channel across the bar. This means that the department is determined to bend its energies to deepening the water at the mouth of the Columbia river and if congress but passes the measures, as it probably will, the channel can easily be deepened to not less than 35 feet before next fall.

A Washington arithmetic man de[illegible] the present national wealth [illegible] would give each individual $[illegible]. [illegible] It would puzzle the unbloated [illegible] to pay wages to his few hundred or few thousand employees out of a paltry $[illegible] so where does the gain of distribution come in?

Fifty-seven American milliners were convicted last year of having prohibited feathers in their possession. The way the hats look this year these malefactors must have made the feathers fly before the detectives swooped down on their stock.

WASTE OF BOY ENERGY

[illegible] [illegible] probable that the Milwaukee judge who declared recently that "75 per cent of the nation's criminals today are youths" was as wide of the mark as Police Commissioner Bingham when he said that the majority of New York's criminals are Israelites. Actual figures proved that General Bingham was wrong, and if the figures of the nation could be gathered Judge Neelan could be called upon to retract. There are indeed too many boy criminals, but on the average the American boy is all right.

Leaving out of account the boys who are doing good work in the schools, there are millions of them engaged in active employment, getting ready to take the places of men and do as well as the men now on the job. If there are but ten boys in every thousand who are making progress, it is proof that the boy problem depends upon putting boys in the right place. No more could be asked. Responsibility for those who go wrong rests upon adults. Wherever he is the boy's capital is energy. This energy is a national resource. It should be saved for good work and to that end turned in the right direction before it is headed toward frivolity, idleness or evil.

Another "nature faker" may be [illegible]dicted if some African elephant seize the big stick from the mighty hunter's hands and turns the tables after the manner of his comrade recently at the New York zoo.

If that "national laboratory for criminal research" sets up housekeeping in Washington it will soon discover a homelike atmosphere pervading things.

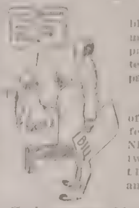
HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

Being a genius [illegible] hard on the constitution, distract[illegible] to the family and a perfectly hopeless financial proposition.



The great trouble [illegible] that the majority of people are not content to let the past stay past.

Don't be afraid of what the other fellow may think. Nineteen out of twenty men don't think straight anyway.

The man with horse sense doesn't get stampeded by the pony ballet

There is plenty of luck lying all along your way, but the trouble about [illegible] [illegible] you can't tell whether it is good or bad until afterward.

The young man who has never been taught to work is pretty apt to be on the road to destruction without stopover privileges

The best part of wisdom is in trying to keep in tune with progressive things irrespective of what has gone before.

We judge a tree by the fruit of its graft and are prone to measure man by the same standard.

Cast your bread upon the water and there are nine chances out of ten that the suckers will get it.

Little Bruises.

Oh, lackaday, that trifles small
Should cause us so much worry,
That little ripples on the stream
Should put us in a flurry.
The missing of a railroad train,
A slight delay in payment
Of bills that we have owed awhile
For shelter, food and raiment.

The scratching of a vandal hen
Where garden seeds are planted,
The antics of a slot machine,
Requests that are not granted,
A neighbor's children sassing back,
A mail man's stupid blunder,
Are not the things to fume about
And struggle daily under.

The troubles that annoy today
And cause so much commotion
Will in a year from now appear
As specks upon the ocean.
All wool they may appear today,
But then they will be cotton
Or just a mass of tattered rags
And most of them forgotten.

The more attention they receive
The more they will keep growing
Until it seems your cup is full
And almost overflowing.
But if you bid them chase themselves,
Go on and do not heed them.
Perhaps at once, to your surprise,
You'll find you do not need them.

LUMMI RESERVE MAY BE OPENED

Young Indians Want to Sell Their Land

Bellingham, Feb. 22—In spite of the demurrer of the few remaining aged Indian men and women of the Lummi Indian reservation, a plan has been staretd to induce the department of the interior to open the reservation for settlement.

Not alone is this end desired by the white citizens, but the young members of the Lummi tribe are as a unit, practically, for the consummation of the settlement plan. The young Indians for several years have attempted to have individual allotments of the land made so that title could be secured that would enable them to transfer their holdings by sale if desired. But there yet remains a half dozen old men and women who by their pleadings have curbed the younger men in their efforts to destroy all semblances of tribal relations. The young men dislike the idea of being wards of the government, which prohibits the transfer of their lands to white settlers. The old Lummi Indians do not want to live to see the day when the Illihee of their fathers will be desecrated by the white man. In their demands yet remains the love for the bones of those who have gone before them, and they fear the wrath of the Great Sprit should they permit the white man to gain control of their land. The young Indians, however, have shaken the old ideas and want an individualism that will permit them to bartter their land, as do the white men.

The reservation is five miles west of Bellingham the water of Bellingham bay intervening. It comprises about 13,000 acres.

Headed by a committee of three, composed of F. W. Radley, C. H. Banner and W. J. Lang, representing the Young Men's Commercial Club, plans will be devised to place the question properly before the department of the interior. The committee will ask aid of all of the commercial organizations, as well as the various grange associations of the county, to assist by circulating petitions for the signature of every citizen in the county.

Good Reason Why.

The Woman Hater—Can you explain why it is that a woman hardly ever thanks a man for giving her his seat in a street car? The Man Hater—Easily, sir! It's because she hardly ever gets the chance.—Brooklyn Life

"Not much," replied Mrs. Malaprop. "One is a cinnamon of the other."—Chicago Record-Herald.

NORMAL SCHOOLS WITHOUT MONEY

Teachers May Have to go Without Salaries

Salem, Or., Feb. 22—Three normal schools still live but they live without money to carry on their work. The teachers of Weston, of Ashland and of Monmouth are without provisions for their salaries. The schools have been granted no appropriations for their maintenance. The senate stood pat and the house threw back the propositions made and let it go at that. The whole question is still alive and the next legislature will have the battle to go through with once more when it next convenes.

.. THOUGHTS IN DREAMS ..

A characteristic of dreams which, as the rather materialistic Dr. Clarke says, "hints at a life that has neither beginning nor end and is bounded by no limits which human thoughts can compass" is the rapidity with which events happen in the dream world. Thus, when asleep and dreaming, we live an entire lifetime in a minute. In a space of time that is scarcely more than a second we pass through experiences that could not be duplicated in this objective sphere in hours perhaps in years.

Count Lavalette relates that one night, when imprisoned and under sentence of death, he dreamed that he stood for five hours at a Paris street corner, where he witnessed a continuous succession of harrowing scenes of blood, every one of which wrought his soul to the highest pitch of excitement. When he woke he found that he had been asleep less than two minutes.

In a more recent experiment, made expressly to test the truth of these theories, the subject was aroused from sleep by a few drops of water being sprinkled upon his forehead. It took but an instant to accomplish this result, and yet in that incalculably brief space of time the man dreamed of going on an excursion; of an accident by which he was plunged into a lake, and during the long struggle to escape death that followed all the experiences of his life seemed to flash before him, just as they are said to appear to a person who is actually drowning.

Dreams are tricksters. Professor Titchener of Cornell university told with gusto of his experience. As a specialist in psychology he interested himself in dreams. Like a true scientist, he once set about gathering data. He wanted to know what caused dreams, where they came from, what they meant, and all that. He determined to watch himself when he slept and to awake himself at once when he found himself dreaming something of value. So, with a notebook on a writing table near his bed, he forced himself to waken for [illegible] and to write down, while the dream impressions were vivid, his remembrances of the det[illegible] of the room, the bed and [illegible] condition to attempt to arrive at [illegible] possible causes of his dreams.

He was getting on famously. One night he had a particularly vivid dream. In accordance with his practice, he forced himself to awake and immediately write down clearly every thing about it, then went back to sleep again. The next morning he awoke and was astounded to see that his note sheet was blank. He remembered positively the notes he had set down thereon in the middle of the preceding night. The next night again he wrote down his notes after his dream, only to have the same uncanny [illegible] the next morning at finding [illegible] recorded.

The strange circumstances set him to pondering. That night he impressed upon his mind before dropping off into slumber that he must awaken with his first dream. [illegible] with that, with his [illegible]. Subsequently this [illegible] command deliver[illegible] [illegible] all through [illegible]. When the [illegible] dream came be[illegible] he felt himself awaken, and he set about writing down the facts upon the pad on his table.

It was then that from some source of inner consciousness he felt the command again to awake although he seemed at the time to be in full possession of his normal faculties. His eyes opened, and the secret was out. He found himself lying in bed where he had been all that night. His rising after each dream had become so much a routine that he had dreamed that he had arisen and had made the notes, and his dream was so clear that it seemed reality.—Outing Magazine.

Pat's Deficiencies.

Mrs. McCarthy's husband went out in a boat alone. The boat overturned, and he was drowned. A friend met her some weeks later.

"I hear," said he, "that Pat left you very well off—that he left you $20,000."

"True," said Mrs. McCarthy; "he did."

"How was that?" asked her friend. "Pat could not read or write, could he?"

"No," said Mrs. McCarthy, "nor swim."—New York Press.

BUYS IMMENSE TIMBER TRACT

Purchase Made by Americans in British Columbia

Vancouver, B. C. Feb. 22 Twenty thousand acres of timber lands 200 miles north of Vancouver, has just been purchased by J. M. Tuller, manager in British Columbia for F. R. Pendleton, H. S. Gilke & Company, who have large timber holdings in Washington state. There is estimated to be 350,000,000 feet of timber on the tract.

JOHNSON ROAD BILL DEFEATED

House Shies at Proposed Levy of Taxes

Salem, Or., Feb. 22—Johnson's road bill was snowed under by an avalanch of negative votes in the house Saturday afternoon. Only 12 affirmative votes were recorded in its favor.

When the bill came up for consideration the house went into committe of the whole and invited J. H. Albert, a member of the good roads conference, before the house to make a statement and explanation of the provisions of the bill to the members of the house. After a great deal of discussion and many questions asked of Mr. Albert the committee reported the bill back and put it on its final passage. The opposition to the measure then bloomed out, the house members refusing to stand for the great amount of money that would be raised by the taxation provisions of the bill. It was contended that the tax would prove burdensome on the farmers of the state and for that reason more than for any other the bill was killed.

When the final vote was taken there were two members absent and out of the remaining 58 only 12 voted for the measure.

"BIG NIGHT" TONIGHT AT THE A. A. A. A.

The Hood River high school basket ball team which failed to put in appearace last Saturday night, will play the Astoria high school team this evening. The game will be called at eight o'clock sharp, so as to give the spectators ample time to attend the big country dance which will be held in the auditorium overhead. Tonight's game promises to be an over interesting one, and a large crowd is expected to attend. It is hoped that the new seats will be in readiness for this evenings attraction. So as not to disappoint the many people who turned out to see the game Saturday night, the local girls engaged in a comedy game with the fast boys team of the A. A. A. A. The high school girls would like to see the same crowd witness their game tonight, for they feel confident of putting up a lively skirmish. Finish your holiday by attending the basket ball game and the country dance. An admission fee will be charged.

As a result of the investigation made by the government last summer of the conditions existing among the natives in the Bristol bay section of Alaska, the treasury department has decided to erect a model school house at Nushagak river for the education of the Indian children as well as of the children of white people residing in that district.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wirkkala Jr. entertained a number of their friends on Sunday evening on account of the 29th anniversary of his birth. Their home in Uniontown was crowded with their friends, who presented him with a handsome present in token of their regards.

Josiah West was up from Clatsop today conferring with the officers of the Oregon coast Rilway Company regarding the righ-of-way thru his property for the proposed electric road to Seaside and there is said to be excellent chance that the condemnation suit now pending in the courts will be amicably adjusted, as Mr. West does not want to retard the construction of the road.

Captain Winkel of the steam schooner J. Marhoffer filed a wreck report in the custom house today of the accident to his craft on last Friday morning. The report says the rings in the high pressure cylinder broke, but the amount of damage done is not known. The value of the vessel is given as $85,000 and that of her cargo is fixed at $6500.

Practically all the canneries on the Columbia river as well as the local companies operating plans in Alaska have signed their Chinese crews for the coming season. Owing the expected big run on the Sound and the extra demand for labor there, the contracts for the coming season are from three to five cents per case higher than for last year. The matter of cannery labor is becoming a more serious question each succeeding year and one packer remarked today that he considered it the greatest obstacle which confronts the fishing industry. Chinamen are becoming more scarce every season and white men will not follow the trade as it provides labor for only a few months during the year.

The Sons of the American Revolution recently offered prizes to the High school pupils in the state of Oregon for essays on some subject in connection with the War of Independence. Several hundred essays were received and one of the prizes was won by Miss Emma E. Wooton of 546 Eighth street, Astoria. The subject of her essay was: "The Battle of Bunker Hill."

Washington's Birthday was very quietly observed in Astoria and it was particularly noticeably this afternoon on account of the business houses being closed for the balance of the day. Patriotism was shown by the display of flags from every staff and the few vessels in the harbor displaying their bunting, the lighthouse tender Heather making the most elaborate display.

Henry Erickson Jr. of Hammond died athe residence of his father there on Saturday evening of typhoid pnumonia after an illness lasting over several weeks. His funeral was held this afternoon and the interment was in Ocean View cemetery. He was but 21 years of age at the time of his death and has been employed on the jetty work in different capacities since a boy. He was popular, capable and efficient and his death is regretted by a large circle of friends.

Captain Abercrombie has not yet made the appointment of a fifth sergeant of the local military company to fill the vacancy existing, as there is still one corporal to take the examinations, which will be held tomorrow evening. At the same time there will be an examination of several privates for promotion to corporal. These examinations will also be held tomorrow evening and the appointments will be announced on Wednesday.

During the past week the sum of $15,272.56 as collected at the sheriff's office as taxes on the 1908 roll and $468.23 in rebates was allowed. The total tax collections up to the present time since the roll was opened amount to $33,703.87 and this, with $1,028.44 allowed as rebates make a total of $34.732.31 that the roll has been reduced. As all the timberland syndicates and the other owners of large property interest have secured statements of their taxes and as all are expected to take advantage of the three per cent rebate, the payments during the coming week or ten days will probably be very heavy.

In the circuit court on Saturday evening, Arthur N. Hall, a soldier at Fort Stevens, was arraigned on an indictment returned by the grand jury and charging him with pointing a gun at Charles Mekula, constable at Hammond. He pleaded guilty and was find $25, which he paid. The grand jury returned a not true bill in the case against George Smith, accused of the larceny of a watch, and the defendant was discharged from custody. The session of the circuit court will be resumed tomorrow morning,, when Wm. Nyberg will plead to the seven indictments brought against him for violating the local option law and he will be sentenced uder conviction a few days ago on a similar charge.

After lying idle for two years, the two-masted schooner Carrier Dove has been sold by the Seattle-Alaska Fish Company to the Queen City Fish Company. The vessel is on the marine railway at West Seattle where she is being made ready for halibut cruising. The price paid for the Carrier Dove was not made public but it is said to be between $4,000 and $5,000. Her new owners are preparing to spend considerable money in preparing the Carrier Dove for the halibut trade. Carpenters are altering the hull for the installation of two 75-horse power gasoline engines and in five or six weeck the two-master will be ready to proceed to the Cape Flattery banks, where she will cruise for halibut.

Forty-seven days on voyage between San Francisco and Puget Sound, the American schooner Oakland, Captain William Mercer, reached Port Townsend from the ocean Sunday night. Ill from the effects a of severe ordeal in contending against hard winter gales, Captain Mercer wired his resignation immediately upon his arrival and stated that all the hard weather encountered in 30 years' sailing the Pacific would not total the amount of gales encountered on his last voyage. The Oakalnd was bound from San Francisco for the mouth of the Coquille river. A point off the river bar was reached in four days but before a tug arrived a gale sent the vessel outside for safety. For nearly a month hard storms were met with and steadily the schooner was forced northward until an entrance to Willapa Harbor was gained. Exhausted by the long struggle, and with food gone, the arrival was most timely.

Henry Poukula, a young man said to be 18 years of age, was arrested on Sunday on a charge of being drunk. He is an elder brother of the boy who was arrested a week ago and which resulted in two saloon keepers getting in trouble. He refuses to tell where he procured his liquor but may later when he appears before the court. In appearance he looks to be over 21 but his parents say he is under age.

C. Bradbury, a former well known Astorian writes to friends in Astoria from Grants Pass, Oregon, in which he states that he has made a new find in his placer mines there. After digging six days and going down but five feet he took out 31 ounces of gold and the work still continues to pay. This mine promises to develop into a very valuable one. Mr. Bradbury also states that the winter has been an unusually wet one but it has pleased the placer miners if it has not met with as much favor from the farmers.

On March 17 the excellent and well known play "Alabama" will be propuced at the Astoria theatre under the auspices of the Women of the Relief corps of the G. A. R. by local talent. The cast is all made up of well known Astorians who have appeared in similar entertainments. All parts are well provided for and at present the final rehearsals are being held. Mrs. W. C. Shaw of the Relief Corps is managing the production. "Alabama" is one of the best plays written by the well known dramatic writer Augustus Thomas in four acts with twelve characters.

Ludwig Hartwig, an old and prominently respected resident of this city died during last evening from a complication of diseases after an intermittent illness of several years, old age being a large factor in the immediate cause. The funeral will be held Wednesday morning under the auspices of the Masonic order, of which he was a prominent member, and also of the A. O. U. W. He was a native of Germany 78, years of age and was by occupation a contractor and builder, many of the buildings of the city being the result of his work. He leaves a widow, one son, Louis C. Hartwig, and one daughter Mrs. A. R. Kanaga, of San Francisco.

An error has been found in the language of the enrolled copy of the insurance commissioner bill and the error was corrected to correspond with the bill as passed. The bill carries an emergency clause, but the journals of the two houses show that it should not. That being true, and the validity of the emergency clause being in doubt, Governor Chamberlain said that he will not appoint the insurance commissioner provided for in the bill, but will leave that to Secretary of State Benson when the latter becomes governor. Benson, it is generally understood, will appoint S. A. Kozer, who served eight years as auditing clerk in the office of the Secretary of State Dunbar, and two years as chief clerk in the Secretary's office under Benson.

The steam schooner J. Marhoffer with a cargo of lumber from Grays Harbor for Redondo put into this port Sunday in distress, her high pressure cylinder being cracked, up and down, for a distance of fully 13 inches. The Marhoffer sailed from Grays Harbor on Thursday and the accident occurred at one o'clock on Friday morning when the craft was off the Columbia river lightship. She could make little head way under low pressure and as there was a heavy sea running with every indication of the bad weather continuing, Captain Winkel did not consider it best to start down the coast with the vessel in its crippled condition. Accordingly he headed off shore and lay to until yesterday, when the storm had subsided so that he could cross in. As soon as repairs are made the Marhoffer will proceed to Redondo.

SECOND TRIAL OF STANDARD OIL

In Which Judge Landis Imposed Great Fine

Chicago, Feb. 23—The second trial of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana on a charge for rebating in connection with shipments of oil from Whiting, Indiana, to East St. Louis was opened in the federal district court today before Judge Anderson of Indianapolis, who was imported here for the case upon refusal by Judge Landis and Judge Bethea to have anything to do with it. This is the case in which Judge Landis imposed a fine of $29,240,000, upon first conviction.

The fine was reversed by the court of appeals andthe case remanded for a new trial. It is expected to take several days to fill the jury. The veniremen are mostly farmers.

Judge Anderson had been on the bench but a few minutes, when John S. Miller, an attorney for the defense, filed a motion to quash the venire of 150 men on the ground that it had been improperly drawn. Sixty per cent of the veniermen are farmers, only three are residents of Chicago and but 16 live in Cook county, which contains two-thirds of the population within the court's jurisdiction. District Attorney Sims was greatly surprised by the motion but is sharply opposing it.

COWLITZ MILLS ARE REOPENED

Castle Rock, Wash., Feb. 23—The sound of the whistle was heard at the Peabody mill this morning, the largest mill here. All the mills have been shut down for many weeks, and with the starting of the Peabody (Cowlitz Shingle Company) mill this morning all the mills here are now running.

Parties from Portland are trying to close a deal for the "Gray" shingle mill on the West Side.

Logging camps in this vicinity are now running full blast, and putting much fine timber into the river.

Several coal mines are in operation, notably those owned by the Leavell Coal Company and the Hunmington Coal & the Development Company, while the Seattle-Portland Coal Company's mine, one of the largest and best in this region, being put in condition for active operation this summer. Several other coal properties will probably be devloped during the coming year. Taken altogether indications are that Cowlitz county is entering upon one of the most prosperous year in her history.

CHARTERS ARE IMPROVING

Better Freights are Now Being Secured

San Francisco, Feb. 28—The charter market is picking up again. The British ship Marlborough Hill, which arrived here February 4 from Rotterdam, has been chartered to load lumber at a Sound port for Valparaiso direct a 40 shillings, and the barkentine Georgina, now on the Sound from Callao, has been fixed to load lumber there for a direct nitrate port at 38 shillings.

In coastwise business the steamer Homer has been fixed to load box shooks on Grays Harbor for this port at $4.50; the steamer Capastrano to load on Grays Harbor for San Pedro at $4.50, and the steamer Caso to load at Portland for San Pedro at $4.25 As will be seen by these fixtures the freight market holds very steady.

Captain Hatch of the Monticello Steamship company denies the rumor that the steamer Arrow, now operating between this city and Vallojo, is to be sent to the Sound this summer to operate in connection with the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition.

The representative of the Parsons Turbine Engine company, R. S. Pringle of New York, who has been on the Japanese steamer Tenyo Maru since her completion, left for the east today. He reports the turbine engine highly satisfactory and states that the Tenyo Maru with her three propellers can be run at greater speed and less cost than any of the large twin screw liners on the Pacific. The vessel is now taking on a fuel cargo of 20,000 barrels of oil. H. S. Bates states that he has been offered a guarantee of 10,500 tons of freight a year for the proposed independent line of steamers from here to Laboca and adds that with two or three more such offers the line will be assured.

The Elder That Swore.

An elder of the kirk, having found a little boy and his sister playing marbles on Sunday, put his reproof in this form, not a judicious one for a child: "Boy, do you know where children go who play marbles on Sabbath day?"

"Ay," said the boy. "They gang doun to the field by the water belaw the brig."

"No," roared out the elder; "they go to hell and are burned."

The little fellow, really shocked, called to his sister: "Come awa', Jeanie. Here's a man swearing awfully."—"Reminiscences of Dean Ramsay."

LITTLE CHANGE IN LUMBER DUTY

Tariff will Not be Materially Reduced

Washington D C., Feb 23 Representive of lumber manufacturers who have been around Washington several weeks protesting against any great reduction in duty on lumber, feel gratified with the results of their labors.

One, the leading man of this lobby, said today that the ways and meanr committee, in his opinion, will not provide tor free lumber if the tariff bill be reported to the house at the beginning of the special seession, but will make only a moderate cut in the present duty of [illegible] a thousand.

He said [illegible] was not reasonable to expect that a general tariff bill making reductions in duty on almost all classes of imports, would make an exception of lumber, but he also expressed the belief that the duty on lumber would not be sliced any heavier than any other important cass of imports. He said there has been a marked change of sentiment in congress during the past two weeks due to better understanding of the situation, but he was frank enough to confess that if the tariff bill had been reported a month ago lumber might have been found on the free list.

EXTRA SESSION OF LEGISLATURE

Or Appropriation Bill will Fail to Become a Law

Salem, Or., Feb. 23 - A special session of the Oregon legislature will be necessary, or senate bill No 254, a bill appropriating $350,000 for improvements at state institutions will fail to become a law. Owing to irregularities the bill was not legally passed, and is invalid. The special session, if called, will merely pass the bill in the from in which it was intended to be passed by the session just closed.

No special session has been called and none will be unless 20 members of the senate and 40 of the house signify their willingness to come to Salem for a special session without expense to the state. This decision was reached at a conference tonight between Governor Chamberlain. President Bowerman, Speaker McArthur and Senator Kay. Senator Kay has undertaken to get the members to agree to come and believes he can do so. President Bowerman will not ask the members to come together on this condition, though they say they are willing to come themselves at their own expense.

Manager Shortley will of course operate the picture machines which insures a first class performance. But the feature of the evening will be the special artists to appear for the first time in illustrated song. Among those who will be on the program are Mrs. Harry Flavel, Mrs. C. H. Callender and Miss Irene Simington, each of which will sing one or more songs during the evening. Another feature will be a full orchestra of seven pieces. The boys have set the admission price at 15 cents or two admissions for 25c. The performance will surely be worth three times as much, but the low admission was made so that everybody in the city should attend.

"THE KERRY GOW"

E. L. Sackett, agent for the Arthur Cunningham Company was in the city yesterday in the interest of his company and states that Mr. Cunningham's season has been most successful. They will appear at the Astoria theatre next Sunday evening presenting Joseph Murphy's famous play: "The Kerry Gow," As is well known Mr. Cunningham is considered one of the best baritones that ever appeared in opera and one of the features of his performance will be his rendition of those popular Irish ballads. Believe me if all those endearing young charms." "The Irishman's Toast" and "Nora Drew." Owing to Mr. Cunningham's popularity and the famous play that he is presenting, it is expected that he will be greeted by a large audience.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN"

Next Monday evening Manager Hanlin announces the coming of Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which is always sure of big business, as they give the people their moneys worth. The company carry an excellent band and orchestra, which is really a feature in itself. The prices are within the reach of all being from 25 to 75 cents.

PRESERVATION OF TIMBER

State Officer to Handle Tree Planting

Olympia, Feb 23—A plan for the conservation of Washington forests has been submitted to the legislature by Howard Taylor, of King, and will be before the house for further consideration the latter part of the week.

The bill creates a state forestry board, to consist of the governor, secretary of state and state land commissioner. A forester, to be appointed by the board at a salary of $4,000 a year, is to have authority to fix and determine the tracts of land suitable for reforestation. These areas, to be known as conservation zones, are to be reseeded and planted with trees. At the expiration of forty years the zones are to be cruised and the timber which they contain is to be appraised and sold to the highest bidder. When the timber is cut the owners are required to pay the state of Washington an assessment of 25 per cent of the valuation of the timber. Fifty per cent of the money accruing to the state is to be turned into the school fund, and the remainder goes to the forestry fund of the state.

Roar of the Waterfall.

The roar of a waterfall is produced almost entirely by the bursting of millions of air bubbles.

Guineas.

Guineas were first struck by Charles II., in 1660, from gold brought from Guinea. They were fixed at 21 shillings in 1717. The first sovereign was coined in 1817, in which year the guineas were finally withdrawn from circulation.

Chinese Rosaries.

Some Chinese rosaries are made of wooden beads with leather tassels, on which are small brass rings, and are finished at the ends with brass ornaments and tags of leather.

LIFE IS CHEAP IN THE ORIENT

Human Beings of Little Account in Canton

In Canton I met for the second time a talented young Swedish civil engineer who had crossed the Pacific with me in search of a job, writes I. K. Friedman in the Chicago News. He was sanguine as to his future then; he was in the dumps now.

He had just laid before one of the chief officials of the place, to whom he came armed with a letter of introduction, plans for installing a modern sewerage system in Canton. "Your people," he said to the mandarin, "die off like flies every time the plague strikes you here. Your mortality rate, to one coming from the sanitary cities of America or Europe, is appalling. Let me cut it down for you and put it on a par with that of the first centers of the world."

Then the mandarin, so the young engineer said, leaned far back in his chair, stared at him with a surprised air and remarked scornfully, but quietly: "Young man, why did you come all these thousands of miles to Canton for the sake of carrying to us such mad ideas? Take them back to Sweden with you. Let us rest in peace in China and go our own way undisturbed by these silly newfangled ideas. Build modern sewerage systems in Sweden to your heart's content, ten in every city for all we care. We will have none of them in Canton."

When the engineer, crestfallen and bewildered, asked why, the answer was at once forthcoming: "There are too many people living in Canton now. We shouldn't know what to do with more if we had them. Our people, as it is, are finding it hard enough to make a living."

This mandarin's attitude sums up in a way at once amusing and illuminative the oriental attitude toward life and the living.

Nothing seems cheaper in the orient than life, and, as a matter of fact, little else is so cheap. When you pass through the labyrinth of streets that make up Canton, packed almost to suffocation with human beings, you begin to understand why so little value is placed on life. Your understanding of the situation grows clearer when you realize the battle-like competition going on here from early morning until late at night for the few handfuls of rice and millet that sustain the existence of each of this swarming mass.

An Operating Room Hero.

President Fallieres' first list of decorations for the year included the name of one man who is little known. This was a young physician named Louis Bozy, who lost an eye in the discharge of his duty. Dr. Bozy while acting as assistant to an operating surgeon in one of the Paris hospitals had an eye injured through a drop of poisonous matter coming in contact with it. He knew that an antidote must be applied immediately, but by doing this he would have left the chief surgeon unattended and remained at his post with his eye uncared for until the operation was completed. In consequence of his heroism he lost an eye and was confined to a hospital for a long time. President Fallieres in conferring the decoration said that a wound received by a physician in the discharge of his duty was as honorable as one received on the battlefield.

The Best
Way
To Advertise
Astoria?

✻ ✻ ✻ ✻ ✻ ✻

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put your best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

... Greatest of Heroes ...

Count Leo Tolstoy's Estimate of Lincoln

Visiting Count Leo Tolstoy in Yasnaya with the intention of getting him to write an article on Abraham Lincoln, I unfortunately found him not well enough to yield to my request. However, he was willing to give me his opinion of the great American statesman, and this is what he told me:

"Of all the great national heroes and statesmen of history Lincoln is the only real giant. Alexander, Frederick the Great, Caesar, Napoleon, Gladstone and even Washington stand in greatness of character, in depth of feeling and in a certain moral power far behind Lincoln. Lincoln was a man of whom a nation has a right to be proud. He was a Christ in miniature, a saint of humanity, whose name will live thousands of years in the legends of future generations. We are still too near to his greatness and so can hardly appreciate his divine power, but after a few centuries more our posterity will find him considerably bigger than we do. His genius is still too strong and too powerful for the common understanding, just as the sun is too hot when its light beams directly on us.

"If one would know the greatness of Lincoln one should listen to the stories which are told about him in other parts of the world. I have been in wild places where one hears the name of America uttered with such mystery as if it were some heaven or hell. I have heard various tribes of barbarians discussing the new world, but I heard this only in connection with the name of Lincoln. Lincoln as the wonderful hero of America is known by the most primitive nations of Asia. This may be illustrated through the following incident:

"Once while traveling in the Caucasus I happened to be the guest of a Caucasian chief of the Circassians, who, living far away from civilized life in the mountains, had but a fragmentary and childish comprehension of the world and its history. The fingers of civilization had never reached him nor his tribe, and all life beyond his native valleys was a dark mystery. Being a Mussulman, he was naturally opposed to all ideas of progress and education.

"I was received with the usual oriental hospitality and after our meal was asked by my host to tell him something of my life. Yielding to his request, I began to tell him of my profession, of the development of our industries and inventions and of the schools. He listened to everything with indifference, but when I began to tell about the great statesmen and the great generals of the world he seemed at once to become very much interested "'Wait a moment,' he interrupted after I had talked a few minutes. 'I want all my neighbors and my sons to listen to you. I will call them immediately.'

"He soon returned with a score of wild looking riders and asked me politely to continue. It was indeed a solemn moment when those sons of the wilderness sat around me on the floor and gazed at me as if hungering for knowledge. I spoke at first of our czars and of their victories; then I spoke of the foreign rulers and of some of the greatest military leaders. My talk seemed to impress them deeply. The story of Napoleon was so interesting to them that I had to tell them every detail—as, for instance, how his hands looked, how tall he was, who made his guns and pistols and the color of his horse. It was very difficult to satisfy them and to meet their point of view, but I did my best. When I declared that I had finished my talk my host, a gray bearded, tall rider, rose, lifted his hand and said very gravely:

"'But you have not told us a syllable about the greatest general and greatest ruler of the world. We want to know something about him. He was a hero. He spoke with a voice of thunder. He laughed like the sunrise, and his deeds were strong as the rock and as sweet as the fragrance of roses. The angels appeared to his mother and predicted that the son whom she would conceive would become the greatest the stars had ever seen. He was so great that he even forgave the crimes of his greatest enemies and shook brotherly hands with those who had plotted against his life. His name was Lincoln, and the country in which he lived is called America, which is so far away that if a youth should journey to reach it he would be an old man when he arrived. Tell us of that man.' 'Tell us, please, and we will present you with the best horse of our stock!' shouted the others.

"I looked at them and saw their faces all aglow, while their eyes were burning. I saw that those rude barbarians were really interested in a man whose name and deeds had already become a legend. I told them of Lincoln and his wisdom, of his home life and youth. They asked me ten questions to one which I was able to answer. They wanted to know all about his habits, his influence upon the people and his physical strength. But they were very astonished to hear that Lincoln made a sorry figure on a horse and that he lived such a simple life.

"'Tell us why he was killed,' one of them said.

"I had to tell everything. After all my knowledge of Lincoln was exhausted they seemed to be satisfied. I can hardly forget the great enthusiasm which they expressed in their wild thanks and the desire to get a picture of the great American hero. I said that I probably could secure one from my friend in the nearest town, and this seemed to give them great pleasure.

"The next morning when I left the chief a wonderful Arabian horse was brought me as a present for my marvelous story and our farewell was very impressive. One of the riders agreed to accompany me to the town and get the promised picture, which I was now bound to secure at any price. I was successful in getting a large photograph from my friend, and I handed it to the man with my greetings to his associates. It was interesting to witness the gravity of his face and the trembling of his hands when he received my present. He gazed for several minutes silently like one in a reverent prayer. His eyes filled with tears. He was deeply touched, and I asked him why he became so sad. After pondering my question for a few moments he replied:

"'I am sad because I feel sorry that he had to die by the hand of a villain. Don't you find, judging from his picture, that his eyes are full of tears and that his lips are sad with a secret sorrow?'

"Like all orientals, he spoke in a poetical way and left me with many deep thoughts.

"This little incident proves how largely the name of Lincoln is worshiped throughout the world and how legendary his personality has become.

"Now, why was Lincoln so great that he overshadows all other national heroes? He really was not a great general, like Napoleon or Washington. He was not such a skillful statesman as Gladstone or Frederick the Great. But his supremacy expresses itself altogether in his peculiar moral power and in the greatness of his character. He had come through many hardships and much experience to the realization that the greatest human achievement is love. He was what Beethoven was in music, Dante in poetry, Raphael in painting and Christ in the philosophy of life. He aspired to be divine, and he was.

"It is natural that before he reached his goal he had to walk the highway of mistakes. But we find him nevertheless in every tendency true to one main motive, and that was to benefit mankind. He was one who wanted to be great through his smallness. If he had failed to become president he would be, no doubt, just as great as he is now, but only God could appreciate it. The judgment of the world is usually wrong in the beginning, and it takes centuries to correct it. But in the case of Lincoln the world was right from the start. Sooner or later Lincoln would have been seen to be a great man, even though he had never been an American president. But it would have taken a great generation to place him where he belongs.

"Lincoln died prematurely by the hand of an assassin, and naturally we condemn the criminal from our viewpoint of justice. But the question is, Was his death not predestined by a divine wisdom, and was it not better for the nation and for his greatness that he died just in that way and at that particular moment? We know so little about that divine law which we call fate that no one can answer. Christ had a presentiment of his death, and there are indications that also Lincoln had strange dreams and presentiments of something tragic. If that was really the fact, can we conceive that human will could have prevented the outcome of the universal or divine will? I doubt it. I doubt also that Lincoln could have done more to prove his greatness than he did. I am convinced that we are but instruments in the hands of an unknown power and that we have to follow its bidding to the end. We have a certain apparent independence, according to our moral character, wherein we may benefit our fellows, but in all eternal and universal questions we follow blindly a divine predestination. According to that eternal law, the greatest of national heroes had to die, but an immortal glory still shines on his deeds.

"However, the biggest heroism is that which is based on humanity, truth, justice and pity. All other forms are doomed to forgetfulness. The greatness of Aristotle or Kant is insignificant compared with the greatness of Buddha, Moses and Christ. The greatness of Napoleon, Caesar or Washington is only moonlight by the sun of Lincoln. His example is universal and will last thousands of years. Washington was a typical American, Napoleon was a typical Frenchman, but Lincoln was a humanitarian as broad as the world. He was bigger than his country, bigger than all the presidents together. Why? Because he loved his enemies as himself and because he was a universal individualist who wanted to see himself in the world, not the world in himself. He was great through his simplicity and was noble through his charity.

"Lincoln is a strong type of those who make for truth and justice, for brotherhood and freedom. Love is the foundation of his life. That is what makes him immortal, and that is the quality of a giant. I hope that his centenary birthday will create an impulse toward righteousness among the nations. Lincoln lived and died a hero, and as a great character he will live as long as the world lives. May his life long bless humanity." Count S. Stakelberg in New York World.

Over Herculaneum.

Herculaneum lies under the modern villages of Portici and Resina. In attempting to excavate the buried city the Italian government is encountering the problem of the property rights of the people who live on the modern level. The legal theory is that a landowner owns an inverted pyramid whose apex is the center of the earth and everything under him is his. But who inherits the property rights of the subsoil town which was buried 2,000 years ago? A law is pending to take by right of eminent domain the ground from under the Resina landowners or at least the treasures it may conceal.—Youth's Companion.

"Hush Money" at the Opera.

There are a number of singers belonging to the Metropolitan Opera House company who although they are retained merely for [illegible] of emergency, are nevertheless guaranteed a certain amount of pay. Thus supposing that their price per performance is $700 they each get, say, $5,000 for the season, even if they do not sing at all.

Some wag at the opera [illegible] has invented a most appropriate name for the salaries paid out to these silent song birds.

He calls it "hush money." —[illegible] Times.

LATHAM'S HOME RUN

How it Figured in Dubbing Him "The Dude"

Charley Comiskey told the story of how Arlie Latham came to be called "the dude."

"One spring during Latham's term of service with the good old St. Louis Browns," said Comiskey, "he jumped into the opening game of the season and won us a victory by knocking out a home run in the last inning. Chris von der Ahe from his place in the grand stand saw Arlie make his sensational hit and naturally enthused. After the game 'der boss president' entered the clubhouse and in that peculiar dialect of his said to Latham:

"'Arlie, my poy, you must be glad that I, Chris, vas proud mit you, an' I vill show you vat my feelings is by giving you the present of somedings for you to wear on yourself. Take dis order on mine own tailor an' go an' dress up yourself.'

"Chris' order on the tailor read something like this:

"'Give to Arlie der t'ings vat he buys an' send to me der bill.'

"Latham didn't do a thing on the strength of that order but replenish his wardrobe. For three days in succession he showed up at the ball park in a fine makeup, and every suit of clothes was brand new. On the fourth day Chris got a bill from the clothing people for $100. Naturally he sent for Latham and demanded an explanation.

"'Why, Chris, old pal,' said 'Lath,' 'there's nothing to explain. Didn't you agree in that order you gave me to pay for what I bought, and haven't I just begun to buy? Why, old pal, I have only got three suits and expect to be measured for another this afternoon. What's wrong?'

"'Arlie,' replied Von der Ahe, 'you vas de one infernal dude in de pizness. I vill dis bill pay, but you vill yourself go to der tailor an' mit him explain vot I dink of der impudence of you yourself. You vill also stop mit de clothes you now have on an' do no more mit such foolishness mit der man vot pays your salary. Arlie, you vas one dude, an' if you play mit any errors dis afternoon I vill myself fine you all der bootiful clothes you have yourself bought.'

"From that day Latham became known to the baseball world as 'the dude.'"

A Curious Structure.

On the road from Clifton downs to Avonmouth the traveler will pass, in the Avon gorge, a curious structure to which a singular tradition is attached, relates the London Tatler. The story is that a person named Cook about a century ago was told by a gypsy in the Leigh woods that his only son would be killed by a serpent before he reached the age of twenty-one. To avert this he built a high tower and shut his son in the topmost room with the intention of secluding him there until the fatal age was passed. However, by accident a viper was taken up in a fagot to the room to light the fire, and it crept from the fagot and bit the boy so that he died. Therefore the tower was called Cook's Folly, and that is its name to this day, whatever is the true explanation.

An Ignoble Use.

Washington Irving in "Crayon Papers" says: "I was once at an evening entertainment given by the Duke of Wellington at Apsley House to William IV. The duke had manifested his admiration of his great adversary, Napoleon, by having portraits of him in different parts of the house. At the bottom of the grand staircase stood the colossal statue of the emperor by Canova. It was of marble in the antique style, with one arm partly extended, holding a figure of Victory. Over this arm the ladies in tripping upstairs to the ball had thrown their shawls. It was a singular office for the statue of Napoleon to perform in the mansion of the Duke of Wellington!

Prosecuting Attorney Tongue is to be commended for his action in refusing to compromise cases and in urging the court to impose stiff fines for violations of the law forbidding the selling of liquor without having a license. The law makes the selling of liquor a legitimate business under certain restrictions, when a license has been obtained from the properly constituted authorities. That law should be obeyed implicitly and the imposing of heavy fines will certainly bring about its observance.

Some of the Portland papers which have urging Harriman to build a road thru central Oregon, are now opposing the project, because, they say, the construction of such a road will mean that the products of that region will be taken to some other place besides Portland for shipment. In other words, the contention is that the road should not be built unless Portland is to receive the sole benefit from it. Apparently the balance of the state or even of the Pacific coast is not entitled to any consideration.

Washington, Oregon and California in particular owe their thanks to the United States senate for the vote on the naval appropriation bill in favor of keeping one-half the navy in Pacific waters at all times, says The Ledger. The amendment is not mandatory, for it was deemed wise to leave the matter to the discretion of the president. The vote, however, amounts to an expression from the senate that the Pacific is quite as deserving of the presence of the navy as the Atlantic, and really more in need of its presence than is the Atlantic. The president is to be the judge at any time whether the strength of the navy should be kept together If the house accepts the senate amendment, the expression of congress is reasonably certain to have weight with the president. It will be up to the president if one-half the navy is not kept in Pacific waters to let it be known there were reasons for not doing so. Of course, the president would not be bound to make public what conditions prompted him not to keep half the navy in the Pacific, though in the long run most of the facts would come out. The senate probably went as far in the amendment as it would be wise to go, inasmuch as congress is not always in session and could not be a judge at all times as to whether the big warships should all be kept together. One can imagine the protest that will go up from the sundry navy yard states on the Atlantic coast and from the cities that have come to look upon the warships as their particular property. The vote of the senate manifests breadth of view and a true conception of the situation on the Pacific coast. Local navy yard and city interests on the Atlantic did not keep the senators from viewing the matter as statesmen;

THE CADET FAMINE

There is a shortage right now of cadets at West Point according to the complaint of the Military academy officials This means that the prize of a first class education and keep at Uncle Sam's expense, a life career of increasing honors and emolument and royal provision for old age have lost their power as a lure for ambitious American boys. It is remarkable that there should be vacancies at West Point. Perhaps there is a string to the gift that repels young men of the stuff from which generals are made.

Nomination for the cadetship rests with congressmen. If all who are nominated should pass, then the responsibility for vacancies might be put up to the members whose districts are not represented. Yet it is but a few months since an authority at the academy reported wholesale rejections of applicants for failing to pass examinations not above high school grades. One failure creates one vacancy unless there is a capable alternate on the waiting list Even the possibilities before an alternate to an alternate should have charm to nerve a boy of military bent through the study grind which precedes the "exam," and some sort of official dragnet would doubtless gather in plenty of the right timber.

The government's generous subsidy for airship experiments is timely, but it is not ahead of time. Attempts to imitate the bird have not succeeded, and man may be as far today from practical flying as he was months ago or years ago. But astonishing flights have been made, and it will be a service to mankind to have the matter settled without delay. Other governments are experimenting, private parties are backing up inventors, and if there is anything in it the nation which hangs back now will be behind in the game whether it makes for war or commercial progress.

The prize for a definite exhibition of the airship up to date offered by a newspaper is also timely. The novel and picturesque sides of the flying machine have been exploited. Great things have been predicted for it by experts, and other experts have discounted them. A fad can run along endlessly if it is sensational enough to put down rivals. This aeroplaning most assuredly is. But it holds out promise of vast usefulness and, like steam a hundred years ago and electricity today, will revolutionize living on this globe if—it can make good. It will make good when it can parallel in the air the trip Fulton made on water a century ago by steaming from New York to Albany.

The Cubans in this country are getting the junta habit again, probably on the principle that one Cuban rule is as good as another.

If marriage is "involuntary servitude" for the woman, then the man who backs out is some sort of emancipator.

One can fancy Washington saying to Lincoln, "It is an honor to be honored after you, my dear son."

A novel on the unwritten law had best follow the example of said law and remain unwritten.

Evidently Poe is to get fame out of the Hall of Fame by being left out.

PRICES OF LOGS ARE STRONGER

Advance in Some Grades is Looked for

In its review of the condition of the log market. The timberman says:

Logging conditions on the Columbia River are strong. Red fir logs are bringing $7 to $8; yellow fir, $10 to $10.50. It is expected that No. 1 fir logs may make a slight further advance before the camps are in full operation for this season

Logging conditions on Puget Sound, in common with other localities, are firm. No. 2 fir logs are worth $6; merchantable, $9: and flooring logs, $13. It is not expected that there will be any material change in these conditions in the immediate future.

The Grays Harbor logging conditions are active and logs are scarce. Good No. 1 logs are worth $10 to $12.

The log market in British Columbia is stronger at present than it has been since the spring and early summer of 1907, with a strong upward tendency. The following may be said to be the present prevailing prices: Fir flooring, $12.50 to $13.00; merchantable, $9.50 to $10; rough, $6.50 to $7.; cedar', according to quality, $8 to $10; spruce according to quality, $8.50 to $9.50. It may be said that it is not the great demand that is causing the advance in price, but it is the scarcity of logs, of which there are very few for sale, and on account of adverse weather conditions very few are being put in so that it may be said that with an active demand for lumber a log famine would inevitably result.

Yellow fir on Coos Bay is bringing $6.50, red fiir,$6; spruce $7; red cedar, $7.50; white cedar, $9 to $10. The log market here does not fluctuate. The camps put logs in at a straight price log run, although most of the mills in this section have their own timber and operate their own camps. All of the mills in Coos County, with a few exceptions, are in operation.

There has been no change in the log situation at Coquille in the past thirty days. There have been few logs changing hands and the market for fir ■ $4.25 for second growth, and from $5 to $7 for old growth. Spruce is inactive, price ranging from $6 to $7.; white cedar, $6 to $11; The fresh water logs are practically all in the boom of the mills, and generally the supply is short. Owing to bad weather there has been very little done in the camps for the past two months and most of the camps are closed until spring..

FORTY DOLLARS FOR ARMORIES

That's the Language of Oregon Law

Salem, Or., Feb. 23—Forty dollars has been appropriated for the use of the Oregon national guard for the construction of armories throughout the state during the next two years This is by the provisions of the official enrolled copy of senate bill 125, prepared by the committee on military affairs.

According to the bill as it was first introduced provisions was made for $40,000, to be used in the construction of homes for the different national guard companies of the state. When the bill was finally passed by both houses and sent to the enrolling committee, that committee made a mistake in the figures given by the legislature and made it $40. The bill now provides specifically "that the sum of forty dollars is hereby appropriated.'

Everyone, of course, knows that a mistake has been made and the original bills will show, as will the records of the house and senate, that it was the intention of the legislature to grant $40,000. In the face of the evidence, that construction would be put upon the measure if it ever came into question, but the fact still remains that the munificent sum of $40 is officially appropriated for the construction of several armories for housing the militia of the state.

PORTLAND MAN KILLS HIMSELF

Secretary of Multnomah Club Commits Suicide

Portland, Feb. 82—E. R. Woodward, secretary of the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club shot and fatally injured himself last night about 6 o'clock in the bathroom at his suite in the Mordaunt appartments in this city. Woodward shot himself in the left ear, the bullet coming out of the top of his head. His friends are at a loss to understand what prompted this deed as well as a prior attempt he made about two weeks ago. His position with the club is good, his accounts recently underwent their annual experting and were found in perfect shape and his family relations were happy. Woodward was recently ill with an attack of stomach trouble and his friends say his suffering may have weakened his system and unstrung his nerves and furnish the only possible motive for the deed.

TRANS MISSOURI DRY CONGRESS

Third Annual Session Opens at Cheyenne

Cheyenne, Feb. 23—With more than 600 delegates present and hundred more to arrive on delayed or snow bound trains, the third Trans Missouri Dry Farming congress opened its sessions here today and will continue three days. It is confidently expected that during that time work of the utmost importance and benefit to the semi-arid regions of the country will be accomplished. With a blanket of snow a foot deep, Cheyenne greeted the delegates. Today's programme included an address of welcome by Governor Brooks, President of the congress and the reading of papers by delegates.

HARRIMAN LINES FOR OREGON

Several New Roads to be in This State

Chicago, Feb. 23—A large part of the millions which the Southern Pacific management has decided to raise by bond and stock issues is to be devoted to a battle which Ewdard H. Harriman is going to wage in the northwest, with James J. Hill and in the St. Paul interests, for the possession of valuable territory. It is understood that an official announcement will soon be made of important extensions to be made by Harriman in Oregon and other portions of the Pacific northwest.

The state of Oregon is to secure railroad advantages which were not dreamed of a few years ago, and which will bring that state into the forerank of the Northwest in the way of future development. The advent of the St. Paul into the transcontinental field, the activity of the Hill lines in surveying new territory, and the probability that the Northwestern will soon decide to seek a coast extention, have made Harriman determined to secure all of the valuable territory in the Northwest that it is possible to obtain.

This territory was as valuable several years ago, so far as future possibilities were concerned, but the fact that other railway systems have cast longing eyes upon the golden North west has caused Harriman to bestir himself. It is stated in connection with the new issue of securities that many millions will be devoted to extentions and new lines to supplement the Harriman network of roads in the West and Northwest.

OFFICIALS MAKE STATEMENT

Regarding Hidden Rocks in Unimak Pass

Washington D. C., Feb. 23- Some months ago the Budget published an article on supposed hidden rocks near Unimak pass, Alaska,' giving the comments of Capt. H. De Gueldre, master of the bark Guy C. Goss. The article greatly interested the officials of the coast and geodetic survey in Washington, and although they are unwilling to make a positive statement in the premises that might mislead mariners the following semi-official statement has been prepared.

"In connection with the interesting item, 'Masters Fear Hidden Rocks Near Unimak,' which appeared in the Astoria Daily Budget, it should be known that besides the detailed survey of the coast and geodetic survey steamer McArthur, hereafter referred to, it has been the custom since 1888 for a number of vessels of the fish commission, navy and revenue cutter service to pass over the position of these rocks in the day time under favorable weather conditions when bound to or from Unimak pass. As quite a number of these vessels were employed in the Behring sea patrol., the aggregate number of passages by them over this locality is probably large., None of them has seen any indication of danger. The survey has a record of the following;:

"The Albatross sounded for these dangers when in their vicinity in 1888, 1890 and 1892; the Yorktown ran over the position assigned to Anderson rock in 1892; the Michigan ran a line of soundings over the assigned positions of Anderson and Lenard rocks in 1893; the Grant passed over the assigned position of Anderson rock in 1897; the Manning, in 1900, passed longitude of Anderson and Lenard rocks in latitude 53 deg. 53 min. north, fair range of visibility; also, ran along latitude 54 deg. 5 min. N., in longitude of Anderson and Lenard rocks, a fair opportunity for seeing any break or rock within five miles, land visible forty miles."

"The coast and geodetic survey steamer McArthur, in 1901, sounded over the assigned position of Lenard rock sufficiently to disprove its existence in that locality."

NORMAL CASE NOT SETTLED

All Schools May be Closed Immediatly

Salem, Or.., Feb. 23—Whether to graduate the senior classes and close the normal schools or continue them and ask the legislature two years from now for a deficiency appropriation, is the problem that confronts the board of normal regents following a conference held by the executive committee of the board this morning. A meeting of the regents has been called for Wednesday at 10 o'clock at the capitol.

The executive board consists of the governor, Superintendent of School Ackerman and E. Hofer of Salem.

President French of the Weston normal, who was present during the closing hours of the legislature when the normal difficulty was before both houses, favors closing the schools at once. He feels that the attitude toward the schools as exhibited by the senate is hopeless and as it will lie with the bold over members of that body to consent to the appropriation of money for the deficiency expenses during the next biennial period he considers it inadvisable to ask the people of Weston or of eastern Oregon to put up their money to keep the school in existence.

From Monmouth the information has come that the citizens and business men have pledged enough funds to continue the school until the close of the semester. From Ashland, also, Secretary Starr has learned that feeling is intense and that a mass meeting has been called for tomorrow evening, when steps may be taken to provide the school with funds sufficient to enable the regents to carry on instruction until June so that the present senior class may be graduated.

Captain John Reed of the bar tug Wallula is taking a vacation and started out this morning for his Nehalem ranch, horseback. In a sack he carried a pup and expects to carry it on the 35 mile journey in safety. During his absence Captain A. A. Cann will be in command of the Wallula.

Frank J. Carney received his commission today from the department in Washington as postmaster for the city of Astoria and he will assume charge of the office tomorrow. Astor M Salvon will be assistant postmaster under Carney and all the other employes of the office are under the civil service rules.

Hon. J. C. McCue has returned from Salem and will straighten out his personal affairs so as to be able to remove to Portland by March 1. He says that if there is a call for a special session of the legislature he will not attend at his own expense as it was no fault of his that the appropriation bills exist as they do.

Work has so far proceeded on the construction of the mill of the Astoria Lumber Co. that the concern will be able to start cutting lumber on March 1. This will be only in a small way as the lumber cut will be used in the further construction of the mill property. It is expected that the company will be able to supply lumber for the trade in about 30 days.

A suit was filed in the circuit court this morning by the Oregon Coast Railway Company against H. W. and Tillie Christensen and Nes Nyman to condemn a right-of-way across the property for the construction and operation of an electric railroad between this city and Seaside. The case will probably be called for trial during the present term of court.

Dr. Holt, federal quarantine officer, Captain James Babbidge and Chief Engineer Thompson of the quarantine steamer Electro left for Portland on Monday evening in response to a summons to appear before the United States grand jury. They stated that they had no knowledge of the matter concerning which their testimony was wanted.

In the storm of Sunday evening 60 of the piles supporting the jetty were swept to sea. As they are valued at 15 cents a foot and are over 50 feet in length it follows that the loss is between $400 and $600. The loss of this piling does not affect the strength of the jetty materially, as they were swept from different portions. This is the greatest number of piles ever detached without causing a portion of the jetty to be swept over the bar.

Mrs. Margaret Slocum, of Union, Oregon, grand chief of honor of the Pythian Sisters of the state was in Astoria on Monday to pay an official visit on the local lodge. The exercises were held in the A. O. U. W. hall and at their conclusion a banquet was given in her honor by the members. While in the city Mrs. Slocum was the guest of her girlhood friend, Mrs. J. A. Gilbaugh.

There was a large crowd at the athletic club rooms last evening to witness the basket ball game between the girls' teams of the Astoria and Hood River high schools. While both teams played well, the Astoria girls exhibited much the greater skill and are readily with a score of 14 to 3. Basket ball has become quite a popular game locally and as it affords an opportunity for good, healthful exercise, its popularity is certain to increase.

A regular meeting of the chamber of commerce was held on Monday evening that was only slightly attended on account of so many other attractions existing in the city on that evening. On account of the absence of President Scholfield the meeting was presided over by Judge Bowlby. The two features of the evening were the reading of the report of Manager Whyte and an account of the efforts being made for a Clatsop county exhibit by C. S. Dow.

Three new circuit judges were provided for the state by the legislature and two of them are already in office, W. N. Gatens having taken is seat in Multnomah county and John S. Coke being appointed for Coos and Curry counties. The other new judge is provided for the fifth circuit, to relieve Judge McBride, and must come from Clatsop or Columbia counties. The fifth district bill did not carry the emergency clause, and therefore will not be in effect for 90 days. This is expected to throw the appointment into the hand's of Governor-to-be Ben[illegible]

A total of 60 indictments were returned by the grand jury this afternoon, but none of them are public property as yet.

There is now an excellent opportunity for the early development of the oil and gas resources of Clatsop county. A new company consisting of O. G. Palmberg, Henry Harrison and Alex Bremner has been organized and absorbed the good will and interests of the Clatsop Oil and Fuel Co., recently organized here for the same purpose. The new organization proposes to commence sinking holes as soon as it can determine the most desirable location to operate. Besides having acquired all the leases from the old company it has secured others and is now working upon additional leases. Sufficient machinery will be secured to sink two holes at once and if any success is attained in the first attempt additional wells will be located in various parts of the county.

The Bean bill passed by the legislature at its recent session, providing for the creation of ports by counties bordering on bays or streams navigable to the sea has a sort of double shuffle provision relative to the operation of tugboat service by such ports when they are organized. As the bill was introduced it provided that the ports would have the power to "establish, maintain and operate" tugboats. As the bill was enrolled it provided that the ports had the right to "abolish, maintain and operate" such a service. The mistake was made in the engrossing or enrolling committee and was not discovered until after the bill was ready to sign. The mistake is not important but by the strict construction of the bill, without reference to the journals and records of the house, the ports could maintain, operate and abolish but could not create tugboat service, without which the organization would be badly crippled. The mistake will undoubtedly be noted and may be corrected in the complication noted and of the session laws.

At this afternoon's session of the circuit court, William Nyberg, who was recently convicted on a charge of violating the state local option law by selling liquor in Astoria Precinct No Six, which is a "dry" precinct, was sentenced by Judge McBride to pay a fine of $150 and to serve ten days in the county jail. Prosecuting Attorney Tongue urged that a heavy sentence be imposed as, he said, the defendant had not only been found guilty of the charge but that he had committed perjury when on the witness stand He also said there were several more indictments on similar charges pending against the defendant and a conviction would be certain in each if the cases are brought to trial. Attorney Fulton, who represented the defendant, pleaded for the leniency of the court on account of the defendant being a cripple, having a family to support and being a poor man. In pronouncing sentence, Judge McBride said that every case must rest upon its own merits and that if this man was a strong able-bodied man, who had stood trial and been convicted, he would impose the extreme penalty allowed under the law which is a fine of $500 and 30 days in jail. "I am inclined," said the court, "to be lenient with a man who pleads guilty to a charge and thus saves the county expense, but when a man stands trial and is convicted, there is as a usual thing little to commend him to the mercy of the court. However, in this instance I take into consideration the crippled condition of the defendant, that he is a poor man, who has a family which depends upon him for support and whatever leniency I may show in this instance will be on that account and because there are other indictments hanging over him which can be enforced at any time. There has been a good deal of feeling in this locality I understand that the local option law can easily be evaded, but so long as it remains on the statute books it must be observed, and I do not want any one to think that any leniency I may show in this case can be taken as a criterion of what my judgment will be in any future cases. As I said before if this defendant was an able-bodied man I would impose the limit the law allows, but I feel that the ends of justice will be attained by a lighter penalty and the judgment of the court is that the defendant pay a fine of $150 and serve ten days in the county jail." The fine was immediately paid by friends of the defendant and at the request of the defendant's attorney, Nyberg was granted until tomorrow morning to begin serving his jail sentence.

The liberated men showed the great strain to which they were subjected and, as they crawled and were half dragged from the shaft, the scene was touching. FREIGHT RATES ARE REDUCED

San Francisco, Feb. 24 -A sweeping reduction in eastbound freight rates between this city and New York was announced by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company today. The reduction cuts about 25 per cent off the former rates. The westbound rates are not affected. The company has sent a large number of solicitors thru out the state, seeking business.

It is stated that the determination of local shippers to establish an independent line between this port and La Boca, Panama, connected with the Panama Railroad and the federal steamship line up the Atlantic Coast, led to the reduction.

The former eastbound rates ranged from 40 to 75 cents per 100 pounds, with 55 cents as a base. The new rate is 40 cents per 100 pounds on all commodities.

WASHED AWAY BY HIGH TIDES

Great Damage Done Along Washington Beach

Hoquiam, Wash., Feb. 24—A special from Moclips, a seashore resort near this city, states that as a result of the high tide about half a mile of the dike has been hammered to pieces and practically the entire north end of the town washed into the sea, together with cottages and contents. One strip of land [illegible] feet high, 200 feet wide and 1000 feet in length has been washed away. The bath houses are being undermined, and the mill, which gives employment to many men, [illegible] slowly being pounded to pieces as a result of a break in the dike at this point, which gives the surf free sweep.

The loss has already reached thousands of dollars.

As a part of the Indian reservation has been destroyed an appeal is to be made to the federal government for immediate financial help.

Moclips is situated on the Pacific ocean beach, about 75 miles up the coast from the mouth of the Columbia river. It is a popular Washington summer resort, the terminus of the Northern Pacific line out of Hoquiam. Many of the wealthier people of the state have built summer cottages there and it is these that have been reported as washed away by the unusually high tide of this morning.

Harry Linder, who has just returned from Moclips, says that the sawmill will shortly be torn from its foundations and swept into the sea. The water, he says, has reached the central part of the town and is undermining the foundations of the big summer hotel. A piledriver has been hurried to the scene to protect this hostelry. The Northern Pacific right of way from the end of the main spur to the mill is gone.

The homes of Messrs. Adjutant, Jackson and Milhoffer, which were swept into the ocean, have disappeared from sight. Although there were many narrow escapes, no fatalities are reported, occupants of the destroyed houses leaving there in the nick of time. The loss already ahs reached in the neighborhood of $20,000, with the work of destruction still in progress.

And its fresh, pure, tender and sweet!

His native lambs are indeed a relief
From Trust mutton old
That for lambkin is sold,

WITNESS GETS LARGE FEES

Three Thousand Dollars Allowed for Mileage

Juneau, Feb 24 After several days delay, due to inability to secure a jury, and after the issuance of several special venires, the trial of Ed Hasey, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, has commenced in the federal court.

Many of the witnesses have been brought from great distances by the government M. B. Morrissey, who last year was a witness for the government, this time was subpoenaed by the defense at Coldfoot, sixty-eight miles within the Arctic Circle, and had a most hazardous journey in order to reach Juneau by the date set.

From Coldfoot to Fort Gibson, a distance of about 700 miles, Morrissey, who is a boyish-looking young fellow apparently not out of his twenties, made the trip by dog team, with an Indian guide following the mail trail. They started with 7 dogs, and arrived at Fort Gibbons with four, and these four badly frozen. From Fort Gibson the route led to Fairbanks, thence to Valdez, and from Valdez to Juneau. Morrissey will be entitled to approximately $3,000 in mileage fees as a witness.

Speaking of the country, Mr. Morrissey said:

"Coldfoot is about sixty-five miles north of Bentler, the head of navigation, and thirty miles from Nolan creek, to which latter creek operations are principally confined. This is the first year in which machinery has been operated in this district.

"It is estimated that Johnson and James have taken out at least $100,000 so far this winter. The country is very hard of access, expensive to live in, and very spotted. There is but little work for wages, and then for but $6 a day and board."

The case, which grew out of the alleged rioting at Keystone canyon, nearly two years ago, is based upon one of four indictments returned against Hasey. He was tried on one of these indictments at the last term of court and found not guilty. The failure to convict was in large measure attributed to inefficient prosecution, and the government refused to drop the cases, though the testimony will be much the same, if Hasey is tried on all the indictments.

So familiar has the public become with the details of the shooting that it has been extremely hard to secure a jury. At the opening of the case Assistant District Attorney Barnhill announced that no citizen of Junaeu would be accepted on the jury, owing to the wide publicity given the case locally last year. Finally, however, the government was compelled to accept at least four residences of Juneau, having exhausted the available number of jurymen in several special venires.

HINDU LABORERS ON A STRIKE

Have Grievance Against their Chief

New Westminster, Feb 24—For the first time since their entry into Canada the Hindus have declared a strike. Two hundred walked out at the Fraser river mills yesterday. A delegation of about fifty spent all day interviewing police officers and lawyers on the situation Their grievance [illegible] that their leader, Udah Ram, who has an agreement with the mill owners to supply labor, and who is supposed to pay the men [illegible] a day, is in arrears to nearly all the workers, who are unable to collect their wages.

When questioned why they did not resort to their usual strong-arm methods of obtaining satisfaction, the Hindus explained that Udah Ram was a Brahmin, and because of this case distinction has to be treated with respect.

Udah Ram has wonderful power of control over the Hindus. He maintains that the men are in his debt.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE KERRY GOW"

Manager Hanlin makes the pleasing announcement that on next Sunday evening he will present Mr. Arthur Cunningham in the great Irish play "The Kerry Gow" Mr. Arthur Cunningham who has been so long associated with the great success of the old Tivoli Theatre in San Francisco has been selected by Joseph Murphy to succeed him in his famous play The Kerry Gow, probably if the whole field of aspirants in this class of dramatic ability should be thoroughly looked over, it would be found that Mr. Murphy has selected the most able man to present this popular play. Mr. Cunningham not only being endowed with a magnifience voice is a man of robust physic, a pleasing stage presence and an actor of unusual ability, these attributes all blending to complete a perfect example of the loyal Irish character which is depicted in this play.

"UNCLE TOMS CABIN"

Next Monday Stetson's Uncle Toms Cabin Company will be the attraction at the Astoria Theater. Of all the great American plays, the old historical play of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has the strongest hold on people. It is beyond question one of the best plays ever written hence the warm place it retains in the heart of people of every clime.

The old story of slavery days is well interpreted and is enjoyed by all. There are a number of excellent specialties introduced.

SPECIAL PERFORMANCE

Friday evening will be a big night at the Grand theatre when the special benefit preformance will be given by Manager Shortley to the members of the Astoria Athletic Club. The entire theatre will be given over to the club whose members will manage the affair and receive the benefit of all the admissions. Manager Shortley will of course operate the picture machines which insures a first class performance. But the feature of the evening will be the special artists to appear for the first time in illustrated song. Among those who will be on the program are Mrs. Harry Flavel, Mrs. C. H. Callender and Miss Irene Simington, each of which will sing one or more songs during the evening. Another feature will be a full orchestra of seven pieces. The boys have set the admission price at 15 cents or two admissions for 25c. The performance will surely be worth three times as much, but the low admission was made so that everybody in the city should attend.

Dickens' Mustache.

Among some stories told by W. P. Frith, the Royal academician, who is ninety years of age, is the following concerning Charles Dickens: Frith many years ago was commissioned to paint a portrait of the novelist. "There was a hitch about the first sitting," says the monagenarian. "Dickens had started growing a mustache, which was considered almost a crime in those days. The delay in the sittings continued, and one morning, when we expected to find Dickens had relented and had shaved off his mustache, to our dismay he had started growing more hair on his chin. Landseer called that morning, and he gave a great start when he saw Dickens' face. Dickens then took the bull by the horns. 'I say, old fellow, you don't seem to notice this,' he said, pointing to his mustache. 'Oh, yes, I do,' was the reply. 'It enables me to see less of you, and that's an advantage.' ".

ACTIVITY IN LUMBER TRADE

Good Season is Predicted by Grays Harbor Mill

Aberdeen, [illegible] 24—Edward Hulbert, who with Me[illegible] Sudden and Christensen, of [illegible] San Francisco shipping firm, has recently bought the United States mill, has returned from a trip to California and [illegible] optimistic over the outlook for lumber interests for the coming season.

Extensive improvements had been planned for the mill before beginning operations, but they have been indefinitely postponed in order to start the mill and be ready for the orders confidently expected by Mr. Hulbert.

Unusually heavy rains have prevailed in California, which Mr. Hulbert says, insures fine crops and abundant prosperity, which will [illegible] turn stimulate building. He prophesies that every mill in the harbor will be crowded with orders soon.

REPLENISHING FURNITURE

The Astoria Furniture Co. has recently established first class upholstering department to its well established business which has proven a great accomodaition to the local public. Furniture of real worth and artistic beauty such as was made in olden times and handed down from generation to generation has been replenished and made to look just as good as in its original form. At the present time this firm has on display in one of its large show windows a set of Colorial furniture that has been considered an heirloom by a pioneer family in Astoria. The work done illustrates how nicely the upholstering can be renewed, the furniture repolished and strengthened for practical use. There is no need to set any cherished pieces of furniture aside, now that this company is perpared to pactically rebuild it at such [illegible] reasonable cost coupled with such flattering results. It will pay you to call and make further inquiries

WILD CATTLE IN NEW ENGLAND

Farmers Trap Steers Roaming About Mountain

Having set a trap for wild steers on Weston mountain, in Dalton, Mass., Robert Colt and George Crozier captured three and brought them down the mountain to their farm.

A year ago last fall when a herd of young cattle was being rounded up after being out on the range all summer half a dozen or more escaped, and all efforts to capture them were unavailing. They eventually became as wild as the deer with which they traveled about the mountain all summer and fall.

Finally Colt and Crozier built an inclosure, in which they placed hay and corn. A drop gate was operated by a wire a quarter of a mile away. Colt and Crozier ascended the mountain, sprung the trap and caught three steers. They hope to capture others soon.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of your advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

A BRAVE SINNER.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Raymond Nolan was eighteen when he entered the service of a small bank. He was a bright fellow, not only ready to do his own work, but that of any one else. He had been taught the value of money and that the surest way to start a fortune was by saving. Consequently each week when he drew his salary he put aside a certain amount for this purpose.

Raymond was a great favorite with Mr. Porter, owner of the bank. Seeing that the youngster was in every way fitted for promotion, he promoted him as rapidly as vacancies occurred. At each raise of salary Raymond increased the proportionate amount that he put aside for his "nest egg." When that nest egg reached $500 he looked about for some method of investment. He bought a bond paying 4 per cent interest. From this time his capital increased a little more rapidly. His attention being called to certain shares that were paying double the interest he received on his bond, he changed his investment. The shares not only paid him the interest, but rose in value. He sold them and had $1,000 of his own.

As year after year passed Nolan found himself nearer to the amount he had fixed upon for legitimate investment. Sometimes he would sink away from it under a depression of securities, but usually upon a reaction he would find himself further ahead than before. At one of these depressions he concluded to increase his investment, accepting a loan from his broker for the purpose—in other words, buy on a margin. Stocks were considered very cheap and bound to have a good rise. As Nolan had his affairs arranged a rise of five points would give him his $10,000.

But, contrary to expectations, stocks continued to depreciate, sinking instead of rising five points. Then they rested awhile, and another period of liquidation carried them down ten points further. On down they went till Nolan found that he had lost his capital. His brokers called on him for "margin" and told him that if he did not hand it in at once they would sell him out. Stocks were very low, and when the market turned they would likely boom.

This was a turning point in Nolan's career. He borrowed $1,000 from the bank without reporting the loan. Stocks went down, and he borrowed more money.

One morning ten years after Nolan had entered Mr. Porter's service he went into that gentleman's private office and said to him:

"Mr. Porter, some time ago at a sudden collapse of the stock market I lost my savings of years. I believed that there would soon be a rise that would restore all I had lost and give me much more. I borrowed money from the bank to use for margin. Stocks have been still going down, and I have lost $25,000 of your money."

The president told him that the shortage had been discovered; that the bank had made other losses which they might have weathered without this one. As it was, a failure was unavoidable.

"Mr. Porter," said the young man, "call a policeman and turn me in for conviction. There will be no trial. I shall plead guilty."

"No," replied the president. "I shall not prosecute you."

"Then I will surrender myself."

The president endeavored to persuade the young man to go out into the world unsmirched and begin again. But, no. He had sinned beyond his own forgiveness, and his life had lost its charm. Thereafter he would live under the blight in any form fate assigned him. He left the president, gave himself up to the police under his own confession and within a week was in state prison beginning a term of ten years.

Nolan, receiving the shortened time for good behavior, was discharged in about seven years. The banker had failed and had died, leaving a child, a boy, without mother or support of any kind. As soon as the prisoner regained his liberty he sought out this child, whom he found selling papers. Nolan went to a merchant whom he had known before his embezzlement and asked for a position. The only job the merchant would give him was that of porter. He accepted it, took the boy to live with him, sent him to school and otherwise provided for his maintenance.

One habit acquired by Nolan has remained a fixture. He saves money; saves it not for himself, for he is living a life without either a present or a future. He is saving it for the boy whose father he wronged. He has given that boy a child's savings bank, and the boy, too, is saving. And there is a lesson in finance the young capitalist receives at intervals impressively. Is it not to speculate? No. It is the one great lesson that every boy should learn—never use a cent of a trust fund.

Nolan is no longer a porter. He is in a business of his own. He manages it himself, but through others. He takes the risks usual to any man who handles money, but he pays cash and will not permit other people's money to remain in his possession overnight. It is not that he fears temptation, but the sensation would be disagreeable to him. He is ready to turn over to his self imposed ward all he took from that ward's father as soon as the boy is equipped to receive it.

In one respect he has not been courageous. He has never told the boy of his sin.

Aunt Sally's Beehives.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

When Aunt Sally Bently came to the church there were no cushions in the pews. She offered to stand half the expense of providing them. Deacon Hastings was consulted. He had contributed half the lumber to build the church and the two stoves that heated it, and he was the boss. He said he wanted no changes. Aunt Sally said she'd get even.

Just what Aunt Sally meant by her half threat soon developed. She came to church lugging a big feather pillow under her arm and the pillow was used in her pew for a cushion. She had come in late, and the sight of her walking up the aisle with the pillow was a novelty. It was more; it was scandalous—that is, Deacon Hastings so considered it, and he opened his batteries as soon as the benediction was pronounced. Never in all his life had he heard of such a thing, and he hoped for the good of the cause and the morals of society the pillow would be left at home thereafter.

"Look a-here, deacon," answered Aunt Sally, "I was watching you all through the sermon, and you was hitching around on the hard seat like a boy on tacks. You may continue to hitch if you want to, but I shan't. This pillar will come with me every Sunday until we have pew cushions. I don't believe the Lord is going to punish any one for wanting to be comfortable in church."

"But our forefathers stood up to worship," argued the deacon.

"Yes, I know, and I guess they got more religion in their legs than in their souls. If you don't want me to come to meeting you can say so, but if I come the pillar comes along."

The deacon said it was a rank case of heresy, and he would have put her out if he could have secured any support. All others advised him to let the matter go, and for three months Aunt Sally and her pillow were features of the morning service. But she wasn't satisfied with her victory. Summer was coming on, and the flies were coming about, and she boldly broached the subject of protecting the church with screen doors and windows.

"And make a complete surrender to Satan!" shouted the good old deacon as he grew red in the face.

"Don't you try to keep flies out of your house?" she asked.

"But my house is not a church. If the Lord wills it that flies shall enter this sanctuary it is not for us to keep them out."

"I saw you batting at one that wanted to light on your nose last Sunday."

"Then I shall ask forgiveness for it. Sister Bently, you have almost disorganized this church with your feather pillows and other ideas, and you must go no further. We were years in driving Satan and his temptations out, and now they must stay out."

"I'll pay half on the screens," she persisted.

"You would probably pay half to have a fiddle introduced here to help out the singing, but that will never be. If I had to open a screen door to get into this church I never could feel right in my conscience thereafter."

Aunt Sally went home to do some thinking. She hadn't far to go, and the barn on her place was still nearer. The flies had really become a nuisance, and, though fans were permitted, the deacon had a scowl for those who waved them too vigorously. And, besides, it is a trick to fan the back of one's neck and keep a bluebottle fly at a distance. She felt that she must adopt some heroic measure to call attention to the nuisance, and after three or four days the idea came to her. She had half an acre of ground around her house, and she decided that a couple of hives of bees would give the place a more homelike look. She therefore engaged a man with a team to go forth among the farmers and make a purchase.

Just whether the good woman timed the man to get back on a Saturday [illegible] will never be known, but it did come out that she advised him to leave his wagon and the hives in the alley near the church over Sunday. And, suspiciously enough, some folks thought she did [illegible] attend church on Sunday. It ra[illegible] Saturday, and her rheumatism was worse.

Sunday morning brought hot weather. There was the usual congregation, and doors and windows stood open, and the flies frolicked. By no possibility could Aunt Sally have known that a certain boy would come loafing along that street at 11 o'clock on his way to the river. Neither could she [illegible] told that he would halt on see[illegible] the hives and the bees flying around and after two or three minutes pick up three or four rocks and send them against the hives with a smash. Of course the bees resented it. They weren't taking any sass off a tow headed boy. The trouble how[illegible] boy put on rapid [illegible] away. In hunting [illegible] for his trail the bees found the open doors and windows of the church, and they reasoned that one kind of meat was as good as another for them, and they entered. Three minutes [illegible] the congregation was going out. They went out the handiest way and without decorum. There were sh[illegible] and shrieks and wails, and the two doctors in the village had their hands full for the next three days.

Somehow or other Satan didn't [illegible] into possession. It didn't two [illegible] when the building was [illegible] six weeks later when [illegible] put in a furnace and parlor organ and painted the building in time.

MORE SPEED FOR ICE YACHTS

Automatic Main Sheet Does Away with Extra Man

With a contrivance that will revolutionize ice yachting and undoubtedly break all present records Commodore William R. Joline of the South Shrewsbury Boat and Yacht club of Atlantic Highlands, N. J., has invented an automatic main sheet which has proved a startling success.

It saves the presence of one man's weight on the frailest craft which has made the fastest time ever recorded for a test of speed. For three years Commodore Joline has been working on his plan to eliminate the sheet man on the swiftly skimming ice boats, and his labor has just been crowned with success. It is expected that with the weight reduced 160 pounds or more all past records for flight over the ice will be broken.

South's Largest Cottonwood Log.

The largest cottonwood log ever cut in the south comes from Lula, Miss. The log is seven feet in diameter and twelve feet long and will cut 4,800 feet of lumber. The log is so big that it will have to be split with dynamite as no mill in Memphis has the capacity to cut it. Cottonwood trees are said to grow more rapidly than any other kind of trees in the United States. Their average growth is about one-quarter inch a year. Therefore the tree from which this log was cut is believed to be 336 years old.

There is now not only a chance but an absolute certainty that a practical test is to be made to ascertain whether or not oil and gas are to be found in this locality in quantities sufficient for commercial use. The men who are to take hold of this enterprise are practical men with plenty of capital to carry on their work and while the project is more or less of a gamble there is good reason to believe that it will be successful. That there are gas and coal in this district is certain and where those two are found in any quantities there is almost a certainty of being oil.

POLITICAL REFUGEES.

The repeated failure of the Russian government to extradite from the United States refugees whom the people of this country regard as political offenders, but who are alleged by the Russian authorities to be common criminals is generally approved. Considering the two recent cases of Jan Pouren and Christian Rudowitz, and especially that of the latter, there are people who believe that the allegations of the Russian government are entitled to credence, and that these men should have returned as accused homicides to be dealt with according to the Russian law, or, better, the Russian custom. Such people either do not think carefully upon the matter or they are incontinently opposed to and prejudiced against those accused of violence, even though in a political sense the accused have been immersed in an atmosphere of cruelty and bloodshed.

Consistently throughout its history the United States has refused to surrender fugitives from foreign nations whose offense was of a political character. And consistently, too, it has been the policy to give such men the benefit of the doubt where doubt existed. Doubt did exist in the case of these two Russians, and there was no official disposition toward innovation that would certainly have met with public disapproval.

In the Rudowitz case there was practical admission of implication in homicide, and the plea was that the victims were treated by the revolutionist as spies. This was politics—Russian politics, as taught in bitter and bloody experience, by the Russian authorities. It is not the American way of correcting abuse or of resisting oppressive conditions, but it might well be the American way if environment long sustained here were what it has been and is in Russia. The government commits murder in the enforcement of its oppressive mandates, and the subject commits murder to avoid them. It is simply the Muscovite political system with which we legitimately have nothing to do.

When Niagara falls are frozen and cattle are killed by the cold in Kansas, when blizzards stop trains in Minnesota and a tornado blows down churches in Mississippi, then surely it would be ingratitude for us to complain of a little rain. Take it all in all, the present winter in this section has not had as many warm, sunshine days as the last two or three winters. Uncle Sam's hired hands in the weather department have been crabbed the country over. They tried to drown several valleys in California. They sent a chill wind down on the northwest that froze some of our exposed water pipes and made us uncomfortable three or four days. They turned blizzards and blasts loose on the central west and sent twisters a-going in the south and southwest. What ails the weather makers is beyond the powers of ordinary persons to understand. For that matter, we don't always know why it is that we are cross and peevish. We just feel that way and family, neighbors and friends have to look out. The weather makers have been dyspeptic this winter. We have no reason for special complaint in this part of the country. If the weather makers have been peevish here at times, they have been outrageously so in the central west, the east and the south.

Judge Taft's trip outside of United States territory makes pertinent a discussion of methods for providing for the filling of the presidential chair in case of the death, resignation or inability of a president elect. The constitution provides for the succession to fill a vacancy created by death or other cause, but there can be no vacancy until the events of March 4 place the new president legally in office.

It is the opinion of experts that there is no authority whatsoever conferred by the constitution for filling the presidential chair in the case of the death or other inability of a president elect between the confirmation of his election by the electoral college and March 4. The term of the outgoing president expires and creates a vacancy, but the incoming vice president cannot fill it because he can become president only in case of vacancy created after the inauguration of his colleague. In other words, disability of the president elect between Jan. 11 and March 4 this time must result in an exigency for which there is no direct constitutional remedy.

Jeff Davis' cry for "a Caesar in the White House" recalls Lincoln's retort to a similar suggestion when "confusion worse confounded" seemed to threaten the nation. "I'll attend to the Caesar business myself," said he, and all the world knows how he did it.

Government problems are always about the same, and as we can't have a man to show us what Lincoln would do now it might be well to study up on what Lincoln did then.

Admiral Sperry paid $180,000 to get the fleet through the Suez canal—apparently the old trick of half a dollar to get in and your entire roll to get out.

Now that the ground hog promises a prolonged and severe winter we may be thankful that this ground hog business is a rank superstition.

Uncle Sam is hoarding $500,000,000 which nobody cares to see put in circulation, for it is that emergency currency.

John Burroughs' "no happy millionaires" thesis was sprung just in time. After March 4 it may be the other way.

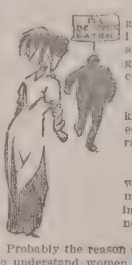
PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The sorrows of others are lightweights compared to our own. That's why we bear other people's so jauntily.



The man who goes about pitying himself should hire a pugilist to give him cause.

A fair sprinkling of contented people makes a rain of harmony.

Eating soup with a fork is a most exasperating way of doing nothing.

Probably the reason men find it hard to understand women is because they cannot speak the language.

The freer a man is with his money the more open to suspicion he is that he came by it free.

There are people who mind their own business and don't seem to mind it at all.

There are some men so queer that they would rather be married than happy and contended.

BIG FRESHET IN STREAMS

Some of Those in Nehalem Cannot be Forded

Jewell, Oregon, Feb. 22, 1909.

Editor Budget:—Casey & Ryan who came from town Tuesday to look after some horses they had wintering out here, returned to town Friday.

Ed. Jaimeson accompanied by Mrs. Jas Jamieson went to town Monday.

Ralph and Levi Wooden, assisted by Harry Reevel, were busy on the road this week, making repairs, and putting in new stringers under the bridge in front of Jas Jamieson's place. They completed their labors on the bridge Sunday.

Mr. Peterson, who has a claim near Jewell, started for town during the storm Tuesday on horseback, but owing to the swollen condition of the streams was unable to ford Hamilton Creek, and had to return and go out via Mist and Clatskanie. He narrorwly escaped being crushed by a tree which fell across the road immediately in his rear. McCoy and Foster went to town Saturday with a load of butter. Mr.. McCoy recently purchased the Wm. Deed's place on Banicke Creek, and expects to move his family out from town as soon as the weather permits.

Mrs. Spencer went to town Monday on her way to visit with her daughter at Everette, Wash. she expects to remain away indefinately.

GULF STREAM IS DAMAGED

Compelled to Return to Port Stanley for Repairs

Information has reached here that when the British bark Gulf Stream was putting out of Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, December 6, to continue the voyage to Astoria she ran afoul of the anchor and tore a hole in her bow below the water line. It was necessary for her to remain for repairs. A light breeze was stirring at the time she got into trouble, according to the advices. Early in November the Gulf Stream put into Port Stanley in a disabled condition. In a severe storm she was stripped of most of her rigging and otherwise damaged. With a cargo of cement she sailed from Antwerp for Astoria July 18. Had she met with no mishaps the craft would have reached here more than two mouths ago. It is supposed that she has left the Falkland Islands before this, and that she may be putting in an appearance at the mouth of the Columbia by the latter part of next month. She is the only windjammer coming from Europe that is anything like due. The cargo of the Gulf Stream is consigned to W. P. Fuller & Co.

ORGAN RECITAL BIG SUCCESS

Was well Attended and Highly Appreciated

The pipe organ recital and sacred concert given at Grace church Tuesday evening by Mrs. Brenham Van Dusen under the auspices of the St. Agnes guild was very well attened in spite of the wet and disagreable weather. Mrs. Van Dusen was assisted by Mrs. Frank Spittle, contralto: Miss Irene Simington and Miss Bess Reed sopranos and Mrs. John T. Allen, violinist. Admission and seats were free at the concert, but a free will offering was taken for the benefit of the church improvements and the same amounted to $33.25. Many of the church going people have an opportunity to hear the pipe organ every Sunday and appreciate the lovely music rendered by their organist Mrs. Van Dusen, but to hear this splendid instrument on a special occasion of this kind gives the music loving people an opportunity to see what excellent talent Astoria contains. Mrs. Van Dusen's control and execution was most ably demonstrated last evening in her many difficult pieces rendered and her entire selections were all greatly appreciated. Mrs. Frank Spittle's pleasing contralto voice was heard last evening to very good advantage and her two songs were well liked.

Miss Irene Simington who possesses a charming mezzo-soprano always leaves a splendid impression with her audience and last night, won praises for her delightful singing. Miss Bess Reed whose many friends love her sweet soprano voice, as usual did herself credit, and her beautiful song "Face to Face" reached every one present. Mrs. John T. Allen's violin was very true in tone and all her numbers were exceptionally well rendered. Mrs. Allen accompanied in several of the vocal numbers.

STILL DEMOCRAT, SAYS DICKINSON

Did Not Vote for Taft Last Election

Chicago, Feb. 24—Jacob M. Dickison, Democrat and Confederate veteran, today received the congratulations of scores of his Chicago friends, who regard him as practically certain to become Secretary of War in President W. H. Taft's Cabinet.

"But I have not admitted that I am to enter the Cabinet," protested Judge Dickinson, when his friends called him up. When they insisted on proffering congratulations, however, he received them with smiles.

"Can you say anything about your visit to Mr. Taft?" he said.

"I can't say anything" he said. "I can neither deny nor affirm reports."

"Are you a Democrat?'

"I am," he replied, "and I did not vote for Mr. Taft last fall. I did not vote at all."

NEILSON CASE IS DECIDED

Oregon Loses in Action Regarding Concurrent Jurisdiction

The United States supreme court handed down a decision Tuesday in the case against Chris Neilson charged with operating a purse seine in the waters of the Columbia river in violation of the laws of Oregon. The decision was in favor of the defendant and thus disposes of the contention of the state of Oregon that it can enforce its laws over the entire river. Neilson, was a resident of Washington and was operating a seine under a license from that state, while the laws of Oregon prohibited the use of purse seines. The one question at issue was the definition of what concurrent jurisdiction means. The court in its decision says that concurrent jurisdiction means that where both states have passed the same or similar laws in relation to civil or criminal matters, then either state may enforce its laws over its boundaries where the river forms the common boundary; that until each state has passed the same or similar laws, neither state can enforce its laws outside of its own territorial limits.

LOG CRUSHES OLD PIONEER

F. F. Lane Killed by Accident At Lummi

Bellingham, Feb. 24—Frederick F. Lane, one of the oldest pioneers of Whatcom county, and the second superintendent of schools for the territory now embraced in Whatcom and Skagit counties, was instantly killed at his home at Beach, Lummi island, yesterday, within sight of the cabin that had been his home for half a century.

Lane, who was 80 years old, was clearing up his backyard when in some way a heavy log rolled upon him, crushing out his life. The old man apparently had made a mighty effort to stop the log as he saw it coming towards him, but his wasted strength was unavailing and the heavy timber pinned him to the earth. When the body was removed it was cold in death.

F. F. Lane came to Bellingham Bay in 1856. It was the formative era for the new county and as he was a graduate of a Massachusetts college it fell to his lot to aid in the establishment of a system of county affairs, especially in the line of public schools. Keen of mind, and a school teacher of natural bent, he was elected county superintendent of schools of Whatcom county. He often said that the emoluments of the office were indeed scant, for his per diem was so small that it did not pay for the shoe leather he wore out during his visits to the posts where schools were held. On one trip below La Connner he hired an Indian to paddle him down in a canoe. The expense of the trip was $30 and the fees he received from the county amounted to $5. He had to pay the deficit from his own pocket.

Lane came from Massachusetts, crossing the plains as a member of a small caravan of homeseekers. Nearly eight months were consumed in making the trip. He sought gold a few years in California, but was one of the many who failed. He said that he could find no place that suited him in California or Oregon and finally he packed his grip and hied himself to this port.

ASTORIANS OPEN NEW LAND TRACT

A recent purchase was made in Portland by a number of Astorians of a large tract of land located near Irvington on the east side that will soon be placed upon the market. T. R. Davies of Astoria has been appointed local agent of the property and in a few days will make an extended announcement of the merits of the property as an investment. Alameda Park is the name of the new addition and it is said to embrace the most desirable location as a resident section on the east side. The company has just platted the land which includes some handsome str[illegible] and boulevards as well as park [illegible]. The property is within easy access of the business center of Portland and already enjoys a good street car service, electric lights, telephone, water system and other modern conveniences

We have nothing but choice steer beef, prime mutton, pork and veal. We do not buy the refuse of old cows, bulls and stags of the Portland Stockyards that will not stand inspection and ship them to Astoria with a substitution of burlap for fat. Of course, 75 out of 100 buyers don't know the difference when such meat is cut up and laid out on the counters. Ask your doctor if that kind of meat is wholesome. There is just as great a difference in the quality of meats as dry goods, dress goods, or anything you wear; but you should be more particular what you eat. Real eggs are worth 20 cents per dozen wholeasle and will retail at 5 cents higher. Potatoes will reach the two dollar mark, within a month, per hundred pounds or over before the new crop is dug.

Representatives of the lumber manufacturers of all parts of the United States have been busy in Washington for the past two weeks, trying quietly to influence sentiment in favor of the retention of the duty on lumber. In reality, these lumbermen constitute a loby, but they are working along legitimate lines, interviewing congressmen individually and collectively in the hope of convincing them that the lumber duty is not unjust and should be retained.

Collections of taxes at the sheriff's office are increasing as the time for alloiwng the three per cent rebate draws to a close. This morning one payment of over $6000 was made. It is learned that some of the big timber syndicates are contemplating contesting the tax levied for road improvement purposes by road district No 15. A letter has been received from attorneys representing the timbermen asking permission to pay all the tax, except this road district levy, but Sheriff Pomeroy has replied that he can accept only the whole tax or one-half of it as is allowed by law. However, he has referred the matter to the district attorney for an opinion. It is expected the timbermen if they decide to contest this special tax will pay their entire tax under protest and fight the matter in the courts afterwards.

Governor Chamberlain yesterday vetoed eight bills passed by the legislature at its recent session. Four of these were to increase salaries of county officers during their term of office, while the others were defining vagrancy, fixing time for registration of voters, exempting public bonds from taxation and requiring physical examination before marriage. Regarding the latter measure the governor says: "In my opinion the bill is an insult to our citizenship and to the young men of the state of Oregon. There may be an occasional case, where such an examination would be justifiable, but to require it in every case and to compel modest, upright, Christian men with respectable parentage and decent training to undergo such an examination would result in greater harm than good."

HILL RETARDS INVESTIGATION

Denies Prosecution Right to Examine Record

Spokane, Feb. 25—By a flat refusal of the request of Prosecuting Attorney Fred Pugh for access to important papers, Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern, has seriously crippled the investigation of the supreme court scandal in this state. These papers are part of the company's records of letters and telegrams in the damage suit of James Sparrow against the Great Northern. They were to be presented to the Spokane county grand jury to uphold the state's charge that M. J. Gordon, formerly counsel for the Great Northern "had committed larceny by embezzlement by converting to his own use large sums of money entrusted to him by the company." In spite of the refusal the jury will assemble here in March to probe Gordons case so far as possible. It will take up the attorney's alleged shortage and also charge that he was permitted by Justice Milo Root of the statesu preme court, to write that court's decision in an important damage suit and that as the railways counsel he extended undue favors to the judge, who has resigned from the court since the bar association began its investigation.

JUDGESHIP FOR SENATOR FULTON

Washington, Feb. 25—It is reported in senatorial circles today that if congress passes the pending bill creating an additional judge in Oregon, Senator Fulton will be given that appointment.

If the amendment is accepted, in view of Fulton's close relations with President Taft, there is no doubt he can have the judgeship if he will accept it.

If the judgeship bill fails, but the senate passes the bill authorizing the appointment of two additional interstate commerce commissioners, it is indicated that Fulton can have one of these positions, the other to go to Representative Hepburn.

Senator Fulton intends to make Portland his home. He today made an announcement to this effect. Soon after the adjournment of congress he will go to Astoria to close up his affairs and then move his residence and office to Portland.

WIRELESS TO DETECT CRUISER

Fishing Boats in North Protected Against Capture

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 26—Official recommendations have been forwarded to Ottawa asking the Dominion government for a better service for the protection of the fisheries of Northern British Columbia waters. It is understood that the construction of at least three vessels, capable of steaming from eighteen to twenty knots per hour and costing $160,000 each, is recommended.

Small craft are favored in the recommendations to the government because of their ability to enter the small bays and harbors where, it is alleged, the Amercian vessels resort to clean and put away their fish. The steamers are specially designed, according to the plans, to be able to successfully race against any craft now sailing out of Puget sound for the halibut banks.

On a recent trip North, officers of the government cruiser Kestrel discovered that the steamer Chicago, whose home port is Seattle, had installed wireless apparatus. Adoption of this device is ascribed to a desire to keep more accurately informed respecting the movements of the Kestrel and two other small boats now engaged in the patrol service for the Canadian government.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE KERRY GOW"

Manager Hanlin makes the pleasing announcement that on next Sunday evening he will present Mr. Arthur Cunningham in the great Irish play "The Kerry Gow" Mr. Arthur Cunningham who has been so long associated with the great success of the old Tivoli Theatre in San Francisco has been selected by Joseph Murphy to succeed him in his famous play The Kerry Gow, probably if the whole field of aspirants in this class of dramatic ability should be thoroughly looked over, it would be found that Mr. Murphy has selected the most able man to present this popular play. Mr. Cunningham not only being endowed with a magnifience voice is a man of robust physic, a pleasing stage presence and an actor of unusual ability, these attributes all blending to complete a perfect example of the loyal Irish character which is depicted in this play.

"UNCLE TOMS CABIN"

Next Monday Stetson's Uncle Toms Cabin Company will be the attraction at the Astoria Theater. Of all the great American plays, the old historical play of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has the strongest hold on people. It is beyond question one of the best plays ever written hence the warm place it retains in the heart of people of every clime.

The old story of slavery days is well interpreted and is enjoyed by all. There are a number of excellent specialties introduced.

The Three Primary Colors.

Avoiding technical terms, all colors are composed of the union of three simple colors—viz. red, blue and yellow. Every tint in the rainbow may be made from the combination of these colors. White is composed of a blending of all the colors.

AMENDMENT IS NOT FAVORED

Measure Provides for Additional Judge in Oregon

Washington, Feb [illegible] The house judiciary committee is unwilling to adopt Senator Fulton's amendment to the judicial bill passed by the senate yesterday authorizing the appointment of an additional judge in Oregon, and when the bill comes back from the senate it will ask that the senate amendment be disagreed to, and the bill sent back to the senate for repassage without the Oregon clause. The Oregon delegation hopes to force the house to agree to the Fulton amendments.

PREPARING FOR WHALER CRUISE

Bark Gayhead Getting Ready for Season

San Francisco. Feb; 25—The bark Gayhead is outfitting for a sperm waling cruise in the South seas and along the coast of Japan, and is expected to get away soon. The Gayhead and the bark John and Winthrop, which left several months ago, are the only whalers dispatched from San Francisco this season.

Whether it means the doom of the steam whaler or not, the dozen or so vessels that have been sent into the Arctic yearly from this port will not be fitted out this season. They are all lying up in Oakland creek, and many say it is doubtful if they will ever go north again to battle with the floe pack and the old bull whale.

Although the steam whalers had an average run last season, the market was so flooded with bone that the profit, if any, was so small as to make future prospects look dull. The whaling ventures into the Actic are said not to be as profitably now as in years gone by. It costs about $20,000 to fit a vessel for the voyage. Assuming the ship escapes the countless perils that the dark Arctic night holds forth, and takes the average catch, the revenue would be about $30,000.

According to agents,' it takes about $10,000, to settle a cruise, and to go to sea again the profit is eaten up. Another circumstance which may account for the tie-up of the steam whalers is that the mammals have been retreating farther north, and only a good piece of luck enables the vessels to chase them to their last stand and get away from the ice pack again.

"Billy Possum" Post Card Latest Fad

The "Billy Possum" idea will not be allowed to rest with the manufacture of a toy in the shape of the Taft-Georgia table delicacy. A characteristic picture of "Billy" will be put on the market in the shape of post cards, blotters and other office supplies. The picture shows "Billy" in the attitude of enjoying a good digestion, probably the aftermath of a meal on a nice fat hen. A smile of eminent satisfaction illumines his demure face, and a single look at him is enough to put an entire office force in good humor for the entire day.

HORSE AND MULE VALUES GROWING

Beasts of Burden are More Than Holding Their Own

Washington, Feb 25 Notwithstanding the increased use of the automobile for both pleasure and business purposes in the state of Washington, the horse is holding his own and the mule is doing even more. There are at present 320,000 horses in the state, according to a report just issued by the agricultural department, which is about 8 per cent. in excess of the number of their kind who had residence in Washington last year. The report places their average value at $101 per head, or $4 more per head than in January, 1908. The total valuation of the horses is placed at $[illegible]20,000.

There are 5,000 mules in Washington. Their ranks have increased 20 per cent. since the enumeration of 1908. In Oregon there are 8,000 mules, but number seems to lower the per cent. valuation, for the Washington beast is quoted at $108 per head, as against $103, the valuation placed upon the heads of the Oregon mules.

The entire mule population of Washington is valued at $540,000.

There were 799,000 sheep raised in the state during 1908. This is a decrease of 3 per cent. from the number raised in 1907. They are valued at $3.40 per head, or 33 cents less than a year ago. The total valuation of the sheep of the state is placed at $2,717,000.

There were 197,000 swine in the state on January 1, an increase of [illegible] per cent. over the number of the previous year. Their valuation per head is averaged at $7.50, or 25 cents less than formerly. The total valuation is placed at $1,478,000.

The cows of the state increased 6 per cent. in number during the last year. They now number 195,000, with a total valuation of $7,800,000. The average value per head is placed at $40, or $3 more than on January 1, 1908.

A remonstrance was filed in the city auditor's office this morning by Jospeh Schamberger, protesting against the proposed improvement of Eighteenth street, between Exchange and Grand. The remonstrance says the signer considers the improvement a useless expenditure of money as the street is on sliding ground and he thinks a temporary repair of the street should be made to last until after the slide is stopped. The remonstrance will be submitted to the council at its next meeting.

COMBINATION IN TOBACCO TRADE

Report Made Today by Commissioner of Corporations

Washington, Feb. 25—Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, today made public sub-divisions two and three of part one of his report on the tobacco industry. They deal with the present organization of the tobacco combination, so-called, its degree of control in that industry, and the development of that control.

These divisions of the report, resulting from a thorough investigation into the business operations of the tobacco combination, contain an elaborate discussion of the methods by which the manufacture of tobacco, except cigars, has come under the control a of comparatively few capitalist.

Commissioner Smith says:

"In the tobacco combination are The American Tobacco Company and its three great subsidiary combinations, The American Snuff Company, The American Cigar Company, and the British-American Company, besides 82 other subsidiary concerns doing business in the United States, Porto Rico and Cuba. The combination represents a total net capitalization of over $316,000,000. A very small group of ten stock holders controls 60 per cent of the outstanding voting stock of The American Tobacco company, through which company the entire combination is controlled."

LEGISLATION ON JAPANESE

Being Considered by the Legislature at Victoria

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 25—"In a debate on the second reading of the bill to amend the coal mines act in the local legislature last night, Parker Williams Socialist urged an amendment prohibiting the granting of leases to Japanese. J. Hawthornthwaite, Socialist said the agressive Japanese were invading every industry in the province. They constituted two-thirds of the employes in sawmills and openly boasted they had captured the fishing industry, which they mean to hold. Legislation was necessary to prevent these Orientals from acquiring the remaining unlocated coal measures in the province. The bill passed its second reading.

TUG COMPANY LIBELS MELROSE

Claimed Tug Tyee Saved Schooner From Destruction

Port Townsend, Feb. 25—To adjust a claim of $5,000 by the Puget Sound Tugboat Company against the Coast Shipping Company, of San Francisco, owners of the American schooner Melrose, a libel against the vessel was served tonight by a federal marshal on a warrant issued by the United States court in Seattle. The vessel is loaded and ready for sea with cargo of Everett lumber for Guaymas.

The claim is for alleged services rendered the schooner by the tugboat company's towboat Tyee, and is fixed at $5,000. The demands for payment represent to Capt. McCarron that in picking up the Melrose on a lee shore near Victoria, late in January, the vessel was saved from going arground, and payment proportionate with salvage is due. Rothschild & Co., local agents for the owners of the Melrose, have engaged A. R. Coleman to contest the claim. The agents, with counsel and Capt. McCarron, went to Seattle by special steamer to arrange for releasing the vessel by furnishing bond.

Capt. McCarron states that when taken in tow by the Tyee, his command was in no danger, although at anchor close to the rocks of Vancouver island, near Victoria. He further asserts that the tow was started against his orders, and at a time when he was ashore. It is further contended that a contract between the owners and the tugboat company demands all service that did not endanger the safety of the tug.

The

Way
To Advertise
Astoria?

✻ ✻ ✻ ✻ ✻ ✻

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or in a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

Two Statesmen Named Perkins Who Disagree With Mr. Roosevelt, the Senator From California and the New York Congressman. . .

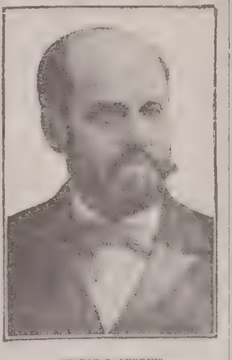
The Leaders of Opposite Factions In Society, Suffragette and Anti-suffragette, Mrs. Clarence Mackay and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish.

J. B. PERKINS.

THERE are two statesmen named Perkins who have recently been in controversy with President Roosevelt, one from California, the other from New York state. It is often noted that Mr. Roosevelt sometimes compliments people who oppose him in his policies or views. He does not take it as a ground for unfriendliness that a man criticises his public actions. This was illustrated recently in the case of Representative James Breck Perkins of Rochester. Mr. Perkins was the author of the resolution censuring the president for the reference in his message to secret service matters. Mr. Perkins, though in general an admirer and supporter of the chief executive of the nation, took exception to what he considered an attack by the president on the privileges and dignity of the house. Not long afterward he was seen to enter the White House and confer with its chief occupant.

"I did not suppose," said he afterward, "that such a meeting was of sufficient importance to justify extensive publicity. However, the interview was an agreeable one. I have a high regard for the president, and I don't believe he thinks ill of me. I wished to see him on some matters connected with the military bill. Mr. Cannon did me the honor of selecting me as chairman of the house committee of the whole on the military bill, which occupied me nearly a week. The president was interested in some matters that were being considered in that bill."

Senator George C. Perkins of California, who was so severely criticised by President Roosevelt for his attitude on proposed anti-Japanese legislation, was originally appointed to his present post by the governor of the state to succeed the late Leland Stanford. That was in 1893. The people of the state have kept him continuously in the senate since. His life reads almost like a romance. He was born in Kennebunkport, Me., Aug. 23, 1839, and when twelve years old concealed himself aboard a vessel called the Golden Eagle, bound for New Orleans. His presence was not discovered until the vessel was at sea, and he then became one of the crew. For the next four years the future senator followed a sailor's life, and, landing then in San Francisco, he again became a landsman, working in various places as miner and also teamster. Going to Oroville, he entered a store as porter, then became a clerk and finally rose to the position of part proprietor. His business flourished and in time became worth half a million a year. Meanwhile Mr. Perkins was interested in many outside ventures, including mining, lumbering and sheep and cattle ranches. With others he established the Bank of Butte and encountered the trials that afflicted so many business men in the years following the war. In 18[illegible] he settled in San Francisco, becoming a member of a small firm that has since grown to be the Pacific Coast Steamship company, possessing a fleet of steamers which ply from Alaska to Mexico.



GEORGE C. PERKINS.

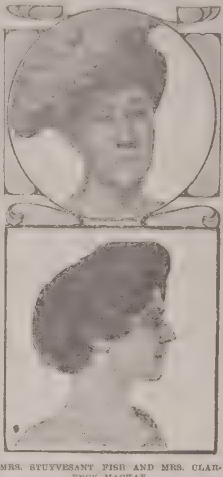
Mr. Perkins has always been a strong Republican and first voted for President Lincoln. In 1869 he was elected to the state senate of California from Butte county and returned in 1873 to fill part of a term. He received the Republican nomination for governor of his adopted state in 1879 and was elected over three other candidates.

Senator Perkins tells a story of a scene in a courtroom on the coast where a man arrested for robbery vehemently asserted his innocence even after he had been convicted by a jury.

"May the Almighty strike me dead on this spot if I am not innocent!" he shouted.

The judge waited for a minute or two. Then he said: "Well, prisoner, as Providence has not interfered I will take a hand and sentence you to three years at hard labor."

There is a strange rivalry between those two leaders of fashionable society, Mrs. Clarence Mackay and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. The first wishes to lead the fair members of the Four Hundred into the camp of the suffragettes, as women who advocate the political equality of the sexes are known. Mrs. Fish, on the other hand, champions the views of the anti-suffragists. The latter have organized a society called the National League For the Civic Education of Women, and it is doing all it can to combat the arguments made by those who favor giving women the right to vote and hold office. It remains to be seen whether the smart set will follow the lead of Mrs. Mackay or of Mrs. Fish. Both have strong followings in the world of fashion, and each is a very able and accomplished woman. Mrs. Mackay helped along the work of the suffragists recently by opening her elegant mansion for a talk on political equality by the Rev. Anna Shaw, one of the best known of the woman's rights leaders. Mrs. Fish, who has been aiding the anti-suffragists' cause with tongue and pen, said recently:



MRS. STUYVESANT FISH AND MRS. CLARENCE MACKAY.

"Nature asserts itself and interposes an absolute veto on the equality of the sexes. Women simply 'weren't built that way.' Why don't some of the wealthy and talented women of our city who talk so much about woman's rights hire women as butlers, cooks, valets, useful men, coachmen, footmen, and so on, to the end of the chapter? And, having done so, would they pay them men's wages?"

Mrs. Fish is the wife of a man supposed to be worth about $25,000,000, but she has earned a reputation of her own as a woman of marked individuality and independence. Mrs. Mackay's husband is probably even wealthier than Mr. Fish, and she devotes herself to philanthropic enterprises and is beautiful and fascinating.

The distinguished lawyer and diplomat, Joseph Choate, was introduced at the dinner in New York to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, as "our first citizen." He was ambassador at the court of St. James when the count represented Germany in England. The witty lawyer referred in his remarks to his pleasant relations with the count and mentioned the fact that the embassy of this country had no permanent home in London.

JOSEPH CHOATE.

"I had been in London only a short time," he said, "when Count von [illegible]torff came to [illegible] the [illegible]man embassy here. The relations between our embassy and that of the German people were most pleasant throughout my entire stay in England. [illegible] many things from [illegible] but there was one thing [illegible] but have never practiced [illegible] house of their own [illegible] James.

[illegible] position in this respect was ap[illegible]ribed by a London paper as follows: 'A bobby' in his rounds one night found a man wandering from house to house and touched him on the [illegible] and said respectfully, 'You had best [illegible] home, my man.' 'Home! Home!' replied the wanderer. 'I have no home. I am the American ambassador.' The business of representatives of this country at the court of St. James is to search for a home, and I myself spent six weeks in this arduous service of my country. In my res[illegible] the American embassy has [illegible] time, and where the successor of Mr. Reid will go the devil only knows, and he will not tell until after the 4th of March."

THE RETAIL DISTRICT

A prosperous retail district means everything to a community for the reason that it forcibly impresses every visitor to the city with the importance of the location as a trading center and establishes the value of property, the price of rentals, the salaries of employes and the number of homes maintained. All this can be directly attributed to the success or failure of the retail merchants in every community.

The duty of the public lies in the oft told principle—patronize the home merchants. Without the support of the people who make up the population of a given place, there will be no prosperous retail district, no fine stores, no high salaried clerks, dimly lighted streets, no life nor ambition anywhere. Thus, if one desires to see the retail merchant carry a stock of goods in keeping with his desire for things, then let him begin by spending his money with them, instead of sending it away to some merchant who has no interest in his customer from abroad nor anything in common with the upbuilding of the city to which the goods are shipped. There is too much "outside trading" done by the people of Astoria and as a result of this quite a few merchants are now complaining already that business at the present time is quiet. There are some people of course who hold the erroneous belief that there is nothing good enough for them in Astoria and in order to get what they want they must send away. The local merchants, they say, cannot afford to carry the goods they desire.

This might be true, but it does look reasonable that every person who resides in Astoria should do his trading here for more reasons than one. If such a policy is to be carried out the stores will never be able to cater to their wishes and the ultimate result will be a depletion of business without any hope of re-establishing or increasing any branch of the retail trade. Some say again that we must have more people to do the trading and in that way the retail business will expand. But those of us who are living here and are enjoying the fruits from nature's resources should first show our good will and confidence in the community by establishing a strong home interest in everything that tends to develop any enterprise, be it ever so small.

The little merchant employing only two or three clerks has more real interest in the community than the largest department store in the country located outside of the city. The mail order house will not parley over a purchase. When one orders from their catalogue the money must accompany it and there is no restitution if the goods are not as represented. Contrast this treatment with the home merchant who is ever ready to exchange, refund, deliver, repair, apologize for slight errors, accept your credit and wait ever so long for his money. Is he not entitled to your confidence and support? Is he not one of the great army of humans that contribute toward your welfare as well as his own? How many times has a local merchant assisted in church fair, bazaars or public entertainments? No such support is ever forthcoming from any outside merchants or mail order houses.

The question of maintaining our local government and educational institutions figures largely in the matter of how well the local trade is protected by the people. The general prosperity of the businessmen in a community determines to a great extent the amount of money that is paid in taxes upon which every artery in our business life depends.

The public reservation principle, grand as it is in theory, is likely to follow the general law and strike a snag whenever strong interests clash. The Yosemite reservoir is a case in point. The Yosemite reservation owes its existence to the fine scenery included in the area. The dispute between the defenders of scenery and the people who want to break in and get drinking water which the scenery guards and makes pure resolves itself ultimately into a question as to who shall come in for the benefits of a reservation. In a double sense the "protected" scenery is a resource. It attracts tourists, who must spend money to get there and to live there, and it supplies water in abundance.

There are numerous instances of natural scenery proving a valuable resource. Switzerland's chief resource is tourist money. Italy's scenery and history attract tourists from all over the world. Norway and Scotland have found their scenery to be veritable gold mines. In this country the White mountains and the Adirondacks draw money to the neighborhood. The people nearest are the greatest benefactors, but all within the sphere get something out of nature's plant. It isn't all profit, and naturally those who make access possible and sojourn comfortable and are always "right on the job" expect to be consulted as to the fate of the scenery. It is their problem first, and their states will not be inclined to tolerate federal restriction here more than with mines or any of nature's bounteous gifts. Whether the scenery is the most valuable or the only valuable feature of the reservation seems to be essentially a local matter.

When the president says that some means must be found to insure coordination among the naval bureaus he probably intends to hint that some means must be found to stop their disgraceful wrangling.

Charley Potts enjoyed his breakfast better than ere because his wife served him Folger's Golden Gate Coffee, ground just before using.

IS SURVEYING OLD STATE ROAD

State Wants Maps of all its Roads

W. W. Williams and a corps of surveyors are surveying the line of the old Dallas and Sandy Wagon road that was built and paid for by the state of Oregon in the '70s. They are now working west of the city.

The state paid $100,000 in building the road which was completed from this city to Bonneville, or a short distance west of that place. The road was abandoned when the O. R. & N. railroad was built and occupied a portion of its survey.

The state legislation, at the time of the agitation of a state road, created an act allowing a road to be constructed and it required about two and half years in which to do the amount of work that resulted. About thirty men were employed. George W. Waldon and J. M. Marden were named in the act creating the road and the latter was superintendent of the work. J. B. Crossen was the cashier.

The work was built by days labor. Remains of the old road may be seen along the river below Hood River and near Mitchells Point to this day.

Mr. Williams and his surveyors are getting the correct lines at this time in order to make a state road map containing all the state roads, ancient and modern.

RUSHING WORK ON RAILROAD

Construction of Copper River Line Crowded

Seattle Feb. 25—Four thousand men will be needed during the summer season for railroad construction work in Alaska. M. J. Heney, the contractor says he has been requested by the promotors of the Copper River railway to rush the work this season and instead of the 100 miles which he had contracted to build it is probable 100 miles of the line will be completed before cold weather sets in.

The Copper River railway will run trains during the winter.

ENTERTAIN AT MASQUERADE

Ball Given Tuesday Evening by Sons of Hermann

On Tuesday evening the local lodge of the Sons of Hermann entertained its members and a number of invited guests with a masquerade ball at its lodge room. There were about 50 people en masque and the costumes included some very handsome as well as grotesque ones. Excellent music was in attendance and the affair proved a most enjoyable one for all those present. During the evening refreshments were served. The prizes for the most original costume and for the best sustained character were won by Mrs. Harry Jones, Mrs. Frank Donnerberg and Miss Agnes Wahlgren.

COMPROMISE ON LOCAL OPTION

Measure now Before the Washington Legislature

Olympia, Wash, Feb. 25—After fighting over local option for six weeks there is indication that the legislature is going about a final settlement of the problem, by the passage of a compromise bill, allowing cities of all classes above 1500 population to be units for the purpose of voting on the saloon question, and for the smaller towns and country districts to be units in themselves. This will take away the dispute which has been so bitter, over the power being given to the county to control the affairs of the city, and with that point settled the passage of the bill will be easy.

Following the roasting talk given at Seattle by Governor Hay the committee of both houses got together and drafted a compromise bill. It carries many of the elements of the original Anti-saloon bill, but has some of the more reasonable provisions indorsed by the liberal senators. It is likely that this bill will pass both houses this week, or at least early next week. To day is the last day in which bills can be introduced without vote of two-thirds of the members of each house.

THE LEYDE—For good rooms and board. Transcient trade accomodated. Centrally located. Corner, Fourtteenh and Commercial.

NAMED AS TAX COMMISSIONERS

Galloway and Eaton Secure The New Appointments

Salem, Or., Feb. 25—At a meeting of the tax board, including Governor Chamberlain, Secretary of State Benson and State Treasurer Steele, C. V. Galloway of McMinnville and J. B. Eaton of La Grande were appointed tax commissioners to serve with the secretary of state, treasurer and the governor, the latter three as ex-officio members, on the new tax commission provided by a bill which passed the twenty-fifth legislature early in the session.

According to the act one commissioner was to be appointed from each party. C. V. Galloway, who is now state land agent, is a Democrat. Mr. Eaton is a Republican. Treasurer Steele was in favor of the appointment of L. H. Maxwell of Portland, but as it was thought better to have one member from the eastern part of the state, and since Treasurer Steele's home is in Multnomah county, the appointment of another member from that county was deemed inadvisable.

The commissioners will draw $2500 a year as salary.

A meeting will be held at once to equalize the taxes for the coming year.

QUESTION OF MARITIME LAW

Third International Conference Will be Held in Belgium

An appropriation of $5,000 for expenses necessary for the representation of the United States at the third international conference on maritime law, to be held at Brussels, Belguim, during 1909, has been submitted to congress by Mr. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury. The conference will consider draft conventions relating to collisions, salvage, the liability of shipowners and cognate subjects.

The proposals were supported by the serretary of state, Robert Bacon, and by the secretary of commerce and labor, Oscar S. Straus. The last name transmitted to the secretary of state the following letter of the maritime law association of the treaty limiting ship owners' libality, signed by Everett P. Wheeler, chairman of executive committee, New York:

"In our view the shipowner's option by article 7 of a full limitation of 8 pounds sterling per ton, with the right under article 6 to substitute the value of the vessel at the end of the voyage, could not be accepted by congress. We are in accord with the general principal that the shipowners may limit this liablity to the actual value of the vessel and freight at the end of the voyage; but the provision for 8 pounds sterling per ton as the full limit for the culpable vessel is not only a great under valuation of modern high-power steamships but ignors the element of freight, which is certainly answerable for the torts of the ship, as an accessory to the res.

"The marshaling of liens in article 3, by which a priority is given for six months' wages of the master and crew over the damages for collision, is contrary to the settled principles of our law, which gives a collision remedy against the entire res, regardless of the prior obligation of the owner.

"The United States Maritime Law association has recently reviewed again the subject of maritime liens for material men with the result that a general measure therefore, on its recommendation has been introduced in the present congress (senate bill No. 8,399). As the terms of article 3 seem to exclude all the important liens, we think such an innovation would prove unacceptable to this country.

"Therefore, this draft treaty, as it now stands, being so widely at variance with our law, is unlikely to be favored by the United States

"Althou the note of the Belgian minister of December 10 does not definitely states that these treaties are so to be brought up at the proposed conference, we beg to add that the attitude of this association in regard to them remains as stated in our official letter to the treasury department on May 29, 1908."

FORM LARGE CORPORATION

To Spread Results of Burbank's Labor

San Francisco, Calif., Feb. 26—In order that his wonderful discoveries may be more generally distributed and incidentally that his work of discovery may not be hampered by business worries, the brains and genius of Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, have been capitalized for several millions of dollars.

Law, millionaires of this city and Oscar E. Dinner, a wealthy eastern capitalist. There is no limit to the rights, which these men have secured except one or two small contracts, which Burbank is now fulfilling. Working alone, Burbank has not had the time to give the results of all his experiments but now a systematic effort will be made to distribute both the past and future products to the world. The company will be called "The Luther Burbank's Produces, Incorporated."

Counsel for Mrs. Teal said he would apply for a certificate of reasonable doubt and endeavor to obtain her freedom on bail.

ENFORCEMENT OF FISHING LAWS

Correspondent Explains Effect of Court Ruling

Olympia, Feb 25, 1909

Editor Budget - The Chris Neilson Columbia river fishery jurisdiction case, just decided by the supreme court of the United States, is of the greatest importance to Oregon and Washington, because by defining to what extent these two states can enforce fishery laws on the Columbia river, both states can now or in the future pass salmon protective laws enforcible up to their respective boundary lines. In the past such laws were usually set aside by the lower federal courts.

The Columbia river, the greatest salmon stream of the United States and the world, has been run, because it flows between two states, as wide open as to catching of salmon as any mining camp in the olden days was run as to moral restrictions. The reason for this was that Oregon claimed the right to enforce fishery laws for the Columbia from bank to bank. In the Chris Neilson case the supreme court of that state conceded the same right to Washington, by deciding that the "more stringent laws" for the protection of the food fishes of the Columbia, passed by either state, could be enforced by both states from bank to bank. Washington denied the right of Oregon's jurisdiction from bank to bank, also repudiated the principle of the "more stringent law," and contended that either state could only enforce its fishery laws up to its boundary, except when the two states passed identical laws. Then both states could enforce such laws from bank to bank.

Chris Neilson operated a purse seine on the Columbia river, holding a Washington license. In the summer 1907 he was arrested by Oregon officials. Oregon that year had passed a law prohibiting purse seines fishing on the Columbia. Washington had failed to concur in this law. Chris Neilson was convicted in the lower Oregon courts. The supreme court of that state on appeal, confirmed the decisions of the lower courts. Then Washington appealed the case to the supreme court of the United States.

The United States supreme court by upholding the contention of Washington has cleared the way for true salmon protection. To illustrate. Under the past claim of Oregon for jurisdiction from bank to bank, when Oregon passed a protective law and arrested Washington fishermen in strictly Washington waters, or even in Oregon waters, the federal courts annulled such laws. Recently these courts went so far as to decide that Oregon fishery laws for the Columbia could not be enforced by Oregon in strictly Oregon waters against Oregon fishermen. This latest decision was made, however, upon the plea of Oregon's attorney general to forbid Oregon officials from enforcing Oregon's initiative fishery laws.

Under the principle of the "more stringent law," if it had been upheld by the United States supreme court, serious conflict would have immediately arisen. For instance if Oregon passed a law which Washington fishermen considered as unduly restrictive, it was likely that the Washington legislature would have retaliated by passing a law considered as too restrictive by Oregon fishermen. Under this method in the long run all profitable salmon fishing on the Columbia could and very likely would have been stopped. It can be hopefully predicted, now that neither state can infringe upon the defined rights of the other, that true salmon legislation will be enacted and the Columbia river brought under the same general rules as are applied to other salmon streams.

The fundamental principle of all salmon protection, everywhere applied with a single exception, is that no fishwheels or fishtraps be permitted to fish above head of tide, that is they are shut out from the narrows of the upper part of salmon streams. Europe has this rule, so has Alaska, Canada, Oregon, Washington and California. The single exception is the Columbia river.

Had the Chris Neilson case been decided six months ago, the Oregon officials would have had no excuse to make spectacular arrests of Washington fishermen under the initiative laws passed last June by Oregon. Then there would have been no futile meeting of the two governors to try to unravel the knotty problem of jurisdiction. There would have been no threat or danger of the militia of both states being called out to protect the rights of the fishermen of either state. There would have been no decision by Federal Judge Wolverton temporarily suspending both initiative fishery laws. Instead, the two initiative laws passed by Oregon for salmon protection would have been taken to the state courts, and as they were evidently in conflict, the law stopping fishing in the narrows of the upper Columbia, which received a majority of 26,000, would have been declared the law of Oregon enforcible in Oregon waters. The law stopping fishing in the wide lower river, which only received a majority of 6000, would have been declared null and void, as the laws of Oregon provide in such cases of conflict. Then there would have been no opportunity for inter-state fishery committees to bring in a report to the Oregon legislature to repeal Oregon initiative laws and thus permit the continuance of salmon destruction by fishwheels on the Columbia.

Under the Chris Neilson decision each state as it sees fit will be able to limit or prohibit in the narrows of the Columbia the fish wheels and fishtraps up to its respective boundary. Joint legislation will only be necessary for Sunday and other closing seasons, to permit salmon to reach the spawning grounds in the Upper Columbia, from which territory they are now debarred by the fishwheels.

In conclusion I wish to state that the United Fishermen of the Pacific, the federation of the fishermen's unions of Alaska and the Pacific Coast states, urged the prosecution of the Chris Neilson case from its beginning. The officers of this federation had numerous interviews with the attorney generals of both states. They likewise secured the aid of United States Senators Fulton and Piles in having these senators appear before the United States supreme court and urge the advancement of the case on the calendar, which was done. ED ROSENBERG

Secretary United Fishermen of the Pacific.

CHANGE NAME OF CONGRESS

Innovation Suggested by Prof. Campbell Today

Cheyenne, Feb 25 Professor H. Campbell speaking before the dry farming congress to day advocated changing the name of the congress as it conveys to the world a wrong impression.

"Dry farming" means farming without water or with very little water. "What we are trying to do" said the speaker, "is to provide the water necessary for the growth of plants. Scientific farming is always wet farming and to use the term "dry farming" opens the door for every concievable kind of critic to get in his work." Campbell suggested the broader name of "Scientific farming congress" and commented on the waste of water by irrigating farmers, because the latter do not understand the use of water. Billings, Mont., was selected as the place for holding the next years session of the trans-Missouri dry farming congress.

Cheyenne, Feb. 25--The executive committee has recommended the elimination of the word "Trans-Missouri" from the name of the congress and leaving it simple "The Dry Farming Congress."

AMUSEMENTS

"THE KERRY GOW"

On Sunday evening next Arthur Cunningham and his splendid company in the beautiful Irish play, "The Kerry Gow" will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre and from appearances there will be a big audience in attendance. Arthur Cunningham is a splendid actor, as well as a great singer. His big buoyant personality fits into the sentimental Irish heroes as though they were written for him, and the manner in which he sings the old Irish ballads is no small factor in his success. The play of Kerry Gow was written by Joseph Murphy that veteran actor, who himself starred in it from one end of the country to the other for over thirty consecutive seasons. It is full of the real Irish spirit, with a generous sprinkling of healthy comedy, and allows the new star exceptional opportunity which he takes full advantage of. The play is picturesquely mounted and costumed and nothing has been left undone to make the production complete.

"UNCLE TOMS' CABIN"

Next Monday Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company should be greeted with a record crowd when the curtain raises. It is doubtful if "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will ever grow old or fail to fill theatres, if the opening performance of the Stetson company at the Grand theatre last evening is any criterion, for one of the largest midweek audiences of the year greeted that company. The Stetson company has visited the Grand regularly each season for several years, and the production is always about the same, and always pleases, for it seems to be the aim of the management to keep their company at the same Standard. The scenic effects are good and are well handled, and the singing of the darkies is a pleasing feature. Salt Lake Herald, Nov. 13, 1908.

A. A. A. A. CLUB BENEFIT

This Friday night Manager Shortley of the Grand theatre, will turn over his place to the Astoria Athletic Club for a benefit. Special films will be shown and the illustrated songs will be sung by Mrs. Harry Flavel, Mrs. C. H. Callender and Miss Irene Simington. A full orchestra will be in attendance. A large crowd is expected during the evening and all should attend and help swell the receipts. The price of admission has been placed at 15 cents or two admissions for 25 cents.

THE AUTHOR'S FIRST NIGHT

The Way Some Famous Playwrights are Affected

The first night with authors is viewed with different feelings. This is how it affected some famous French playwrights. Sardou's nervousness was well known. Dumas fils was never able to preserve his sangfroid. As soon as the curtain rose Dumas pere would betake himself to a restaurant and dine from as many courses as his new piece had acts. His son reported on the success of the piece. At the first representation of "Toussaint Louverture" Lamartine found his work so tedious that he went to a cafe and read the papers. Balzac when he produced "Resources de Quinola" spent the day in selling tickets at a rate higher than at the box office and reaped a fine return.

Paul de Kock, seated in the orchestra, we also read, protested against his piece and made so much noise that his neighbors demanded silence. Casmir Delavigne remained at home. Alexandre Soumet went to be shaved when "Jeanne d'Arc" was produced. The barber had finished one cheek when the author cried: "Stop! Here are 30 sous. Go round to the theater and see if they hiss or applaud the piece." The barber returned, saying: "It is a success, monsieur. They applaud." "Since it is a success," replied the author, "shave the other." Scribe appeared in the best of spirits and encouraged the actors, but at the end he became nervous and tore his handkerchief with his teeth. Rossini walked about the back of the stage with his cane in his hand. Auber was never present on the first night of his works, and Bayard on reaching the stage is reported to have said that he experienced sudden illness.—New York Mail.

Smoothed the Sea.

A gentleman aboard a steamer running between Southport and Blackpool approached one of the sailors during the passage and remarked to him:

"We have a very smooth sea this morning. It is like a sheet of glass. You don't always have it like this?"

"No, sir," was the answer, "but, you see, they knowed as how you were coming today, so the authorities at Southport telephoned to the corporation at Blackpool, and they at once ordered out the steam roller and rolled the sea down for the occasion. That is why it is so smooth."—London Tit-Bits.

The Best Way To Advertise Astoria?

* * * * * *

A local newspaper reflects the business interests of the town in its advertising columns. A business man looking for a location always examines newspapers to see how his particular line is represented. If he is a druggist and finds none advertising he concludes there are no druggists, or, if there are, they are all dead. If he is a doctor or a lawyer, he looks over the professional cards to see if his profession is represented. Among the farmer subscribers the home paper has a similar mission. The prospective buyers like an invitation to come and trade with the merchants. A card of professional men is just as essential as the sign in front of his door. It is not a question of being able to get along without it. A hardware man need not heat his store to keep things from freezing. He might have a booth out on the street or at a skating rink, and do a lot of business instead of paying rent at his store and buying fuel to heat it with, but it might not be economy to do so. Advertising is not a luxury, but rather an economic proposition recognized by all the best and most successful business men the world over.

We will gladly assist you in the preparation of any advertising and put our best foot forward in your interest. Don't delay. If you cannot call, write or send for us.

THE GENUS COLLEGE BOY.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"A bad business."

"What's the matter, Alec?"

"My uncle writes me that my cousin Lillian is coming to town for a week to do some shopping. He asks me to meet her at the station and show her some attention. I'm under great obligations to my uncle. Indeed, he is helping me through college. But what the dickens am I to do? I have three examinations coming on at the end of the week and know nothing about any one of the subjects. The only possible way for me to get through is to bone day and night. How can I do that and dance attendance upon a girl?"

"Is your cousin pretty?"

"I haven't seen her since she was a kid."

"How will you know her?"

"She will carry a bunch of violets in her left hand."

"Well, I will do the honors in your place if you like."

"Dick Rathvon, shake! You are a joy forever."

When Miss Lillian Ayres alighted from the train the next afternoon she was met by a tall, imposing looking young man, who, seeing the signal violets, approached her and without the slightest hesitation saluted her with a cousinly kiss.

"Why, how you have grown!" she exclaimed. "You're the only big one of the family."

"And how you have improved!" replied the young man. "I never would have supposed you would bloom into such a rare flower."

Several days passed, during which the young man gave me undivided attention to the girl, cutting lectures, chapel and any other college duty that stood in the way of his doing so. But one morning when his friend had been up all night cramming under the stimulant of strong coffee Rathvon appeared at his room and said:

"Alec, we're in a hole."

"For heaven's sake, what is it?"

"Her father's coming to take her home."

"Great Scott! What are we going to do?"

"Leave it to me."

The next day Mr. Rathvon upon leaving Miss Ayres said:

"I have a confession to make."

"What is it?"

"Since you have been here I should have been preparing for several important examinations. One of them comes off tomorrow morning. Fortunately your father will arrive then, and you will be provided for."

"Why, Alec, you should have told me this before."

"I couldn't."

"Couldn't? Why not?"

"I've so enjoyed going about with you."

"But your examinations?"

"If I am plucked it will be in a good cause, a lovely cause."

"Heaven grant that you may not be."

"Goodby. Before I have got through with the struggle you will be gone."

There was a cousinly kiss, the twentieth in four days, and he was gone.

About 5 o'clock the next afternoon Alec Ayres entered his room after having passed the last of his term examinations. He found Dick Rathvon filling a pipe from a skull tobacco holder. Alec threw himself into a chair.

"Do you think they're gone?" he asked.

"The only through train went at 3."

"There's a day of reckoning coming for this."

"In the dim future. Don't borrow trouble. Take a pipe."

There was a knock on the door. Alec drew back the latch with a lazy string, and in walked his uncle and his cousin.

"Poor Alec!" exclaimed Lillian," going over to Dick and laying her hand affectionately on his shoulder. "Don't scold him, papa; he's been so nice to me."

"Hello, Alec, my boy!" said the uncle, grasping Alec's hand.

"Why, papa," interposed Lillian, "what are you doing? Don't you know your own nephew? This is Alec."

No hole opened to let the two boys down into the cellar, where they would fain have hidden themselves. So each drew down under his coat collar and waited for the bolt to strike him. Mr. Ayres was not a stupid man. Indeed, he saw in a moment that some prank had been played.

"If that gentleman is Alec," he said, "I have been grossly imposed upon."

Lillian flushed red and white by turns.

"It's all up, Dick," said Alec. "We may as well confess. Uncle Lillian I have been having a terrible struggle with my examinations. This is my chum Dick Rathvon. He agreed to take care of you for me while I have been cramming night and day. He did it all out of kindness to me."

"No such thing," fired Dick. "I did it because I liked it."

Lillian stood petrified.

"Boys," said Mr. Ayres, "when I was in college I was a scapegrace. I return to find that scapegrace still in habit college ha[illegible]. We have in the community three divisions men women and students. The student is a class of himself, genus s[illegible], just as the monkey is. He has always been so and will always be so. I don't know what this bit of rascality you have been practicing is. I came here to invite my nephew to dine with us this evening, but since I have two nephews I invite you both."

Miss Lillian swept out of the room with her nose in the air. But she felt better about it by dinner time.

A Gentleman . . . Burglar

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

The burglar was standing at the sideboard, pouring himself a glass of wine from a decanter. He wore a mask and overalls. A click at the knob of the door behind him arrested his attention. He turned, glass in hand, and faced a young lady in evening dress.

There was something very unlike the class to which the burglar belonged in his courtly bow.

"You surprise me," he said. "I did not expect to find any of the family up at this time of night. I am about to take a glass of wine. Will you permit me to pour one for you?"

"You will find the silver kept for daily use in that drawer," pointing to the sideboard. "Take it all and welcome. Don't go upstairs. You will frighten every one dreadfully."

"I don't need more than one piece," said the burglar, "but it must bear the initials of its present owner."

"Only one piece! May I ask the cause of such a modest demand? I was not aware that burglars took such frightful risks to intentionally leave the plunder behind."

Whether it was the burglar's courtly manner, his well modulated voice or an air about him indicating that he had been to the manner born, the girl ceased to be afraid of him.

"Perhaps," she added, "you are some respectable man who has been led into this life by force of circumstances and, smitten by conscience, you confine yourself to a very small robbery, just enough to gain the means for a meal. I can give you money instead, in which there is nothing to betray you. That would be much better than to take a piece of silver with our mark on it."

"Your kind thoughtfulness delights me. But money is no object to me—at least your money. I can make more by taking these sugar tongs. Probably they didn't cost $10. They are worth $500 to me."

"Five hundred!"

"Yes, and if I don't get away with them or some other article in this drawer it will cost me $500—in other words, there is a difference to me of $1,000."

"You are joking."

"Ethel!" called a man's voice from the hall above.

"Yes, father!"

"What are you doing down there. Go to bed."

"Tell him," whispered the burglar, "that you are getting some refreshment."

"I'm getting some refreshment," she repeated.

"Who is with you? I heard some one talking."

"Say a gentleman you met during the evening who came home with you and whom you asked in."

"That would be a fib."

"Well, then, say a gentleman friend of yours."

"That would be a worse fib. I don't make friends with burglars."

There was a sound of slippers flapping on the stairs. The burglar pulled off his mask and threw it under the dining table, then, unbuttoning his overalls at the back of his neck, they fell to the floor, and he kicked them under the sideboard. He was in evening dress, his bosom covered with cotillion favors. Scarcely had the change of costume been made than an old gentleman in dressing gown and slippers entered the room.

"Father," stammered the girl, "this is Mr Merryman. He was at Mrs Appleton's this evening, and he kindly saw me home."

Mr Merryman bowed. The old gentleman bowed stiffly and said to his daughter:

"I didn't hear any one with you when you came in."

"Didn't you, father?"

"I have on my rubbers," said Mr. Merryman. "They exclude water and have the advantage of making no noise."

"Convenient for thieves," remarked Miss Ethel, in whose eyes there was now dancing much merriment.

"Your daughter kindly asked me in for a glass of wine," said the intruder. "Can I induce you to join me, sir?"

At this master stroke of impudence Miss Ethel repressed a smile, and her father repressed an exclamation of dissatisfaction. With a "No, I thank you" he turned on his heel and went upstairs.

"Bob Merryman," exclaimed the girl, "what does this mean?"

"It means this: After the last time you favored me in the cotillion this badge here [illegible] Mrs Appleton's for the club [illegible] I met a party of fellows and [illegible] lot of talk I bet Perkins that I would burglarize your father's house, bringing away some article of silver properly marked as evidence of the burglary. You interrupted me in my honest work of making money enough to buy wine and cigars for [illegible] nth, and unless you let me go away with the proof instead of winning I'll loose an equal amount."

"Upon my word! What pranks you men will be up to! Take the sugar t[illegible] [illegible] you very much. Let me see. Are [illegible] father's initials?"

"My mother's."

"I'll return it tomorrow or rather today. Good evening. Much obliged for [illegible] kindness."

The next afternoon the tongs were returned with a [illegible] trunk full of candy and [illegible] regret that conventional [illegible] rules pre[illegible] the donor from dividing his winnings with the young lady who helped him to win.

RUSSIA TO FIGHT JAPAN

That's Why She Raised Big Loan Says Admiral Evans

"A few days ago when the Russian government floated a loan of $250,000,000, which was subscribed thirty times over, that was Russia's notice to Japan 'to get ready for war and stay ready, for I'm going to lick you.'"

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans ("Fighting Bob"), seated in his apartments in the Auditorium Annex at Chicago the other night, made this significant statement. "And what is more," added the admiral, "Japan herself recognizes and realizes the position in which she is placed. The handwriting is plain. Japan can read."

A number of other predictions of international import made by the admiral are as follows:

The United States will have no trouble with Japan. Neither will England.

When the next Russo-Japanese war does come Germany, France and Austria will espouse the cause of the Russians. England will find herself allied with Japan by virtue of existing treaties.

What the result of it all will be no man can foresee.

"Japan has not the slightest desire in the world to fight with her bankers," continued the admiral. "England and the United States are Japan's bankers. The country cannot go on at the rate that it is spending money now. It is out of the question. Japan recognizes that a conflict with Russia is inevitable, and the government is straining every nerve, exhausting every effort, to put itself in a state of preparedness. But the resources of Russia are practically illimitable. Russia is anxious to avenge itself on Japan.

"The day is coming when the richest nations of the earth only will have the power. These nations are the United States, England, Russia and France. Germany, despite efforts of the German emperor, is dropping to the rear. Germany has not the wealth. These four nations will rule the sea. Their supremacy will be unquestioned."

While the state of Oregon lost its contention by the decision of the United States supreme court in the case against Chris Neilson, charged with operating a purse seine in the waters of the Columbia river, this decison taken in connection with the former one defining the boundary line between the two staets can only be construed as a victory for this state, so far as enforcing its laws over the waters of the Columbia river is concerned. The decision says that until the two states pass the same or similar laws, neither state can enforce its laws outside its own territorial limits. The court has ruled that Oregon territory extends to beyond Sand island and along the center of the channel which skirts the Washington shore. That being the case nearly the entire river will be under the sole jurisdiction of Oregon in instances where the laws of the two states differ.

If the grand jury continues its work for a few more days it will not only bring in enough revenue in the way of fines to pay the expenses of the jury session but the entire expense of the term of court as well.

By a recent court decision there will be returned to 800,000 consumers of gas in New York city $12,000,000 in the form of rebates. Several charity plans have been presented through the press of New York city as deserving of the consideration of consumers. The average rebate will be $15. The Charity Organization Society Committee on the Prevention of tuberculosis has appealed to consumers to assign their gas receipts to the society, which will then collect the rebates. The society puts the appeal thus: "It is money which a majority of them never expected to receive; it is money which nearly everyone of them can readily do without; it is money which in many cases will be spent for personal enjoyment and gratification. The Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis now asks the people of New York to give this fund to the support of the anti-tuberculosis movement in this city. With a fund of sufficient size as a foundation, yielding a considerable annual revenue, it will be possible in a very few yaers to completely eradicate this disease, saving thousands of lives to the city every year."

The inward and outward movement of aliens for the 12 months ending with November 1, 1908, the figures of which are made public by the department of commerce and labor, indicate that the emigration has been greater than the immigration. The figures are: Total arrivals, [illegible]; total departures, 644,452. To this number of emigrants should be added the unknown number of naturalized citizens who during that period have left the United States for permanent residence abroad. During January 1909, as compared with January, 1908, the immigration from Austria increased 1128; from Hungary, 7916; from Italy, 4967. From Russia and Finland there was a decrease of 859 and from Japan a decrease of 768. The immigration of Chinese increased 54 the month of January.

It isn't necessary to go back to other days to know what "old fashioned winters" are. We have that kind right along. A bit of December with much October and a touch of April the first few weeks of winter is nothing new. The oldest inhabitant will confess that if cross questioned. Of course he remembers the tough winters and likes to harp on them just to make the "tenderfoot" shiver. But it is down in his diary, if he has one, and if not there it is in the officially compiled records that there have always been "all sorts of weather," and the label "exceptionally mild" and "exceptionally severe" was often placed within the same decade.

Ten years ago we had a severe winter when compared with the many mild ones which had preceded it. Five years ago there was another cold winter, and as the one following was also colder than some that had been experienced it was argued by certain prophets that increased severity might be expected right along. The prediction failed. And if we should have rivers frozen to bear the heaviest traffic and good sleighing across country, over the highest fences, it would not argue that the climate is changing. Such winters are remembered by the oldest inhabitant, but he is stopped from claiming that they were the fashion in his boyhood by the official records of temperature for the past fifty years. The winter averages have been about the same, and there have been no cold groups or periods. If anything, the cold weather record belongs to the last twenty-five rather than to the first twenty-five of the fifty years here considered. So the ways of winter have not changed, and the old sort lingers with us.

The lawyer who fired "dementia Americana" at the Thaw jury probably picked up the wrong ammunition and certainly wasted good powder. It would score a hit on the more and bigger battleship craze.

Cuba had ideal weather to inaugurate Gomez, but there's time yet for the power behind that inauguration to hatch storms which will make our cyclones green with envy.

After all, the change March 4 is only a change of figurehead, for the ship of state remains the same old ship, and the people are the sovereign.

While congress is about the work of resurrecting the Maine in Havana harbor it might be well to bury the mystery of San Juan hill.

COLUMBIA CONFERENCE

Interesting Session Held at Vancouver, B. C.

Rev. Gustave E. Rydquist, who returned this week from attendance upon the session of the Columbia Conference held in Vancouver, B. C. was impressed with its work and the progress being made by the people of Vancouver: Of his observations he said:

"Vancouver B. C. is one of the large and thriving cities on the sound Country. It has now a population of about 100,000 and it is predicted that Vancouver will in a course of time outgrow Seattle. It is nearer the open sea, has excellent harbor facilities, and to the east and north are the immense resources of the Dominion tapped by the Canadian Pacific which has its western terminals at Vancouver. Thus the claims and the predictions of the citizens of Vancouver are not unfounded.

"One notices the difference between Vancouver and the cities of our western states. Law and order prevails so as to be appearent even to the causual observer. The Sunday closing law does not only apply to saloons, but to all kinds of business, and that law, I was told, was rigidly and thoroughly inforced. In my traveles which have included most of the states and largest cities I have never seen such a general observance of the Lords day. I was told by a business man who was still a citizen of the states that even he would oppose the annexation of Canada to the United States if it came to that, because" in the present form of government in Canada politics do not enter to annul the laws and prevent their inforcement as is often the case in the States."

"The Columbia Conference of the Lutheran church held its 17th annual convention there from February 16—21. The convention was well attended and encouraging reports were received from the different parts of the field. Nine Congregations were admitted into full membership of the conference, among which was the Memorial Lutheran of Astoria. The English work is being pushed with greater vigor than heretofore in the Columbia Conference as well as in other Lutheran bodies on this coast. Almost every Congregation using a foreign language has done some English work, but it has not proven entirely satisfactory. It has therefore been found necessary to organize the English work independently in order to obtain better results."

CONTINUES TO USE THE FERRY

Northern Pacific Trains Cross River at Goble

After repeated efforts to put the Kalama-Vancouver line of the Northern Pacific in shape for travel, the officers of that road have had to admit that for the rest of the winter and spring use of the new line will be impracticable and the Kalama-Goble ferry will have to be used.

The Kalama cutoff was finished last fall and put in operation by the Northern Pacific in the early winter. It was calculated to save the tiresome transfer at Goble and give the Northern Pacific the benefit of the new bridges across the Columbia and Willamette rivers. The new line follows the river bank for much of the way between Kalama and Vancouver, and it was found that the snow and rain of the winter so softened the banks that it was practically impossible to keep them from sliding.

The road suffered several very serious slides during the heavy storms of January that resulted in putting the line completely out of business for through trains.

Unless the track is got into shape by May it may be impossible for the Northern Pacific to maintain the fast schedule to Puget sound that it announced for the exposition. Officials however, believe that as soon as the wet weather is over the track can be reballasted and placed in condition for fast heavy traffic. A light accommodation train is now being run between Vancouver and Kalama, but it has difficulty in maintaining a slow schedule.

HEIRS SEEKING HEAVY DAMAGE

File Suit to Recover Hundred Thousand

Spokane, Feb. 26—One of the largest, if not the largest damage suits for personal injury and death ever brought against a railroad in this country has been started by Bridget Brannick and son, E. J. Brannick, against the Northern Pacific to recover $100,000 for the death of E. M. Brannick, husband and father of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs are residents of Portland, the home of the deceased on February 1 of last year was a passenger on a caboose attached to a freight train and was en route from Hatton to Connell on the main line in Washington when the train was violently started, throwing Brannick to the floor, injuring him fatally.

MANY MEASURES ARE VETOED

Governor Kills Over Fifty Legislative Bills

Governor Chamberlain has vetoed 52 of the measures enacted by the legislature at its recent session, thus breaking his record for any previous session as well as that of any other chief executive. Among the measures vetoed yesterday afternoon was the Adair bill to provide for the compulsory sterilization of confirmed criminals, insane persons, idiots and imbeciles. Of this measure the governor says:

"It will be observed from a reading of the act that incurable insane and criminals are so confused and confounded with each other that it is difficult to judge whether criminals are to be sterilized because they are in fact mentally unsound or because they are criminals who are serving a third term in the penitentiary upon conviction of a felony. The bill is not drawn to meet the conditions of institutional life in Oregon, because the penitentiary is not governed by a board of managers, but by the governor of the state, with the assistance of a superintendent and wardens, while the asylum is under the direct supervision of a board of trustees, a superintendent and a corps of assistants. A bill departing so radically from established methods in Oregon ought to be skillfully framed and remove any ground form misunderstanding or misconstruction of its terms.

"Besides these objections, I am not entirely satisfied that all of the class named in the act ought to be submitted to such harsh treatment, and if it is to become a law in this state greater safegaurds should be thrown around the unfortunate wards of the state who are mentioned in the act. Without these there might be a terrible abuse of the power attempted to be given those upon whom the duty devolves."

HIGGINS NOT RESPONSIBLE

Open Statement from Banker on Saloon Indictments

To Whom It May Concern:

During all of yesterday, one or more persons, maliciously inclined and without warrant of truth, circulated a report on the streets of Astoria, that I was, personally, responsible for the finding of certain indictments against certain of the saloonmen of this city for violations of the laws and ordinances, and using my name in other scandalous and dishonorable relations:

For the benefit of all to whom these things have been uttered, and by way of warning to those indulging in this sheer defamation and wanton falsehoods I here, and now, declare that I have never been connected with a single case now before the district, or any other court, with regard to any violations of the saloon or liquor laws of city or state, either as complainant, witness or informer.

I make this open statement not alone on my own account, as a citizen, but with a view to protecting the interests I have the honor to serve in one of the leading institutions of the city of Astoria.

J. E. HIGGINS.

Legislator's Offer to Mothers.

One dollar a babe is the price Iowa ought to be willing to pay to Iowa mothers is the estimate of Dr Fulliam, president of the Iowa State Medical association Dr Fulliam introduced a measure the other day making such a provision into the Iowa house The bill provides that if the mother presents notice of her child's birth to the county clerk within three months after birth and accompanies the notice with a physician's certificate she is to be given an order on the county treasurer for $1 No provision is made for twins or triplets.

New Use For an Automobile.

For the past two years automobiles have been a veritable fad among the prosperous citizens of Quitman Ga., and it is probable that there are as many machines in Quitman as in any town of its size in the state of Georgia E. C. A daughter was born this morning to the wife of Arthur Datyon. Both mother and child are reported to be doing well.

A Lenten service will be held at Holy Innocence Chapel in Uppertown at 7:30 o'clock this evening, the rector of Grace church officiating.

O. Nelson, a former resident of Astoria but for the past twelve years captain of the Portland police force, is in the city on a brief visit.

The examination of Max Shubert on a charge of insanity was completed before the county board this morning and the patient was discharged.

The home of Edwin Young was made happy this morning by the arrival of twin girls. Both mother and little sisters a reported to be doing well.

District Superintendent Hawkins of the order of Knigths of Pythias arrived in the city today from Portland and will pay a fraternal visit to Astor lodge this evening.

Rev. Conrad L. Owens has refused the call of the St. Johns Baptist church and will remain in his present charge. The church is planning to build a new house of worship in the near future.

Governor Chamberlain has announced the appointment of W.D. Wheelwright and R. D. Inman of Portland and Judge F. J. Taylor of this city as the board of state pilot commissioners for the coming two years.

John Smith the well known hardware dealer of Walla Walla spent Thursday in Astoria the guest of his old friend John Huntimer. Mr. Smith operates stores at Walla Walla, Prescott and Waitsburg in Washington, and at Milton, Oregon.

The Clatsop County Sunday school convention announces that its session will convene at the Presbyterian church in this city on April 6 and continue for two days. The president of the organization is Mrs. J. E. Ferguson and its secretary is Miss Pearl Estes.

Thomas Erickson, a former resident of this city, died in Portland on Thursday after a short illness. His body will be brought to Astoria for interment and his funeral will be held under the auspices of the Finnish Brotherhood, of which order he was a member.

Secretary August Nelson of the Bartenders union states that there is to truth in the report that the labor council has placed the saloon of J. W. Johnston on the unfair list as no such action was taken by it or by its authorization.

W. E. Tallant has returned from a business trip to New York and other eastern cities. He says that business has been very dull there during the past few months in all lines but the outlook for improvement is good, especially in the salmon business which he was most interested in.

A telegram was received this morning from Denver, Colo., announcing the death of William Cotter Rickards last evening of pneumonia. Mr. Rickards will be remembered by many Astorians as editor and publisher of the Morning Pioneer, a paper established in Astoria many years ago by Alfred D. Bowen and later leased to Mr. Rickards. For sometime he remained in the newspaper business, but later became a wanderer and dissipated his life away. While a resident of Astoria he had exemplary habits and showed much ability as a writer and businessman.

Last evening Sheriff Pomeroy made raids on a cigar store run by K. J Hermunstadt in Alderbrook and on a cigar store run by John Hanson in John Day precinct, both "dry" precincts. Quite a quantity of liquor was found in each place.

Barney Smith, a former well known resident of Astoria and a member of Astor lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias was accidentally killed in a logging camp near South Bend a few days ago. He was about 45 years of age and had many friends in this city.

The funeral of the late Miss Bertha Fannon was held this morning from St. Mary's Catholic church, the services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. John Waters. It was attended by many of the friends of the deceased and the floral offerings were many. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

S. Terry McKean writes to friends in this city from San Jose, Cal. that he has organized a company of players and will start on tour on April 12. He hopes to visit Astoria during the latter part of the year. Terry has a host of friends here who wish him success and will look forward with a great deal of pleasure to his coming with his company.

The circuit court grand jury returned 17 indictments this afternoon. Four of them were for selling liquor on Sunday. Of the remaining 13 indictments it is surmised that several of them are for operating "blind pigs" in "dry" precincts, but nothing will be given out until after the warrants are served. After returning the indictments, the grand jury resumed its deliberations and is believed to have considerable work still before it.

The actual connection of J. E. Higgins with the present grand jury in the liquor indictments is that as cashier of the Astoria National bank, he rented a safe deposit box in that department of the bank to two men in the regular course of business and had no knowledge what was placed in it and he simply testified that he is certain that no one could open, change or remove anything from the box except those who had rented it.

The ways and means committee of the house has not yet voted upon the lumber tariff, but those in touch declare the committee now favors reduction of the duty on rough lumber to $1 per thousand feet and to fix the tariff on high-grade lumber at compensatory figures yet to be worked out. Western representatives are urging the committee to retain the duty of $2 on rough lumber and, if necessary to obtain this concesion, would agree to removal of the duty on high grades. They assert it is mainly on rough lumber that they need protection against Canadian competition.

The city attorney is preparing an ordinance to be introduced at the coming session of the city council providing that the second conviction of any saloonkeeper on a charge of violating the Sunday closing law shall in addition to the usual fine or imprisonment, revoke the defendant's license and bar him for securing a new license, the same as the charter now provides in cases of conviction of selling liquor to minors of committing a felony. The proposed measure will also provide for the punishment of any person found guilty of purchasing intoxiciating liquor on Sunday.

The revival meeting held with the St. Johns Baptist church by Rev. C. L. Owens of this city was in many ways a successful meeting. It was largely attended and there were many conversions and this new church took a large step forward. While the city at large fleet the influence of the meeting for good. Mr. Owens came back from this revival to undertake a new revival movement in his own church, and in a series of prayer meetings, to be held every evening next week. The plans and purposes of this revival movement will be explanied at the meetings.

At today's session of the circuit court formal orders were handed down as follows: Bridget Grant et al vs O. R.& N. Co, ordered that sheriff remove certain property; G. Wingate vs Frank Patton et al, settled and dismissed; James Finlayson vs Frank Patton et al settled and dismissed; J. H. McKinzie vs Effa M McKinzie, default and order of reference; W. F. Baker vs E. M. Baker et al, plaintiff allowed three days to file answer. The taking of testimony in the case of Lloyd Griffith vs R. A. Price, a suit to recover pay for a steer, was completed and the case given to the jury shorty after noon today but at a late hour this afternoon no verdict had been reached. The balance of the jurors were excused until Monday, March 8.

In yesterdays Budget mention was made of the capture [illegible] two small bear cubs by the Heckard brothers out on the Lewis and Clark. Before capturing the cubs the boys shot the mother bear a beautiful specimen over two hundred pounds in weight from which they got a magnificent skin. The boys disposed of the cubs [illegible] Astoria yesterday for $15.

Shortly after six o'clock last evening the jury in the case against Dr. Peacock in the superior court [illegible] Cathlamet was secured and [illegible] consists of the following members: E. W. Anderson, Peter Gleive, H. Klimp, John Voldt, John E. Rull, J. H. Erp, John Davis, Alfred Holden, F S. Strait, J. W. Suick, Oscar Lutschirger, Alex Moe. The jury was obtained out of the open venire which Judge Wright ordered Sheriff Butler to get from the western end of the county. The taking of testimony was commenced today.

The members of the county court unofficially announced that they will not pay the $4000 additional state tax as fixed by the board of equalization unles they are compelled to by the courts. In accordance with the state law, the state board last January apportioned the state tax among the several counties and Clatsop county's share was fixed at $27,030. Accordingly, the county court in making its estimates of expenses for the ensuing year included this state tax and the tax levy was made proportionately. Now the state board demands $4000 and there is no fund provided for paying it. The latest report from Salem regarding this tax muddle is that the board has increased the assessed valuation of Clatsop county from $8,782,420 to $14,654,282.

After thirty-five years residence in Astoria John Bryce will move his home to Portland within a few days to accompany the members of his family. In his honor a reception was given on Thursday evening in the parlors of the First Prebyterian church that was attended by many of his old friends in addition to the members of the church. A musical and literary program had been arranged and this was followed by reminiscences of years ago which were thoroughly enjoyed espscially when Mr. Bryce told of the first unicycle in Astoria. It was the motive power for delivering goods for the store in which he worked. At that time, he said, there were but two wagons in the town and they were used exclusively in the delivery of wood.

The Astoria Retail Grocers Association held its annual "Love Feast" on Thursday evening that consisted of a banquet at the Occident, much to eat and more talking but the latter was of a light character as there were no set speeches and Toastamster Frank J. Carney surprised each one he called on with their topic. The real purpose of the meeting was to bring together the active members of the grocery trade with those who have investments in the business. Altogether it was a very happy affair and it is the intention to have such meetings more frequently as it is believed that it will be beneficial. Business was not discussed at all and a stranger would not have known that those present were engaged in the grocery business.

Fish Warden McAllister is in the city on a brief business trip in connection with his department and expressed himself as well pleased that the governments of Oregon and Washington had agreed upon the joint fisheries bill and that it had been signed by the governors of both states. He acknowledged that it was not entirely satisfactory or equitable to all interests but he feels assured that it will be strictly observed by all and in this connection he said that he proposes to see that the Sunday closing law in the upper river is as strictly observed as in the lower river. By some accident or otherwise the new law does not change the closing season in the Willamette and Clackamas rivers to conform to the new law yet it empowers the state fish commission to have full exercise over streams not mentioned in the bill, which had an emergency clause. At the meeting of the commission next week Mr. McAllister will bring this matter up and he has doubt but that the commission will place these streams in the same rule as those mentioned in the original bill as far as the closing dates are concerned.

PORTLAND'S ATTITUDE INJURES ALL OREGON

An Open Letter Setting Forth the Transportation Problem of the Columbia River by F. McKercher in Oregon Journal

Portland, Feb. 25—to the Editor of the Journal Your editorial on "A 30 foot channel from Portland to the sea," was good and very entertaining, but kindly permit me to object to the general inference to be drawn from the facts so nicely stated concerning Germany's far inland ports on the River Rhine; namely that therefore the lower Columbia must be deepened for the largest sea going craft.

Germany does not control the mouth of the Rhine, hence, those far inland docks, or none at all, as she would not care to build a great port for the Netherlands, even if a fresh water harbor could be built between her border and the Rhine's mouth.

Allow me to suggest that the most vital question to Oregon and the whole inland empire is not the deepening of the lower Columbia not that Mr. Harriman has us bottled up and does not build into southeastern Oregon, but rather that his present roads are practicing upon us a constant and veritable holdup in not giving to Astoria her inalienable rights, "common point" rates as a Pacific ocean port in competition with Puget sound.

I know that most Portlanders will answer that that [illegible] "a question affecting only Astoria," "none of our affairs," and "not vital to the state," and further that the "water route is always cheaper than rail," meaning thereby that wheat can go by ocean carriers from here to Astoria cheaper than by rail.

Let me make this statement: If Portland and the railroads will be honest toward Astoria, no ship can carry the wheat to Astoria cheaper than rail unless it pay for the privilege, because "common point" rates to Astoria will eliminate the cost of getting it from here to Astoria.

If Astoria is a seaport she is entitled to the same rates as Puget sound ports, and as she is no farther from the center of the wheat belt than Puget sound.

NO MEASURE FOR STATEHOOD

Will be Considered by Present Session of Congress

Washington, Feb. 27—There will be no statehood legislation for New Mexico and Arizona at the present session of congress. At the meeting of the committee on territories today, all the members, regardless of party, in a sensational scene, abandoned consideration of the house bill.

The members of the committee left the room without anyone suggesting further meetings for its consideration. This remarkable act occurred at the conclusion of the reading of the statements, presented by Senators Nelson and Beveridge, charging corruption, perjury and bringing various other offenses against certain officials and leaders of what was termed as the "gang which is in control of the political affairs in New Mexico."

CASHED CHECK ON DEAD BANK

Never Heard of the Oregon Trust & Savings

Vancouver, Wash., Feb. 27—C. H. Keller of the Owl saloon reports to the police that a man giving the name of John Nelson cashed a worthless check on him for $1[illegible]. The check was drawn on the Oregon Trust and Savings bank of Portland, defunct since two years ago.

According to Keller, Nelson represented himself [illegible] a construction foreman for the Portland Street Railway company. The check was made out to Nelson and was signed, as it appeared, by R. J. Flung, who, Nelson declared, was a contractor. Inquiry brings to light the fact that no such person as Flung was ever heard of at the office of the bank's receiver. After securing the money on his check Nelson engaged a room at the Washington hotel but failed to return to use it. He has not been seen since Washington, Feb. 27—Goebel of Ohio has favorably reported to the house the ship subsidy bill as passed by the senate.

NORMALS MAY BE SAVED

Salem, Or., Feb. 27 One of the possibilities of the special session of the legislature is that the members will try to pass some of the bills that were vetoed by the governor. In accordance with the custom and rulings of the attorney-general, Secretary of State Benson will not send the vetoed bills to the special session, but will hold them to be returned to the next regular session.

But this will not prevent the members of the legislature from re-introducing the same measures, passing them as new bills and sending them to Benson [illegible] governor for his action.

It seems quite probable, too, that there will be an effort to pass bills appropriating money to carry the Normal schools through the remainder of the present school year.

... Shooting in Silence ...

Success of Maxim's Latest Invention

Hiram Percy Maxim gave the first public demonstration the other day of his new rifle silencer, the latest of his inventions, before a group of newspaper men in the offices of his firm of counselors in New York city. The silencer reduced the report from the highest powered rifles of this and foreign countries to the noise made by the initial cleavage of the air and the "puck" of the bullet as it struck in a packed sand backstop. The whole sound was no louder than that made by the discharge of an air rifle in an inclosed gallery.

There was on hand in the lawyers' offices a collection of rifles running all the way from the little Winchester 22 repeater to the Springfield 30, the United States army rifle and the most powerful of its kind in the world. Taking the Winchester 22 first, Mr Maxim fired a shot from the naked gun to give an idea of the report. Then he fired with the silencer attached. There was a click about as loud as one would make by snapping the trigger on an old fashioned musket.

"Now," said Mr Maxim, "if you will analyze that noise under proper conditions you will find out that it consists of two noises, one produced by the impact of the bullet, the other by the cleavage of the air. You don't hear the gun at all, although you may think you do. The proof of this comes when you make a test under military conditions, with the target at a sufficient range so that the impact of the bullet is not heard. Then you hear only the swish that comes from the initial cleavage of the air. At the target you hear the bullet strike and wait in vain for the report of the gun."

He went on next to test the silencer with a 22 Winchester automatic. The result was not as good with this weapon, because the ammunition chamber did not remain altogether closed, and a certain report came from the breech of the weapon. But the silencer applied to a Winchester 30 high power sporting rifle reduced its report to the "puck" that an air gun might make.

The same was the case with a six millimeter Mannlicher military rifle, a seven millimeter Mauser, a 32-40 Stevens marksman's target rifle and a Springfield 30, the new United States army rifle. The demonstration with the last gun was particularly convincing. After firing it a couple of times with the silencer Mr. Maxim took a little wooden frame to which was attached by a metallic paper clip one of his calling cards. This card he held by means of the frame immediately in front of the muzzle of the gun and fired it without the silencer. The explosion of the gases not only blew the card to pieces, but shattered the wooden frame and put the paper clip out of commission. Then Mr. Maxim took another card and, having attached the silencer to the rifle, held it in his bare fingers in front of the muzzle. The gun was fired. Mr. Maxim exhibited a card with the "Mr." shot out of it as cleanly as though the bullet had traveled its target distance. The card was not burned and only slightly discolored by the gases.

Mr Maxim explained also that the silencer diminished by about 50 per cent the recoil of a gun on which it was used. He was asked if it could be applied successfully to larger ordnance and replied in the affirmative. Mr Maxim declared that it would be easier to apply the silencer to cannon, up to the largest calibers, than to small arms, for the reason that the element of weight would not be a problem to reckon with.

The Maxim silencer, which is attached to the muzzle of the gun, has the outward appearance of a thin steel tube a little longer and greater in diameter than a box of stick shaving soap. It weighs for the heaviest caliber guns about eleven ounces and for the lighter ones seven or eight ounces. Cut it open and inside one sees ten or twelve little disks or chambers, penetrated somewhat above the center by a hole slightly larger than the bullet which is expected to pass through. The center of the disk is pressed back and the outside edge is rolled over so as to make a thick ring, hollow on the inside.

When the disks are in place in the chamber the effect is that of a reversed turbine fastened to the muzzle of the gun. As the bullet is fired, clearing the silencer without interference because the hole through the series of disks is larger than the diameter of the bullet, the gases accompanying it are caught by the first disk and by virtue of its shape rotated very rapidly. Centrifugal force makes them fly out toward the periphery of the disk inside the rolled over ring, and it is only as they slow down that they can escape into the next disk, where the process is repeated. Thence the gases go into the third disk, then into the fourth, and so on until their force is entirely dissipated.

"It is just like stirring around a wash bowl full of water," explained Mr. Maxim. "You get it rotating fast enough and a hole will run right down through the center to the open escape pipe, but no water will run out."

The silencer is applied to the end of the barrel by means of a thread on which it screws.

The state board of equalization has seen fit to make an unwarranted increase in the assessed valuation of property in Clatsop county of nearly $6,000,000 and it has also increased Clatsop county's portion of this year's state tax by $4000. The question is has the board acted legally? We believe not and do not think that its action will be sustained by any court. It will be noted that the board increased this assessment without giving the people affected or their official representatives a chance to be heard. Such an action is an arbitrary assumption of authority that is without precedent or sound legal basis. It has always been the custom that whenever a county board of equalization meets to consider the assessment roll, it must give due notice so that every property owner can be present or be represented by his attorneys or agents, if he so desires. So it was in the days of the state board of equalization. Notice of its meetings were issued far in advance so that every county could have representatives present. This board however did nothing of the kind and altered the roll as it saw fit. It is hoped that every county, whose assessment and tax have been increased, will refuse to pay the additional amount, at least until compelled to do so by the ruling of the courts.

Of the parcels post movement over which the merchants of the smaller cities are divided in opinion, it may not be incorrect to say that it will count for little difference whether they take one course or the other. Sooner or later, as we contemplate it, a parcels post will come anyway, and to resist it is about as futile as to resist the advent of a trolley railroad when in some particular communities that is not wanted. This is an immense country and the masses probably want parcels post and sooner or later the others must go with the popular tide. The limited parcels post system, that is not opposed by some of the business men, seems to overcome objections of the country merchants because it permits the transportation of parcels weighing 11 lbs or less at a rate of five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound and this low price applies only in a local way, so as not to permit the mail order houses of the cities to go in on equal terms with the country tradesman. As well, however, might the merchants have opposed it as to have opposed the other thing, in the opinion of some people, beause it will merely prove an entering wedge to an unlimited parcels post. Doubtless the proposed plan to discriminate against the city mail order houses would be declared unconstitutional and thus it cannot be long after the introduction of a parcels post before its benefits will be thrown open in equal manner to everybody.—Ex.

FUEL FROM WASTE COAL

A practical means of saving the enormous waste of coal by the present mining methods is reported by John L. Cochrane of the technologic bureau The results of a series of experiments have been compared, and Mr Cochrane reports that coal briquets can be made from slack or waste coal and coal of inferior grades which are not marketed at present. The waste is mixed with 5 or 6 per cent of water gas pitch, then pressed into cakes or bricks.

It has been shown, according to this report, that the briquets furnish more power from less weight in fuel than the regular coal from the same mines. Being lighter in weight than coal, the briquets will serve a good purpose in the navy and also on railroads. It is claimed that the briquets give off less smoke than coal. An enormous quantity of waste coal is cast aside at the mines, and inferior grades are left in the ground untouched. The briquets make valuable what was useless before, and their manufacture will add to our stock of fuel the equivalent of many million tons of coal.

The glass men are opposed to prohibition, while the jug men are for it, and it's a toss-up as to which can carry most weight at the bar of public opinion.

The proposed "civil war officers' honor and annuity retirement roll," to be operative at seventy years, looks like "big cry and little wool" for the veterans.

Ten thousand dollars will be handed the man who flies from New York to Albany in the shortest time. Those who get left will be expected to walk back.

PORTLAND HURTS OWN INTERESTS

Open Letter to the Oregon Journal by F. McKercher

to reach which freight must be carried over a mountain range, seven cars to the engine, but can be brought to Astoria for one third the cost—down grade 75 cars to the engine—the railroads have no excuse for not laying the wheat down at Astoria instead of dropping it at Portland, 100 miles farther inland.

But Portland in the folly and blindness of her utter selfishness does not want this done: the railroad has a veritable snap and does not want to do it; but let Oregonians who like fair play, who desire Oregon's development and Portland's growth, note this, namely:

Ships prefer to load at the sound ports rather than at Portland. They must be towed 150 miles each way between Tacoma and the sea, but only 115 miles each way at Portland.

For some years ships have been charging 1s 3d per ton more from Portland than from Puget sound (owing to prodigious efforts and some concessions on towage by the O. R. & N. Co. this is not now in force, I understand.)

If Astoria could get her rights every cargo of wheat that goes from there will be at a rate to the United Kingdom at least 1s 3d less than from the Sound and 2s 6d less than we have been compelled to pay from Portland for several years last past, for the towage from Astoria to the sea is but 15 miles, the ship would save several days of valuable time, avoid all the risks of river navigation and have several hundred miles shorter sail to every old world port than from the sound.

And this further statement: Had Astoria been given what belonged to her, "common point" rates at the date of the completion of the Astoria & Columbia River railroad, and Portland had then come to her senses and realized that this is a question of the Columbia river versus the sound, and not Portland versus Astoria, and so have made that fine harbor Portland's harbor and shipped from there, not a ton of wheat would today be exported from Puget sound, while in 1908 she exported 14,706,000 bushels, against our 13,411,000 bushess. To say the least, Portland would have been handling each year a vastly greater portion of the wheat than she is or has been handling.

Notwithstanding the fact that the wheat raiser of the inland empire, has for all of these years been mulcted, so that Portland might fool herself and handle only part of what was rightly hers, so that wheat shipments might go from sound ports rather than from Astoria, and so that railroad shareholders might make inordinately large dividends, Portland insists that this artificial and dishonest transportation condition must be perpetuated.

Deepening the Columbia for seagoing craft simply confirms the railroad in this holdup, justifies the wrong to Astoria and the inland empire and will not cheapen frieght rates on any commodityto or from anywhere.

Portland's boom advertising matter says: "Portland's advantage as a transportation center lies in the fact that freight moves on a down grade toward it, thus causing an immense saving in both time and money." This condition may save time, and does save money to the railroad company (and to no one else, but the statement as it is meant to be understood is simply false, for not a ton of freight comes thru the Columbia gorge that does not pay the same freight charge as would be paid were it to go over the mountains to Puget sound instead.

Another claim made in the same issue is "Portland is the only fresh water harbor on the Pacific coast," which not only falsifies the facts, but actually denies to the world the existance of that which would be, (were Portland and the railroads square and so permit its use) one of Oegon's most valuable assets— the finest fresh water harbor on the globe, at Astoria and at the mouth of the Columbia.

Mr. Editor, in this artificial transportation situation, not generally understood by our people because it does not get thru to them in any concrete, understandable form, and in Portland's cowardly attitude toward it, by which she wrongs Astoria and the state and cheats herself, there is something radically and egregiously wrong; and in my judgment The Jonural could not render a larger or more valuable service to a larger or wortheir constituency than by taking the subject under serious consideration and issuing editorial thunderbolts until this gross and cumulative injustice ceases and simple justice and fair play are established; for one may well defy the world to produce the parallel of the present and past selfish, cowardly and cold blooded attitude of a proud and boastful metropolis toward a sister city and an immeasurably better seaport whose prosperity is as essential to the highest ultimate well being of our state and the whole inland empire as is that of the metropolis itself; and time, and no very distant time either, will prove that it is even more vital, to Oregon that this beautiful and capacious fresh water harbor shall be utilized to its full capacity than that a great city shall be built upon the Willamette or at any other paricular spot within her border; for the harbor will be the prime equation in the greatness and the glory of the state, while the city will be, and can only be, but the product, the effect of the wealth and glory of the state and the territory contributary to and served by that wonderful harbor.

Yours for that greater greatness of Portland and the state that can be born only of liberal things and a broad and generous spirit. F. McKERCHER.

WEEKS DOINGS AT SEASIDE, OREGON

The Valentine dance given February 13 by the Pythian Sisters was a very enjoyable affair. A delicious lunch was served during the evening.

About two months ago the Dime Theatre opened a voting contest for the most popular young lady in Seaside. The gold watch which was offered to the lady holding the highest number of votes was won by Miss Mathilda Matheson, who is Seaside's assistant postmistress.

The Seaside Band gave their second annual dance Monday evening Feb. 22. It was one of the successful dances of the season.

Mrs. Margaret Slocum G. C. of the Pythian Sisters paid an official visit to Kinnie Kinnie Temple No 41, Tuesday evening. After the order of business a banquet was served in honor of the visitor. While in the city Mrs. Slocum was the guest of Mrs. C. C. Clark.

O. E. Hunter is in the city this week.

STEAMER WAS ON BEAM ENDS

Officers File Report of Exciting Voyage

Details concerning the exciting voyage of the steam schooner Daisy Mitchell from this port to San Francisco, when she nearly turned turtle, have been received here and give confirmation of the telegraph reports sent out when the craft reached San Francisco. The report states:

"The Daisy Mitchell left Columbia river February 18 a. m., and at 2 p. m. ran into a heavy southeast gale and large sea, with long southwesterly motion. The ship rolled heavily, later the wind chopped around to the southwest, blowing a gale. Headed ship to southwest under slow bell as could not steer a course on account of heavy beam sea and fear of losing deckload. At 4 p. m. the 19th the wind and sea moderated: steered south again; wind shifted to southeast increased to a gale February 20; 5:30 p. m. shipped a couple of seas and ship listed to starboard, almost half the deckload in the water. Water poured into the galley and engine room. Chief engineer notified us he could do nothing down below; got ship around a little and straightened up with wind and sea on starboard side and let go the deck lashings to save vessel filling altogether. Jettisoned about 50,000 feet lumber and set up the lashings again. When we dumped the lumber overboard we were off Umpqua river; 11 a. m. wind shifted to northwest, blowing a gale, accompanied with a large southwesterly sea, carrying the same to port; no damage to ship."

AMUSEMENTS

"THE KERRY GOW"

On Tomorrow evening Arthur Cunningham and his splendid company in the beautiful Irish play, "The Kerry Gow" will be the attraction at the Astoria theatre and from appearances there will be a big audience in attendance. Arthur Cunningham is a splendid actor, as well as a great singer. His big buoyant personality fits into the sentimental Irish heroes as though they were written for him, and the manner in which he sings the old Irish ballads is no small factor in his success. The play of Kerry Gow was written by Joseph Murphy that veteran actor, who himself starred in it from one end of the country to the other for over thirty consecutive seasons. It is full of the real Irish spirit, with a generous sprinkling of healthy comedy, and allows the new star exceptional opportunity which he takes full advantage of. The play is picturesquely mounted and costumed and nothing has been left undone to make the production complete.

"UNCLE TOMS' CABIN"

Next Monday Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company should be greeted with a record crowd when the curtain raises. It is doubtful if "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will ever grow old or fail to fill theatres, if the opening performance of the Stetson company at the Grand theatre last evening is any criterion, for one of the largest midweek audiences of the year greeted that company. The Stetson company has visited the Grand regularly each season for several years, and the production is always about the same, and always pleases, for it seems to be the aim of the management to keep their company at the same Standard. The scenic effects are good and are well handled, and the singing of the darkies is a pleasing feature. Salt Lake Herald, Nov. 13, 1908.

THE INTELLIGENT USE OF
Newbro's Herpicide
RARELY FAILS TO PRODUCE THE MOST GRATIFYING RESULTS

Miss Della Knight
The prominent American actress, whose photograph is shown above, writes as follows:

"I have found nothing to equal Newbro's Herpicide. It keeps the hair from falling and frees the scalp from dandruff. An occasional application leaves the hair delightfully fluffy."
(Signed) Della Knight.

READ THIS LETTER

"Enclosed please find coupons for soap and comb with order for 88 cents, for which please send the above articles.

"I have used Newbro's Herpicide for two years and think an article so meritorious should be well advertised and widely used, for it is a boon to all womankind. I am giving you my experience and if you think it likely to be of interest, you are welcome to use it as you think best. for I have derived such great benefit from Herpicide that I would like others to know of it.

"When I began its use two years ago my hair was only two inches long and very thin, the result of four years residence in India, the intense heat of the climate having ruined my hair. I tried everything in Europe and America without benefit, until I tried Herpicide. I am delighted with its effect and my friends never tire of admiring my hair: it is long, soft and as silky as a baby's hair, not a gray hair to be seen, and my hair was quite gray before I used your incomparable remedy. I do not think the praises of Herpicide can be sung too loudly or too long. Several of my friends are using Herpicide on the strength of my recommendation."
Richmond, Va. (Signed) MRS. S. A. LEE.

NOTE—Herpicide will not darken gray hair, and we do not want anyone to spend money for Herpicide in the belief that it will. Herpicide will stop falling hair, but if the hair that falls is gray the new growth will also be gray. In this particular the above case is remarkable

Send 10 cents in stamps to The HERPICIDE COMPANY, Dept. L., Detroit, Mich., for sample and booklet

We have nothing but choice steer beef, prime mutton, pork and veal. We do not buy the refuse of old cows, bulls and stags of the Portland Stockyards that will not stand inspection and ship them to Astoria with a substitution of burlap for fat. Of course, 99 out of 100 buyers don't know the difference when such meat is cut up and laid out on the counters. Ask your doctor if that kind of meat is wholesome. There is just as great a difference in the quality of meats as dry goods, dress goods, or anything you wear; but you should be more particular what you eat. The Columbia Trust Co. of Portland has just issued a neat folder illustrative of Columbia Beach, the new addition recently put on the market by that company. The property is located a short distance southwest of Warrenton and faces on the Pacific ocean.

Three carloads of lumber which the county purchased from the Westport Mill Company, have been shipped to Gearhart Park and on Monday work will be comenced on planking the road from the ocean beach thru Gearhart Park to a connection with the county highway.

Coroner Gilbaugh was in Cathlamet on Friday, having been summoned as a witness in the case of Dr. Peacock who is charged with performing an operation on the late Miss Longtain that resulted in her death. He simply presented a verified copy of the testimony taken before the coroner's jury in this city and a jar containing a specimen from her body at the time of the inquest.

A good joke is told on one of the saloonmen who was indicted by the grand jury for selling liquor on Sunday. The indictment in this case was returned with those against 27 other individuals and firms and the defendant pleaded guilty with the balance and paid his fine although the offense alleged in the indictment was committed after he had disposed of his interest in the saloon. This morning he learned his mistake, when he ascertained the date of the infraction alleged in the indictment, and endeavored to have his money refunded but of course that was impossible.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Astoria Electric Company was held this afternoon but only matters of a routine character were under discussion. All the members of the board were present and there was some discussion about the extension of the road to Alderbrook but no definite action was taken.

The law enacted by the legislature at its recent session providing for the appointment of an assistant judge in this judicial district will not become effective until the latter part of May and no appointment for the position can be made before that time. While several candidates are spoken of for the position, the ones most prominently mentioned are J. A. Eakin and Charles H. Abercrombie.

Henry Campion, secretary of the Port of Portland Commission, was in Astoria on Friday to make additional preparations for the absorption of the pilotage and bar service. What he accomplished is not made public but it is undertsood that he secured an option on the pilot schooner Jospeh Pultzer and agreed on contracts with several of the bar pilots for their services at a figure that was satisfactory to both interest. The commission expects to conduct the business with about six bar pilots.

The new room in the McClure school building will not be ready for occupancy until March 8 was it is found impossible to have some of the plumbing completed before that time. The arrangements of the different grades will then be changed considerably, to the best advantage of the High school grades, and the new room will be occupied by the First grade, of which Mrs. Fulton is the teacher, and she will have a much better opportunity to conduct her successful work.

On next Monday, March 1, the closed fishing season begins and all classes of gear must be out of the river at noon on that date, as well as from its tributaries. Fish Warden McAllister, who is still in the city says that his deputies will interpret the law liberally and the fish caught on that date and up to that hour will be protected but the gear must be removed from the water. He says that his object is to help the fishermen, when he can do so legally, and it is his hope they will co-operate with him in the enforcement of the law, his deputies having received instructions to that effect on all parts of the river and its tributaries in Oregon.

The city council will meet in regular session on Monday evening and among the new matters to come up will be ordinances providing for the improvement of Commerceil street between Fourteenth and Seventeenth, providing for the improvment of Thirty-ninth street between Franklin and Grand, and providing for the improvement of Eighteenth street, between Exchange and Grand. The ordinance granting a franchise to the Oregon Coast Railway Company will probably come up for final passage, altho the ways and means committee has not yet filed its report on the measure. Several amendents to the ordinance are spoken of but some of the councilmen favor passing it, as introduced and as it was passed by the former council.

As was announced in Friday's Budget, the city attoruney is drawing an ordinance by request for introdcution at the coming session of the council, providing that a second conviction on a charge of selling liquor on Sunday shall revoke the defendant's license and also providing for the punishmennt of a person found gulty of purchasing liquor on Sunday. This latter provision will, of course, gullify the entire measure as without the testimony of persons who purchase the liquor, a conviction on the charge of violating the Sunday closing law would be impossible and no witness can be compelled to testify that he purchased liquor, as by giving such testimony he would be incriminating himself.

The circuit court jury in the case of Lloyd Griffith against R. A. Price, a suit to recover $90 for a steer, which the defendant was alleged to have appropriated to his own use, was unable to reach a verdict and was discharged about 10 o'clock last night. The jury is said to have stood eleven to one, in favor of the plaintiff, from the first ballot. During today's session of the court formal orders were handed down in a number of cases as follows: Laura A. Shea vs Henry Lynch, motion to make complaint more definite and certain overruled and defendant allowed until March 6 to answer; H. A. Larson Spande vs Western Life Indemnity Co., motion to strike out portions of complain overruled; E. S. Snelling et al vs C. W. Flanders, motion to set aside service of summons sustained.

The county court will convene in its regular March term on next Wednesday and before adjourning it will probably decide upon what road improvement work will be undertaken during the coming summer. The court has practically decided to let the hauling of crushed rock for the Nehalem road at certain prices per yard the price to be changed for each additional quarter of a mile of hauling. This system is considered more satisfactory than employing teams by the day.

Mrs. M. S. Copeland has returned from a business trip to New York, where she bought her spring stock of goods. She says that she found the weather very disagreeable during the entire time she was away as the winter there has been much worse than usual. Her observation was that the ultra rich and fashionable people there dressed very extravagantly and a protion of these appeared to want to display themselve on the street but the average woman on Broadway was no better dressed than on Commercial street in Astoria.

This afternoon the circuit court grand jury returned an indictment against Peter Nissnen, charging him with the larceny of an accordion, and the defendant was allowed until Monday to plead. The grand jury will complete its labors and its final report this evening. Up to the present time it has returned 73 true bills and one not true bill and there is a possibilty of several more indictments being retruned this evening. The fines collected thus far for violations of the liquor laws are $1400 for selling liquor on Sunday, $700 for selling liquor without a license and $550 for conducting "blind pigs" in "dry" precincts, with possible others yet to hear from.

The Railroad Commission has fixed March 16 as the time for conducting investigations and hearings as to the reasonableness of grain rates on the Elgin branch, the Pilot Rock branch, the Condon branch, the Heppner branch, the Shaniko branch and also on the main line of the O. R. & N. Several hearings have already been held regarding the grain rates on the O. R. & N. the testimony thus far having been taken and at shipping points in Eastern Oregon chiefly in behalf of the shippers. The hearing on March 16 will be held in Salem and the evidence will be chiefly on behalf of the railroad company. This will probably be the final hearing.

What is practically the last run of smelt for the year has arrived in the Cowliz river and they are being caught by the tons during the past few days. Two boat loads of fish arrived in Astoria this morning and as the price was low they were disposed of readily to dealers and indivduals. They are beginning to get soft after having been in fresh water. The best are those caught near the mouth of Columbia, directly from the ocean. Their habit at sea is more obscure than almost any deep sea fish that comes in to fresh water of spawn; as long as known the Cowlitz has been their principal spawning ground and with all that are caught there annually the runs show little if any decrease.

K. J. Hermunstadt, who conducts a cigar store and barber shop in Alderbrook, was arraigned in the circuit court this morning on six indictments returned by the grand jury and charging him with violating the state local option law by selling liquor in Astoria precinct No Seven. Prosecuting Attorney Tongue said the defendant was ready to plead guilty and that there were some extenuating circumstances connected with the case as the defendant and been given wrong legal advice. He added that he talked the matter over with the grand jury and the concensus of opinion among the members of that body was that Hermunstadt should pay whatever fine the court saw fit to impose on the first indictment and that sentence on the balance be suspended during good behavior. The court directed that pleads of guilty to each indictment be entered. He then sentenced the defendant to pay $400 fine on the first indictment and on each of the other five indictments sentenced him to pay a fine of $500 and serve 30 days in jail, but that execution of the sentence on the latter indictments be suspended during good behavior. Hermunstadt immediately paid the $400 fine and departed with a total of $2500 and a sentence of 150 days in the county jail hanging over him. Last evening Louis McDonald and N. Staples pleaded guilty to two indictments on charges of selling liquor on Sunday and were fined $40 each which they paid.

R. B. Magruder, manager of the Columbia Agricultural company, was in St. Helens Wedneday for the purpose of having recorded 50 documents conveying several thousand acres of swamp land in the neighborhood of Claskanie. The company now owns approximately 10,000 acres of this character of land, which it intends to begin reclaiming in a few months by the construction of levees, ditches and dams, for which purpose a fleet of dredges is now being built, the cost of which, when completed will amount to about $75,000. The reclamation and development will require the expenditure of not less than $40 per acre or $400,000 for the entire tract. It is the purpose of the company, as fast as the several districts are reclaimed, to divide them into small farms and either lease or sell them. The work for reclaiming each tract will proceed step by step. The levee will be built along the low banks, raising them to the elevation of the high banks. The tide gates and pumping plant will be installed simultaneously. Calculations have been carefully made showing the percentage of protection the levee will afford to the lands during the process of construction.
